"My brother Cleve, another man and myself have for a long time been trapping along the Red river. On Thursday Cleve and I trapped on the Minnesota side while our partner trapped on the Dakota side. Towards evening we met a man from whom we got some liquor. After having a few drinks together, we secured a good sized bottle and after leaving him continued to indulge until we were good and drunk and felt quite hilarious. Cleve was walking along side of me, three or four feet away. I carried the gun on my arm, cocked, as was always my habit of doing, when in some way I must have touched the trigger. The shot went off and completely tore away Cleve's lower jaw. He fell to the ground without a sound or making a move. Seeing what had happened and realizing the position I was in, alone with my brother, without a witness to how the accident happened, I became sober enough to realize that I would be accused of murder, which meant either hanging or penitentiary for life. Taking my brother for dead and seeing what I was up against, I decided then and there to do away with myself. I sat down, placed my gun between my knees, leaned back, took a stick and poked the trigger. Bang went the shot, tearing away a part of my lower jaw and tongue. If I had not leaned back so far I would have been done for. The next thing I remember was Cleve shaking me by the shoulder. Neither of us were able to speak, but we made signs, pointed to a light and headed for the place. Doctors were telephoned for and we were taken across the Red river, placed in an auto and conveyed to the Drayton hospital."

BEGINNING OF END IN VOTING CONTEST

Special Vote Offer Affords Excellent Opportunity for Candidates Who are Behind.

May Mark the Turning Point in the Race for the Valuable Prizes.

Here is an opportunity for those contestants who are not leading in the race for the piano offered as the grand prize in the Gazette voting contest to get into the running. The candidate who hopes to win the grand prize must take advantage of the offer made this week. If she does not do so she will be left behind. This offer marks the beginning of the end of the contest and affords an opportunity for the really active workers to show what they can do. The offer is one of special votes on subscriptions. The candidates sending in the following amounts between now and 6 p. m., Dec. 0, 1910, will receive official ballots for the number of votes set opposite the amounts:

25	250,000

At first thought some may say that this offer should apply to subscription money already paid in. But that would simply be giving to the present leaders in the contest an added advantage, while the offer as now made gives all an equal show—and those who are behind have an excellent opportunity to even up the score. If a contestant will put forth the effort that the leaders did to get where they are now she will find herself among the leaders Dec. 0. It is worth trying.

Some may be holding back because they do not wish to show their strength. You may still do that and come in on this offer. When your subscription money is turned in you are given ballots which may be cast or held as you wish. You may hold as many as you wish until the last day of the contest.

More votes will probably be issued on the offer made this week than all other offers combined because it is the big opportunity for all candidates to get into the running.

The Gazette cannot give out lists of names of persons, subscribers, non-subscribers or delinquents, but can and will give working candidates a report of the standing on the subscription books of any person or persons they may name and inquire about. It will be to your interest to take advantage of this arrangement.

Zelia Quesnelle	484,388
Mayme Laurent	445,919
Mildred Sortedahl	266,040
Lucie Crompe	186,746
Emma Sauve	110,690
Alyce Wichterman	78,888
Agnes Anderson	61,208

Boy Kills Companion.

Late Saturday afternoon August Klasse was shot and killed accidentally by his brother Sefup while with Gustaf Berg, a young Norwegian just over from the old country, they were drilling as soldiers under the direction of the latter at the Klasse farm home three miles north of Lenghy.

Sefup during the drill suddenly pulled the rifle he was carrying, a 30-30, to his shoulder, and not knowing it was loaded, pulled the trigger the bullet piercing his brother's breast which resulted in his death an hour later.

Deceased was twenty three years of age and Sefup eighteen, and they are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Klasse. The brother who did the shooting is prostrated over the terrible tragedy.—Plummer Pioneer.

DEER ARE STILL VERY NUMEROUS

C. O. Kankel of Terrebonne Secures Two Very Fine Specimens.

There are still a few deer left. Depite the fact that every hunting party from this city has been fortunate enough to secure from one to three of the animals, reports show that deer are still numerous in southern Red Lake county. During the past week a dozen or more deer have been killed, although no hunter has as yet over-stepped the limits of the law.

Last Friday, Dr. Wilkinson, Herbert Findeisen, Fred Westphal and Peter Starken returned from the eastern end of the county with three fine deer. They had been out several days.

Sunday proved the banner day, three deer being brought into town. One party composed of Wm. Krueger, George Cyr, John Drier and Oliver Belair, hunted the country just east of town and succeeded in bagging two deer. Henry Belair, Don Guerin and Fred Cyr, hunting in the same country, secured one deer and saw several others. On Monday, George Cyr, Oliver Belair Henry Belair and John Drier were out again, returning in the evening with a fine large buck.

Probably the record for this season in this section of the state at least, is held by C. O. Kankel of Terrebonne. Mr. Kankel succeeded in killing a buck and a doe. The buck weighed about 350 pounds and possessed a fine pair of antlers. The horns had 15 points each and Mr. Kankel refused $100 for the head. The doe weighed 287 pounds and was equally as fine an animal as the buck.

Of course there have been other parties out—and other deer shot—but they have not reported as to their success. Tracking is a little poor on account of the thaw of the first of the week but as soon as more snow falls, hunting parties will again take to the woods. The season closes next Wednesday and 1910 will be long remembered by woodsmen as the best big game year for a long, long, time.

John E. King, who was in town last week for the transfer of his half interest in the Gazette, said that he is undecided about his plans for the future. He is considering several propositions, anyone of which looks inviting. His term of office as state librarian expires January 1, and he is now looking about for a place to light. It is a safe bet that Mr. King will find his groove, fit into it and fill it.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON DID NOT WEAR FROCK COAT LIKE ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S.

St. Paul.—Minnesota's people object to a statue of John A. Johnson, their much lamented governor, garbed in the kind of frock coat that was fashionable in the days of Abraham Lincoln, but not now. This is one of several reasons why the commission having in charge the purchase of a memorial to Johnson rejected the models submitted by Andrew O'Connor, a sculptor of Paris. Some of the other objections to O'Conner's model is that the eyes are sunken too deeply; that the nose is too short; that Johnson assumed a more loosely knit and less aggressive pose when speaking; that the symbolic figures in the background were not symbolic.

CO. OPTION LOSES

REPUBLICANS RULE 3 TO 1

Have 131 Members to Democrats' 45; Populists and Socialists One Each and Prohibitionists 5.

	Rep.	Dem.	Pro.	P.O.	Pop
Senate ...	42	19	1	..	1
Totals	131	45	5	1	1

St. Paul.—The 1911 Minnesota legislature shows a slight gain for the minority parties over the last session, but the Republicans will have 131 members out of 183 on joint ballot for election of a United States senator, assuring the re-election of Moses E. Clapp. The Republicans also retain a two-thirds majority in each house.

County optionists have lost their fight for the new legislature. They still claim control of the house by a narrow margin, but admit that the senate is against them. The Anti-Saloon league now announces its intention to ask the legislature to submit a county option law to vote of the people in 1912.

Senators-elect claimed for county option are: Nelson of Fillmore, Cook of Mower, Thoe of Dodge, Cashman of Steele, Moonan of Waseca, Putnam of Faribault, Haycraft of Watonwan, Bedford of Nobles, Lende of Lyon, Dale of Lac qui Parle, Benson of Nicollet, Peterson of Meeker, Johnson of Chisago, Hackney of Ramsey, Elwell, Dwinnell, Wilson, Fosseen and Wallace of Hennepin, Odell of Kandiyohi, Froshaug of Swift, Rustad of Traverse, Gunderson of Douglas, Sageng of Otter Tail, Hanson of Norman, Sangstad of Polk and Sundberg of Kittson, twenty-seven in all, but one or two more are claimed by the county optionists as sure to stand by them when the vote is taken.

House members elected who are claimed for county option are: Farley of Houston, Conley of Olmsted, Rustad and Frankson of Fillmore, Crane of Mower, McMartin of Dodge, Harding of Faribault, Davies of Watonwan, Warner of Cottonwood, Whitting of Lyon, Skartum of Lincoln, Johnson of Yellow Medicine, Peterson of Lac qui Parle, Holmberg of Renville, Simpson of Meeker, Klemmer of Rice, Boothroyd, Anderson and Voxland of Goodhue, Webb of Pine, Rines of Kanabec, Burnquist and Orr of Ramsey, Kunze, Palmer, Fisher, Kneeland, Washburn, Campbell and Nolan of Hennepin, Dunn of Mille Lacs, Davis of Sherburne, Lee of Wright, Warner of Aitkin, Ferguson of Carlton, Stone of Hubbard, Johnson of Kandiyohi, Knutson of Swift, Spooner of Stevens, Peterson of Grant, Lee of Pope and Anderson of Douglas, Johnson, Putnam, Lindberg and Nelson of Otter Tail, Converse of Becker, Sulerud of Norman, O'Neill of Red Lake, Holten of Polk, Robertson of Marshall, and Mattson of Roseau. This makes fifty-two.

Most notable of the county option successes in the state was the election of John Saugstad to the state senate in Polk county. His defeat of Senator A. D. Stephens is a remarkable feat in politics, as it was performed by the use of stickers, pasted on the ballot by each voter.

Senator Stephens is one of the best known men in the state, a leading banker and the chief sponsor for the branch agricultural school at Crookston. Though sentiment in Polk county is for county option, he had great personal strength. Mr. Saugstad is a farmer and school teacher, and has served creditably in the house at the last two sessions.

Senator Albert Schaller of Hastings, the dean of the legislative bodies, will break all records for continuous service. He wins the election in Dakota county over Magnus W. Brown, republican, and if he serves out the term will have twenty years in the state senate without a break.

Ole O. Sageng won re-election to the senate in Otter Tail county easily, but his side partner, Elmer E. Adams, was defeated in his independent run for the house.

Some Election Surprises.

County optionists were more surprised over the result in Freeborn county than anywhere else. That county was covered more thoroughly with county option arguments than any in the state. It was the theater of John Lind's speech, and P. J. Youngdahl spoke twice to Albert Lee meetings. Two years ago the prohibitionists elected T. E. Nohls to the house. This year they expected to land him and his running mate, but both were defeated by several hundred. H. C. Nelson, county option democrat, was also badly beaten for the senate by B. N. Anderson.

Four probable aspirants for speaker were elected. The list includes J. A. A. Burnquist, St. Paul, John G. Lennon, Minneapolis, H. H. Dunn, Albert Lea, and George MacKenzie, Gaylord.

There will be a close contest in the house Republican caucus between the county option element and the anti-option men. As matters stand it looks to be about a tie.

TAFT SEES CANAL

PRESIDENT IS GETTING VALUABLE INFORMATION ABOUT THE BIG DITCH.

LABORERS ASK INCREASE

Reported That Canal Will Be Finished by 1913, Two Years Earlier Than Anticipated—Formal Opening Later.

Panama, Nov. 16.—President Taft's visit is bearing fruit in the matter of first hand information secured which will help him to deal with the problems involved in the construction maintenance and control of the Panama canal.

Officials on the ground are urging the president to recommend to congress a single headed government for the canal zone and full and permanent government control of the waterway and supply depots. President Taft is gratified over results of his three days' inspection. Today he went deep down in Culebra cut giving special attention to this most difficult part of the construction.

The canal will be completed Dec. 1, 1913. This information was given to President Taft today while he was inspecting the famous Gatun dam, on which he spent several hours. The official date of opening remains Jan. 1, 1916, Lieutenant Colonel Goethals desiring one year in which to train canal tenders and to get the machinery working smoothly. Ships in the meantime will be granted the privileges of the canal, but at their own risk of delay incident to inexperienced operation.

President Taft was surprised to learn that the zone was not included in the operations of the postal bank law and that some of the workmen believed Wall street influence had robbed them of the benefit of this legislation.

Taft heard delegations of mechanics and laborers who are asking higher wages based on increases in the United States. The conditions here, however, differ from those in the United States, as the government commissary has been successful in preventing the high cost of living that has been general elsewhere. It is doubtful that increases in wages will be paid in the zone.

Tonight the president will leave United States territory to enter Panama City, where he will be a guest of President Arosemena at a banquet.

DIED OF CHOLERA.

Steamer From Naples, Italy, Said to Be Infected Ship.

New York, Nov. 16.—With two deaths during the voyage from what is thought to have been cholera and a sick list of nine, the steamer San Giorgio arrived here today from Naples and Palermo and was detained at quarantine for bacteriological examinations in the cases of the sick passengers.

The bodies of the two victims, one child of 2 years old, who died Nov. 12, and the other the child's mother, who died early today, were buried at sea. The two fatalities were reported on the vessel as due to acute gastroenteritis.

There seems to be no doubt that they were cholera victims, although Health Officer Doty declined this morning to make an official announcement. All the cases were in the steerage.

First Division Reaches England.

Portland, Eng., Nov. 16.—The first division of the American battleship cruising fleet which includes Rear Admiral Schroeder's flagship, the Connecticut, arrived here this morning. While coming from Tor bay the American warships passed the second division of the British home fleet which has passing out. Salutes were exchanged. The visiting vessels also made the customary salutes as they entered Portland harbor.

Vice Admiral Sir William Henry May, commander of the home fleet, will entertain the American admiral and the captains on his flagship, the Dreadnaught, tonight. The mayor and the corporation will give a banquet to the American officers, while a fancy dress ball and other entertainments for American and British bluejackets have been arranged.

May Build at Washington.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 16.—A set of resolutions which have been presented to the American Federation of Labor convention were read at this morning's session. Reports of committees were also made. Because of a visit to one of the largest breweries, but one session will be held.

The delegates before adjournment will act on the recommendation of the executive committee that the federation erect a building in Washington, D. C. for its own use.

Tolstoi Has Chance for Life.

Ashtapova, Russia, Nov. 16.—Count Leo Tolstoi's illness was diagnosed by his physicians today as creeping inflamation of the lungs. The condition of the aged author is critical but not hopeless. He experienced an increased temperature during the night but late today the doctors said his temperature had fallen to 98.6.

Railroad Commissioners Meet.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Almost every state in the union was represented at the annual convention of the National Association of Railway commissioners, which opened at the interstate commerce commission rooms today. The sessions will occupy three or four days and will be devoted to discussions and action on many different technical railroad matters. Chairman Knapp of the interstate commerce commission, delivered an address of welcome to the convention, following which a number of committee reports were submitted.

Rise of Seine Causes Alarm.

Paris, France, Nov. 15.—The river Seine rose at the rate of a half centimeter an hour today. An official statement that the maximum flood would be reached on Thursday next has not reassured the riverside dwellers in this city and in the suburbs who see the waters advancing slowly in the streets bordering on the stream and fear another disaster.

Cooper is "Not Guilty."

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 16.—Robin Cooper, charged with the murder of Sen. E. W. Carmack, was found not guilty today.

REDUCTION OF FIVE CENTS

MEAT OF ALL KINDS NOW LOWER IN PRICE.

Result Is Attributed to Enormous Crop of Corn Raised This Season.

St. Paul, Nov. 15.—Reports were numerous today from all parts of the country relating to the reduction in prices of beef and pork within the last week. All reports show a reduction of from 2 to 5 cents. Pork shows the greatest drop. In Duluth prices went down from 23 to 18 cents. In New York pork dropped from 22 to 18 cents a pound.

Vegetables in some places are reported 10 to 20 per cent lower while poultry is quoted 1 to 3 cents lower. Butter and eggs declined slightly, but at most points remained about the same.

Market men attribute the relief from high prices to the enormous corn crop and consequently low price of the cereal.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Prices of beef and pork are falling.

Within the last week the price of beef has been reduced between 4 and 5 cents a pound by the meat packers. The price of pork has declined about 3 cents from the price of 18 and 20 cents a week ago, and wholesale meat dealers say that mutton, veal and other products of the packing houses will take a downward turn within the next few days.

New York, Nov. 15.—Reports from various parts of the country indicating a fall in the price of meats are reflected by similar reports from local dealers. They say the decline has already begun, the wholesale price of beef having gone off on an average of 1 cent in the last week.

One of the leading local dealers said that sirloin steak that had brought 24 cents a pound was now selling at 22 cents.

Cincinnati, Nov. 15.—Meat prices have dropped sharply here, bacon leading with a decline of 5 cents a cheaper. Cattle and sheep and their products show a similar decrease.

Count Tolstoi is Dying.

Tula, Russia, Nov. 15.—The condition of both Count Leo Tolstoi and Countess are reported today as critical. The count appears to be succumbing to the fever brought on by the mental distress and exposure incidental to his voluntary exile from home, while his deserted wife is dying of a broken heart.

The mind of the great novelist scarcely could have conceived a more tragic ending of two lives which have been interwoven for half a century. Tolstoi, overcome with fatigue while attempting yesterday to continue his pilgrimage from the monastery at Shamardino to Caucusus where he had hoped to spend his last days in the Tolstoian colony on the shores of the Black Sea, lies in a miserable hut at a railroad flag station of Astapova at which point he was removed from the train when his physician and companion, Dr. Makovetsky realized that a continuation of the journey would result in certain death.

Today Makovetsky and the consulting physicians declared that the condition of the aged man was most serious.

Pinchot to File Brief.

Washington, Nov. 15. — President Taft, responding to the request of Gifford Pinchot, the former forester of the United States, and his brother Amos Pinchot, for permission to submit a brief on the question of issuing patents in the Cunningham Alaskan coal land claims, has informed Pinchot that he may submit such a brief and advised him to forward it to the executive office before Dec. 1.

Pinchot was thus informed in a letter authorized by President Taft, written by the secretary to the president, Charles D. Norton, and made public today. The letter is in reply to a recent communication to the president pressing the fear that the interior department will recommend the patenting of the Cunningham claim.

Prepare to Welcome Mexicans.

Rock Springs, Tex., Nov. 15.—As the result of a report that a body of 300 armed Mexicans were marching upon this town, cowboys and ranchmen from the surrounding country armed with rifles and revolvers are pouring into Rock Springs this morning.

The ranch people of this section are so anxious for a combat with the Mexican band that they probably will start on a march this afternoon to meet the alleged invaders.

Battleships Reach Europe.

Brest, France, Nov. 15.—The fourth division of the American battleship fleet, comprising the Georgia, Nebraska, Rhode Island and Virginia arrived here today. As the squadron entered the roadstead salutes were exchanged.

The municipality has arranged a series of receptions for the officers. Special trains will take the blue jackets to Paris in groups of 1,000 each.

Upheaval in Pacific.

London, Nov. 16.—Scientists here report the depths of the Pacific ocean are in a state of great upheaval. Heavy earth shocks have been recorded during the past two days, apparently occurring in the regions of New Zealand.

Advance in Rates Thwarted.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The attempt of about fourteen railroads operating between the Mississippi and Missouri rivers to resume advances in rates already condemned from Washington was thwarted by a suspension order announced by the interstate commerce commission today in what is known as the Purham-Hunna-Munger case of Kansas City.

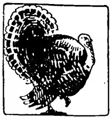
The suspension involves a long standing fight between St. Louis and Kansas City jobbing interests and affords an immense traffic from the east. The ultimate decision will be of vital importance.

Auto Collides With Trolley.

New York, Nov. 16.—Seven men were injured, three so seriously that they probably will die, when the automobile in which they were returning downtown from the Walsh-Keller boxing bout in the Bronx borough early today, collided with a trolley car in Harlem. None of the occupants of the automobile escaped injury.

Senator Clay Buried.

Marietta, Ga., Nov. 16.—Funeral services for the late United States Senator A. S. Clay of Georgia were held here this afternoon.



The BIRD of the SEASON

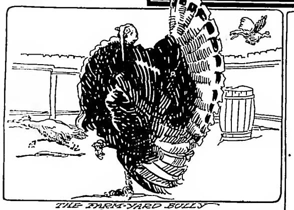
by Frank Finn

THANKSGIVING without the turkey is almost unthinkable. For this great bird, which has become inseparably associated with the season of Thanksgiving, is peculiarly an American bird and as much an American institution as Thanksgiving day itself. Within the reach of poor and rich alike, the great national bird is the principal feature of the feasting which is an important part of the festivities of the day.

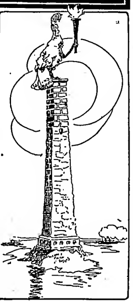
The fact is, of course, that turkeys don't come from Turkey, and were unknown before the discovery of America, in the north of which continent the wild turkey still roams in unrestrained freedom, though not, alas, in undiminished numbers.

When the enterprising Spaniards began to explore the resources of the new world that Columbus had opened out for them, they found that the natives had tamed a big bird, which they regarded as a sort of peacock; and it was not long after the discovery of America that the new bird made his appearance in European poultry yards.

Great must have been the disgust of the original occupants of these when the invader appeared. For one thing he was much bigger than any of them, and could look down on them in the most literal sense. He was also fully aware of the importance of his expensive personality and lost no time in impressing it on all and sundry. The peacock, who had reigned supreme both as an artist in posing and as a table delicacy—the Romans used to talk of having "ham and peacock" as we would speak of ham and turkey—found himself confronted with a rival who made up for inferiority of plumage by displaying with much greater energy and frequency what he had got, and by a play of expression which nothing in the animal world can equal.



THE FARM-YARD BULLY



EMBLEM for AMERICA

It is all very well to talk of the wonderful mobility of the human countenance, sensitive to every change in the emotions of the soul; it is nothing to the turkey cock's. See him elongate his nose till it comes down to his chest, and observe the number of double chins he can produce to add to his importance if he wishes to impose on a presumptuous rooster or to impress a fair young turkey pullet.

Then, as to blushing, there was no debutante ever floated on the social sea who could blush as our gobbler can; his complexion plays through all shades between livid blue and ghastly white to a lively scarlet, and, taken in connection with the changes in his features, makes him a quick-change artist of the first order, before whom the chameleon collapses ashamed.

If anybody wants to practise drawing portraits, let them get hold of a turkey gobbler for a sitter, and if they can succeed in getting his features properly fixed on canvas I will undertake they will find anyone else's easy in comparison.

But it is not only in the display of his charms that the turkey proclaims his advantage over the world of our feathered dependents; his stentorian gobbling arrests the attention of all.

The said gobbling, by the way, has given rise to the only bit of folk-lore about the turkey that I know of. Being an American, he is too modern to have legends associated with him as a rule; but Indian Mohammedans profess to hear in the turkey's voice a blasphemous mockery of their brief creed as spoken in Arabic. Hence, when a turkey has to be killed in India, the native takes a cruel pleasure in executing it by cutting out its impious tongue; and so widely spread is the belief, that a little native boy, a retainer of an animal dealer in Calcutta, replied to me, when I asked him—just by way of trying his knowledge—the name of an American curassow bird that was in the yard, "That is a turkey, sahib, but it does not repeat the creed!"

What with strutting and gobbling himself, and with proving congenial to the gobbling process as conducted by human beings, the turkey fairly bounced the poultry world in general, and actually ousted the goose, the most ancient member of the poultry association and the savior of Rome, from popular estimation as a holiday dish. The turkey is a good type of the product of his native continent in more ways than one, and some Americans, impressed by the fact that the nation's emblem, the white-headed eagle, is not only a "bird of freedom," but a freebooter, robbing the respectable fishhawk of his catch, and generally playing the needy sharper, have claimed that the turkey would better represent the United States, and he certainly better suits the ideals of an eminently practical people.

Go-ahead as he is in his methods, however, the turkey gets "scored off" now and then. A century or so ago, when geese and turkeys used in the absence of present-day facilities for transport to be driven long distances on the roads, a couple of noble sportsmen laid a wager as to the speed of turkeys and geese over a course which it would take a matter of days to traverse. Each nobleman was provided with a little flock of four of the fowls of his fancy, and of course betting was high in favor of the turkeys. And at first they seemed to justify their backers, for they soon stalked away from their waddling rivals and left them far behind. So things went on all day, but as dusk came on the aristocratic turkey herd found his charges becoming passive resisters, and displaying an incurable desire to go to roost—no amount of coaxing would propel them farther. Meanwhile the despised geese, with whom night and day were not of any very great importance, waddled sedately past, and ultimately won the race with plenty to spare. It was pretty nearly the old tale of the hare and tortoise over again, in fact.

I have known the farmyard bully pretty well bested on two occasions myself—tragically so, in fact. One of the most valued possession of the Calcutta animal dealer I have mentioned was a fawn-colored European-bred turkey, whose color much commended it in his eyes, since turkeys of this hue seem not to be found in India. This privileged fowl used to circulate about his master's chair, strutting and gobbling; and though he often resented the entrance of natives into the compound he respected Europeans, a piece of discrimination one does not expect in a being of such limited intelligence as a turkey. Another inmate of the menagerie was a young cassowary, and he wrought the turkey's downfall; for, coming into the compound one day, I missed the ginger-hued gobbler, and asked what had become of him.

"Ah, my poor turkey!" said the dealer; "he gave cheek to the cassowary, and the cassowary kicked him and burst his bag!" It sounded as if the impudent bird had been collapsed like a toy balloon, but I did not inquire into details.

The dealer, however, consoled himself with a pair of local turkeys or the ordinary dark color, and the gobbler was beginning to take the place of his deceased predecessor in the economy of the menagerie, when he also met his end from a far different adversary. This was a gamecock of some Indian breed, the most blackguardly looking fowl I have ever set eyes upon, with bristling eyebrows, a bulldog type of beak and pillar-like legs, his athletic proportions set off by very tight-fitting plumage. However, he was only a fowl, thought the two turkeys, and with Oriental indifference to the rules of fair play they both set out to tackle him together. The gamecock acquitted himself in a manner worthy of his breed, and bowled them over with one blow apiece. Perhaps his natural magnanimity—for chanticleer is seldom anything but a gentleman—made him lenient with the hen; at any rate, she was only "knocked silly." But he gave her husband a fair knock-out blow; gripping his wattle with the bulldog bill, he brought the columnar shanks down on the bulky adversary's neck with such force that, when I saw the defeated bully he was sitting in a state of paralytic collapse, and not long after ingloriously expired.

Such is the part the turkey plays as a tame bird—a pretentious and pushing person who occasionally collapses ignominiously. Nor are his aspect and career as a wild bird different, for he is one of the few creatures which have altered very little in domestication; and though he may be regarded as the premier bird of America, and gains a certain amount of dignity and consideration thereby, there is a comic element in his performances and misfortunes which robs him of the dignity of the feathered nobles of the older world. The blackguardly tendencies which, seen in domestication, have caused some people to suggest that he is called a turkey because he behaves like the proverbial unspeakable Turk, are in full swing in his wild ancestor, who is altogether born in sin. His wife, or wives—for he is an inveterate polygamist, even in his primitive condition—have to keep their infant poults out of his way, or he will crack their little heads for them; and when he conquers and slays a rival gobbler, he tramples him when he is down and done for. His courtship is every bit as absurd in the wilds as it is in the farmyard, and ancient turkey dowagers emulate his absurdities in strutting to win his regard, though the pullets maintain a proper modesty of demeanor. Moreover, the wily hunter brings about his downfall in ways which make him look undignified—no other bird is lured to his end in such queerly discreditable ways.

One is to call him up within shot by imitating the voice of her he loves for the time being. On a small pipe, often made of a turkey's own drumstick bone, the sportsman imitates what he inelegantly calls the "yelp" of the hen turkey, and the infatuated gobbler, lured by the soft invitation, is often decoyed within range. To his credit be it said, however, he displays a fine ear, and if he detects anything suspiciously insincere in the accents of the concealed charmer, it will be a clever impersonator who gets him to answer another matrimonial advertisement for that season at all events.

Another plan is the turkey trap, which is a pen made of logs and entered by a trench, across which there is a bridge just inside the entrance. A train of corn leads the turkeys into this, and when they are inside and have eaten up a [illegible] corn, it never occurs to them to stoop un[illegible] beneath which they passed in, but [illegible] wander round and round till the[illegible]s and gathers them in—a proceed[illegible] not argue any great amount of intelli[illegible] their part.

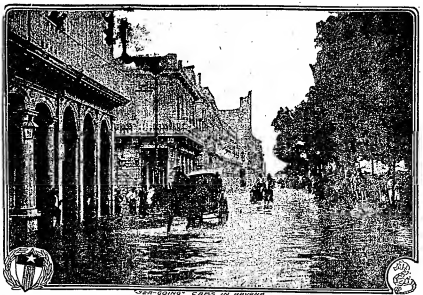
One can even get a turkey by hunting him with a dog, circumstances being favorable. The said circumstances are the fact of the turkey's being a little way off from their woodland retreat, feeding out on the prairie, and one's dog being a greyhound; moreover, one's horse should know how to go. The turkey, even when wild, is not a long-distance flier, but he has not sense enough to remember this when he finds his foes between him and the wood, and tries to fly straight away from the pursuing hound instead of turning about overhead and coming back to cover. After about a mile he has had enough of flying and takes to his legs, only to find that his four-legged opponent is close behind, and he must perforce take to the air again. But this time his flight is not for so long a distance, and he is ignominiously "run into," a victim of misplaced confidence in himself as an aeroplane.

Let us be thankful that we have got the turkey as he is, with all his comic extravagances, and that in one respect, at all events, he can challenge comparison with many worthier people: his last appearance is always creditable, and no one can deny that he cuts up well!

Cause for Thankfulness.

Thanksgiving day is the one day in the year when the nation turns to heaven in thanks for its preservation. The life of the nation is the principal consideration; not only its life, but its health, and its preservation in that condition in which it was established by the fathers of the country. Men can thank God for their own accumulations or supplicate him to lighten their burdens, but that is not the purpose of a national thanksgiving. The nation itself, the political structure which was framed and handed down—it is the preservation of this for which the people are to be thankful.

STREETS OF HAVANA LIKE RIVERS



"SEA-GOING" CABS IN HAVANA.

HAVANA, CUBA.—This city is only beginning to recover from the disastrous effects of the recent violent storms that swept the entire island. For days the streets of Havana were under water and it was almost impossible for the people to get about in the business part of the city. The "deep-sea-going cab" of song became a reality, and these vehicles did a rushing business. Many rafts also were constructed on which passengers were conveyed across the flooded thoroughfares.

FEASTS THAT KILL

Horace Fletcher, Arch-Apostle of Hypermastication, Talks.

Details Dire Effects of Christmas Dinners and Thanksgiving Turkeys—Finds That Poor Are Good Eaters.

Chicago.—Christmas and Thanksgiving turkey, cranberry sauce and the long list of victuals that go with these staple articles have been responsible for more loss of life, energy and ability to the people than all the great battles of history.

Thus does Horace Fletcher, arch-apostle of hypermastication—meaning, in plain English, the world's foremost advocate of the theory of thoroughly chewing food—denounce overeating, especially the extent to which the practise is indulged in on national holidays.

Not only that, but the Sunday dinner is more directly blameable for "Blue Monday" than is the proverbial "night before," in the opinion of the man who made chewing an art.

Clad in pale blue, striped pajamas, with his feet bare, Mr. Fletcher faced a small gale blowing into the open window of his room at the Congress hotel the other day with enviable impunity. True, it was not snowing, but the sun had barely left Michigan City on its way to Emporia, Kan., and the atmosphere was more or less frigid. The teeth of the interviewer chattered.

Mr. Fletcher, who is as radical an advocate of "fresh air" as he is of scientific mastication, was immune from the breeze. He was pink, and smiling.

Although sixty-one years old and snow-haired, he is an athlete in superb condition. He attributes this to his system of living and of chewing food. He weighs 170 pounds and has eaten fewer breakfasts in the last twenty years than any hobo in Clark street.

As a result of publicity given to his "right-living" propaganda, Mr. Fletcher says the words "Fletcherism," "Fletcherize," and "Fletcherite" have been recognized by lexicographers and will be "real words" in the dictionaries.

"It means to digest thoroughly," said the sexagenarian. "A manuscript on morals may be 'Fletcherized.'"

Mr. Fletcher was loath to believe that the "supermen" of ages to come would be able to scorn food and derive his nourishment from plain air.

"I would hate to think of that coming to pass," he said. Then he confessed he enjoyed what he did eat. "Still, it might be done if a man would get on the windward side of a soup kitchen, and take deep, regular breaths," he added.

The secret of correct living and right living is possession by a greater percentage of poor persons than by "malefactors of great wealth," Mr. Fletcher said. He seemed anxious to correct an impression that he was a votary of the midnight rarebit debauch.

"Rarebits are all right if a person wants them and if properly cooked and masticated," he said, "but I take them perhaps two or three times a year."

Mr. Fletcher is firm in his belief that "economic eating" will revolutionize society.

CURE MADE BY SUGGESTION

Girl in Cataleptic State Now Talks and Scientists Will Work on "Muscle Memory."

Paris.—The local papers publish the story of a servant named Josephine who has fallen into a cataleptic slumber and cannot be awakened. She is at present in the hospital at Alencon, where she has been since January 22 of this year. Josephine, who is thirty-two years of age, for the last 13 years has been subject to nervous fits, which occurred every few months. She was prostrated completely after these attacks and was incapable of working for several days. Her spirits were affected and she became convinced that she would never work again. As her character became more somber her nervousness increased.

On June 11 last, after a day in which she exhibited unusual mental agitation, she fell into a sleep from which she has not yet recovered. The anaesthesia is generalized. Hearing, sight and taste are suspended. Only the sense of smell remains in a certain measure. The eyelids frequently tremble convulsively, while at intervals the patient gives utterance to inarticulate groans.

Dr. Paul Farez, professor at the school of psychology, is interested extremely in this remarkable case and is using his best efforts to convert the pathological sleep into an hypnotic sleep in which state the patient would be more accessible to suggestions of a therapeutic efficacy. His labors in this direction have been crowned with success.

When she fell into the catalepsy Josephine was completely speechless. Now she articulates in a loud voice—the effect of suggestion. Responding to the same influences she sits up without assistance in bed. Under the guidance of the doctor her faculties return little by little. But her muscles have lost their most elementary notions of movement. Her medical attendant now is working upon the "muscle memory." He believes that presently the dreamer will be called back by a scientific miracle from the limbo where her mind wanders, and that she will be restored to active life.

MEN UNFIT TO WED

So Declares Memphis Beauty Who Divorced Philadelphian.

Mrs. Keith Donaldson Compares Northern Man With Those from South, Especially Texans—Foreigners Inferior.

New York.—Mrs. Keith Donaldson, at the ripe age of twenty-four years, will never, no, never, marry again. She says so herself. The ideal man does not exist, she declares, and until he is produced she will devote herself to the care of her child, the accommodating courts of Reno having relieved her of her husband, a former Philadelphian.

Two years of married life have taught her the wisdom of the ages, and no man need apply, unless—yes, there's a string to the declaration. There is a chance for a Texan. "For," says the lovely divorcee, "my fortune came from the great and glorious state of Texas, and if the same state can produce a man handsome, strong, chivalrous and steady, I may be prevailed upon to change my mind."

Mrs. Donaldson was Miss Evelyn Willis Hunter of Memphis, Tenn. A great beauty, she was much sought after in every city, but the dashing Philadelphian carried off the "million dollar bride," and the wedding took place in New York, April 25, 1906. The couple went to live at the St. Regis.

Differences arose between the young pair, and a separation followed. Then came the divorce, and Mrs. Donaldson went abroad. She has just returned, with her views of men unchanged, and, if anything, more firmly rooted in her mind.

It was rumored that she was engaged to Robert Dula, but this she denied emphatically. "Why," she declared, "he is only nineteen, just a nice boy, and the brother of my friend, Mrs. Townsend Horner. I shall never marry again.

"I returned from abroad the other day, where I met several men, but none approached my ideal of what a husband should be.

"When abroad I studied the continental gentlemen and found him away back in the field when it comes to racing with southerners—and especially Texans. He does equal northern men, though, I must admit, but the northern men, either easterners or westerners, are not fitted to be husbands. I think every northern father should send his son south for a finishing education in gallantry. He will learn much that will make him fitted to compete with the hundreds of foreigners who come here to New York and break into the families of the rich."

CAN'T COPYRIGHT CITY NAME

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—This city's efforts to have its name copyrighted has failed, owing to the decision of the register of copyrights in Washington that the city has no legal right to the sole and exclusive possession of its name.

The register of copyrights says in his decision:

"We beg to say we cannot possibly think of any way in which you could secure for the city of Wilkesbarre the exclusive right to its name by any proceedings under the copyright law. There does not seem to be any principle of law which insures to a city the exclusive right to its name. The post office department has authority to name a post office whatever it sees fit."

Mail Clerks Know Nicknames.

London.—Addressed from London to "Whipshire, Devon," a letter has been delivered without delay at Tiverton, where one hundred years ago rogues and vagabonds were whipped round the town at the tail of a cart—hence the name Whipshire, almost unknown to the present generation.

TAKES MUCH PRIDE IN FARM

There Miss Helen Frick Entertains Groups of Working Girls for Two Weeks' Rest.

Pittsburg.—All summer long groups of girls, everyday girls, have been entertained by Miss Helen Frick in her summer vacation home on the famous north shore. Near the end of a suburban street car line running through Beverly, Mass., stands the comfortable farmhouse where this only daughter of Henry Clay Frick has gathered the working girls of many New England cities for a two weeks' vacation. They have come from the cotton mill towns, from cities where the shoe factories are the chief industries and from the great carpet factories, all of them working girls of various nationalities. Daily Miss Frick has gone over to the farmhouse from Eagle Rock, the Frick mansion at Prides Crossing, a couple of miles away, often making two and three visits a day, so deep an interest does she take in this two weeks' outing for young girls of the New England cities.

The vacation house stands several hundred feet back from the street, a stone wall, over which vines run riot, separating the lawns from the highway and the trolley tracks. Painted white and shaded by fine old trees, it is an attractive place.

A large open hall from which the stairway winds to the second story, is the principal feature of the first floor. There in the early summer and as autumn comes on a fire burns in the large fireplace in the evening, for the east wind makes the evenings and night cool along the north shore. The hall is furnished with plain mission furniture, and after the supper is over and before going to their rooms the girls tell stories or sing.

The dining room, which opens from the hall, is a long apartment furnished in light colors, and the big family of sixteen girls surrounds the one long table at whose head is Mrs. Fannie Seifer, a well-known worker at both the Central Young Women's Christian association in Chatham street and the Lawrenceville branch in Butler street in this city.

The girls' rooms are very pretty and each girl has a room to herself. A dainty paper covers the wall, each room being different. On the floor is a pretty light blocked linoleum. There is a white enamel bedstead with dresser and chair, also white, and simple white curtains hang at the windows.

On the side of the house farthest from the street is a large, roomy piazza with settees, swings and hammocks, where the visitors spend the greater part of their vacation

Big Animal Ambulance.

New York.—The largest automobile ambulance ever built for the transportation of animals has been put in commission by the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It is a gift by Mrs. Russell Sage and has three decks and a capacity for carrying 200 dogs and cats.

Enemies Necessary

Have you enemies? Go straight on and mind them not. If they block up your path, walk around them, and do your duty regardless of spite. A man who has no enemies is seldom good for anything—he is made of that kind of material which is so easily worked that it resists nothing, while every one who thinks for himself, and speaks what he thinks, is always sure to have enemies. They are as necessary to him as fresh air; they keep him alive, active. A celebrated character who was surrounded by enemies used to remark. "They are sparks which, if you do not blow, will go out of themselves." Let this be your feeling, while endeavoring to live down the scandal of those who are bitter against you. If you stop to dispute with them, you do but as they desire, and open the way for more abuse. Let them talk—there will be a reaction if you perform your duty, and hundreds who were once alienated from you, will flock to you and acknowledge their error. Follow this advice, and you will never have cause to regret it.—A. F. H.

Railroad Wireless Stations.

The Union Pacific Railroad company is erecting a number of wireless stations along its line for the purpose of augmenting its regular telegraph service, and in this manner it is hoped to establish a means of communication which will insure a continuity of service which might not be expected from either alone. The stations being erected will cover the states of Kansas, Nebraska and Wyoming.

One Thing Needful.

"How was the day's fishing?"

"A failure."

"Didn't the fish bite?"

"There were plenty of fish, but Jim Culver dropped our only flask in a ten-foot pool and then we all came away."

Red Lake Falls Gazette

BY C. R. C. BAKER

Printed Every Thursday at Red Lake Falls Minnesota.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$1.50 Per Year in Advance

The change in the proprietorship of the Gazette, the retirement of Mr. King, will make little apparent change in the paper, since Mr. King has had opportunity to give the paper little of his attention during the past several years and the present publisher has had direct supervision of the publishing business.

Under the partnership Mr. King had control of the editorial page while the junior member of the firm attempted to keep the pay envelopes filled and attended to the details of the business. Gazette readers will now probably expect something of a change in the editorial policy and in that they will probably not be disappointed, for nothing is more certain than that men will disagree on public questions.

A statement that the Gazette is to be an independent paper in the future would not describe the situation. A truer statement would be to say that the paper will not be a political party organ. It is not to be understood that the Gazette will refrain from the discussion of political questions at all times, but politics is not to be the business of the paper. As so-called political issues become public questions they will be open to discussion and they will undoubtedly have the editorial consideration that the limited capacity of the publisher will make possible.

Public men and measures and political issues are proper subjects for newspaper discussion, but there is no more reason why the publisher should make his business the propelling power for a political dirt train, than that the grocer or butcher should do so. This is the position taken by a large majority of the papers in the country at the present time and has resulted in cleaner and stronger editorial influence.

The publisher of the Gazette has been connected with the paper for so long that the statement made above can scarcely be called an introduction. However, a few words in a personal vein will be in keeping with the occasion. Two years have been pleasantly spent in this beautiful little city. The surroundings are pleasant, the people congenial, and—we're glad we're here. The aim will be to make the paper a better representative of Red Lake Falls city and the county and it is expected that that result will be accomplished. This can be said without questioning the known ability of the retiring member of the firm, for Mr. King has had little time and opportunity to give his best effort to the paper. It is not inappropriate to say—and the desire to do so is impelling—that the business association with Mr. King has been a pleasant experience. He has used the mind of a big man in all of his transactions. He will have no more sincere well-wishers in his future undertakings than the publisher of the Gazette and the members of the force.

C. R. C. BAKER.

For a name as a political asset, how does Adolph Olof strike you?

Come on out, Teddy,—the country's big and fine—and be a cow-puncher statesman again.

Indiana will be compelled to get along without its Beveridge—and so will northern Minnesota.

Perhaps the Minneapolis police force wanted to have the back yard cleaned before the Caroline Bartlett Crane tour.

The enforcement of law without discrimination often serves as a great leveler. It is Poor Lo—and me, too, now—in the Indian country.

A very unfortunate result of the Democratic landslide is the defeat of Senator Beveridge. But Beveridge, like Roosevolt, will be heard from again.

"Considering the name he bore Tom O'Brien made a magnificent race for the supreme beach," says Bob Dunn in his Princeton Union, and Bob ought to know.

Jim Gray says he'd rather lose fighting the good fight than win any other way. And there's another consolation. All of the office seekers are interviewing Governor Eberhart.

Under the new order of things Paul Pry's gossipy letter will not be found in the columns of the Gazette. But, then, Paul had not been with us for some time, anyway, he having gone on a long voyage, embarking Nov. 8.

Bro. John King of the Red Lake Falls Gazette, will, it is understood, relinquish his position as state librarian after January first.—Greenbush Tribune.

Relinquish nothing! John's going to quit.

Cass Lake and Bemidji, the old rivals for all good things and bad, are at it again. Cass Lake had made a noise like a big place on the map and had declared war against the federal government, when Uncle Sam's men quietly withdrew and started a vigorous assault on the Bemidji dram shops. Now the Cass Lakers are green with envy and intoxicated with highly elated spirits—but nothing stronger.

Theodore is only waiting. That he is guilty of inactivity is alarming of course, but it must be remembered that he never was licked before—to a frazzle. Theodore had run the country for seven years and had run it his way in spite of the protests of the big fellows in New York. That job completed, he went to Africa and drove the lions into the sea. On his triumphal tour through Europe he had the potentates side-stepping and scraping and he told the Johnnies where to head in. And then he came back to tackle the Wall street crowd in their private preserves. That was too big a job for the limited territory. Teddy should spread himself out over more space. Will Teddy come back? He never went away. He's only waiting.

COADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Eberhart's lead over Gray for governor will be in the neighborhood of 75,000. What are "the wild waves saying," Mr. Duluth Herald? The "rubber stamp" governor seems to have made a clear and strong impression.—Greenbush Tribune.

"In my opinion we have seen the last of Theodore Roosevelt as a political power of any great importance in this country."—Halvor Steenerson.

Nothing of the kind. It was known eight months ago that the Republican party in New York was in for rebuke. The result of the election in that state was fore-shadowed by the retirement of Aldrich and Hale from the senate and by the Maine election in September. Mr. Roosevelt stepped in to save the situation, and he did his best to stem a tide that was far too strong for any man to stop. It was Ballingerism and Aldrichism, and other instances of money control that the voters in the east struck at, and not Roosevelt. Political purification is just begun, and Roosevelt will carry it forward in the nation, and be a leader for the cause of the people and inspire honest men to consecrate themselves in the service of their country.—Rosean Region.

In all probability the good roads amendment has been defeated through the ignorance or indifference of the voters. What is needed in this state is a kindergarten election school instead of referendum.—Princeton Union.

VALLEY NEWS.

At a meeting of the Marshall county development association held last week five delegates were elected to go to Brainerd next month to attend the big meeting and boost for reapportionment.

The Taralseth company, whose big department store at Warren was burned, will rebuild.

Rosean county's exhibit at the state fair cost $700—and it was worth the price. That Rosean county exhibit has been talked about a whole lot. That's just the kind of advertising Red Lake county needs. Red Lake should get into the game.

Arne Steenerson, a nephew of Congressman Steenerson was accidentally shot by a companion, Ole Brekke, last week. The two men were hunting near Warroad when the rifle carried by Brekke was accidently discharged, the bullet passing through Steenerson's abdomen. The physicians say that the wound is not a dangerous one, strange as that may seem.

The Bemidji brewery worked nights and Sundays to fill its orders before the lid was screwed on tight.

Congressman Steenerson has received assurances from the general land office at Washington that the people of the fire-stricken area of northern Minnesota will be permitted to sell the dead and down timber this winter. This will afford much relief to the settlers and hundreds of thousands of dollars will be saved.

In a Quandary.

The doctor had looked at the patient's tongue, taken his temperature, felt his pulse and was at the point of leaving the room when he paused to say to the sick man's wife, "Madame, in addition to your giving the medicine I have prescribed I wish you would see that every morning your husband gets a shower bath."

The woman looked worried. "But, doctor," she propounded anxiously, "what am I goin' to do the mornin's we don't have no showers?"

Blowing Flowers.

When amateurs speak of flowers "blowing" they are not using a mere vulgarism. They are speaking real old English. In the early tongue the verb "blowan" was used to indicate the opening of flowers. Instead of "blow" being a corruption of "bloom" it is the other way about. "Blossom" comes from the same root. We do not grow the costard apple nowadays, but our forefathers set great store by the sort and bought it eagerly in the streets from the "mongers." From costard monger to costermonger is a short step. Hawthorn, too, has its interest. The old form of haw was haga, which means hedge. Hawthorn is therefore simply hedge thorn.—London Graphic.

"REAPPORTIONMENT FIRST" IS SLOGAN

Annual Meeting of Northern Minnesota Development Association at Brainerd

The annual meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association will be held at Brainerd the first week in December and will be attended by delegates from practically every county. These delegates will start a vigorous campaign for better roads, better protection from forest fires, more money for schools, better methods for handling the sale of timber lands, but the most strenuous demand will be for reapportionment. "Reapportionment first" will be the slogan of the big bunch of delegates.

They will not be satisfied to have the bill passed reapportioning the state in 1914. They want the law to go into effect at the next election. This will mean that the senators who were elected for four-year terms at the recent election, will be up again in two years. Some opposition is expected from the newly elected senators, as it is believed many will not favor voting themselves out of office. It is confidently expected, however, that there will be enough votes outside of these members to pass the bill as they want it.

The Dairy Cow.

The dairy cow does more than bring financial success to the dairy farmer. She makes him a better citizen than he would otherwise be. Her influence upon home conditions is a most pleasing contribution to those factors which are responsible for the changed conditions which prevail in the farm homes of today. Thousands of these homes are now characterized by comfort and happiness where formerly they were blighted by drudgery and unhappiness.

Better financial conditions have contributed to this change, and the dairy cow has been in no small measure responsible. She has contributed in still another way. The dairy cow teaches kindness. Her owner soon learns that only by treating her kindly can be secure the highest possible returns from her, and she responds quickly to kind words and proper care. Her disposition is one that the human family might well emulate. She is patient and long suffering, acquiescing mutely in the arrangements made by her owner for carrying on the dairy business, striving at all times to repay him for every effort made for her care and comfort.

The members of the family, as they come in contact with her kindly disposition, are influenced for good. As they appreciate the financial benefit to come from caring for her well they take a deeper interest in her. In doing so they unconsciously cultivate those qualities which make them better citizens.

The dairy cow—the prototype of man's best friend—is wielding a greater influence than she is generally credited with. She has always been found in the front ranks in the march of civilization and no agricultural country can long prosper without her. She is a potent factor in the upbuilding of such a country, financially and socially, and a wise people will appreciate her and encourage the industry of which she is the foundation.

Curious Apache Belief.

The Apache Indians' religious belief prevents them from committing murder in the dark. If a dozen Apaches should discover a man sleeping by his campfire at night no amount of money would hire them to attack him until the sun came up. They believe that if they kill a man at night their own souls will walk in eternal darkness forever. Knowing this curious superstition, hunters, scouts, trappers and others traveling through the Apache nation in the old days moved about during the night and lay by in some safe retreat during the day.

Not at All Abashed.

Work under a woman of the type to which Miss Prissy Allen belongs comes very close to being what the forefathers would have described as "a purifying trial." "Miss Allen," says Ike Bodwin in Joseph C. Lincoln's book, "Partners of the Tide"—"Miss Allen, she bought the last of my huckleberries. Then she wanted to know if I wouldn't mow the front yard. We had some dicker 'bout the price, but I fin'lly agreed to do it, so she showed me where the scythe was, and I started in.

"And I declare, to man," continued Mr. Bodwin excitedly, "if she didn't stand on the front steps and watch me like a dog trying to locate a flea, jumping on me every minute or two to tell me that she thought I'd cut this part 'most an inch shorter'n I had that part,' and so on.

"Fin'lly I got sick of her nagging, and I said, just to shame her:

"'If I'd known you were so particular I'd 'a' brought my spirit level along.'

"Said she, 'There's one that used to b'long to father out in the barn.'"

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect. This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S. and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S.S.S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

MRS. LUCY GOODING
Pollock, La.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S.S.S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

VALUABLE HORSE STOLEN.

Was Taken or Jumped From Freight Car.

The Great Northern railroad is minus a fine $2,000 Percheron stallion, and determined efforts of police, sheriff and section men between Crookston and Warren for 36 hours has been unavailing.

The horse belonged to James Compton, who was shipping it from Ashby, Minn., to Pembina. The animal came up in a car on the fast freight, 405, Thursday evening. The train was to stop here an hour and a half, and bolting the car door Comptan went over from the yards to get something to eat. His train started before he expected and he caught the caboose and determined to ride there the balance of the trip.

When the trainmen were at Warren, it was noticed as they were inspecting the cars that the seal on this one was broken and the car door open. Conductor Keeley at once discovered this was the car the valuable horse was in and with Compton an investigation was started.

The horse had had two snaps attached to heavy straps attached to his bit, and these were missing and Compton demanded that two immigrant cars headed for Canada be searched, which was done, but no trace was found of either the straps or of any of the contents of Compton's grip, which had been broken open and a portion of the contents taken. The car floor showed marks of the horse as he slipped when being taken or jumping voluntarily from the car.

The section between Crookston and Warren were at once notified and made inquiries everywhere, but heard nothing of the animal, nor did the police or the sheriffs notified and the matter remains a great mystery.—Crookston Times.

A Life Picture

Two Who Began and Ended Friends

By H. D. CLEAVER.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Robert Spooner and Lars Gibson at five were going about with their arms around each other's neck; at twelve they enjoyed boys' sports together; at eighteen they conferred as to what field in life's work they should enter.

The bond that drew them together was a dissimilarity of disposition. Spooner was bright, impulsive, daring even to recklessness. He would easily fly into a passion and was quick to do penance for his acts while under its influence. Gibson was of a very equable disposition. His amiability was never seriously interfered with and seldom ruffled. These complimentary dispositions welded their hearts when they were children, and the affection born of their tender years was never permanently broken.

Both about the same time secured situations in different mercantile houses. Spooner was very quick to learn and endowed with great natural energy. The consequence was that he advanced rapidly. Gibson was slow in his motions, not over quick to understand, always willing to do what was required of him, patient to a fault and quietly persistent. During these early years of their career Spooner would confer with his friend, complaining of what he called the stupidity of those immediately over him, chafing because he found it difficult to make them understand that he discovered ways of doing things quicker, plainer, more correctly than they. Gibson would say:

"Be patient, Bob. Your natural ability will win in the end, whereas if you try to go too fast you may get a backset that you will be years in making up."

"I know you're right, my boy," Bob would reply. "You're always right about everything, but it's mighty hard to see things going wrong when a suggestion from me would right it and I not make the suggestion."

"How do you know they would appreciate it? And wouldn't they be liable to tell you to keep your place and mind your own business. If you were in their place would you listen to suggestions from them?"

"I listen to suggestions from them! Not much!"

"All things come to those who wait."

Bob Spooner could not help feeling himself a better man than his friend in everything except patience, gentleness, endurance. He did not expect Lars to make much headway in the world; indeed, he was ambitious to make a success for himself that he might share it with the man he loved. It was not long before Spooner broke away from his employers and set up for himself. He had no capital, but had a capacity for inspiring confidence. He succeeded from the start.

Both young men married. Spooner wedded a girl who saw in him a means to acquire what was the wish of her life—social prominence. Gibson married a girl who loved money for money's sake rather than what she could acquire with it. Mrs. Spooner spent all her husband's income. Mrs. Gibson exerted herself to prevent her husband from giving away all his family did not positively require. From the time of their marriage their wives stepped into their shoes and enacted the balance of their lives for them. No, not all; at the end they acted for themselves.

It was their desire that their wives should feel as warm a friendship for each other as was theirs. Spooner, with his natural enthusiasm, expected this; Gibson, with a certain longheadedness or horse sense, knew that it could not be. There was nothing to bring the two women together—indeed, there was that to drive them apart. Each wife was jealous of the influence exerted by her husband's friend. "It is singular," Mrs. Spooner would say, "how you can see so much in that dull fellow. You are more capable in every way." And Mrs. Gibson would say, "Your friend Spooner looks down on you; he considers himself vastly your superior."

Spooner made money so fast that the very rapidity of his accumulations accelerated his accumulative desires, just as a man owning an automobile that will do forty miles an hour desires one that will do sixty. One morning the newspapers announced the failure of a large and long established banking house. It was the signal gun for the opening of a commercial panic. The house of Spooner & Co. went down in the crash, and the head of the firm was obliged to take the benefit of the bankruptcy law.

For two or three years values shrank. Gibson, who had saved—or, rather, whose wife had saved—considerable money, saw an opportunity to buy property cheap and made investments which when the financial pendulum swung to the other extreme made him rich. Meanwhile Spooner was freeing himself from the wreck of his business and when he had done so found himself more than forty years old, without the physical energy of youth with which to make a new beginning and without a dollar of capital.

His old friend called on him and said:

"Bob, I can let you have $20,000 on a nominal interest and without security. I would double it; but, you see, my wife and children have their claim on me, and I don't feel that I have the right to do more."

Spooner grasped his friend's hand, but said nothing for a time, then told Gibson he would consider the matter. When Mrs. Spooner heard of the offer she advised her husband to accept it, but showed such antagonism to the donor that Spooner resolved to decline the loan. Indeed, the sum was not large enough to put him on his feet as he wished, and he preferred to manipulate certain banks with which he had done business to raise twenty times the amount. He failed in this and was obliged to take a subordinate position in the employ of another.

Gibson was now very prosperous. He had never made money fast except during the recovery from the panic, when the values of the property he had bought expanded as rapidly as they had contracted. His wife set up a carriage and two or three automobiles. The couple purchased the Spooner home that Spooner might redeem it when again able to do so. But as time passed it did not appear that Spooner would ever be able to do so. Had it not been for the influence of Gibson's wife he would have yielded to his affection for his old friend and offered to deed the place back to him.

And now came one of those combinations of circumstances calculated to drive apart instead of weld together those who love. Robert Spooner as a young man had desired to accumulate partly that he might help the friend whom he looked upon as his inferior. He now saw that inferior in a position to help him. Had he been uninfluenced he might have stood the strain occasioned by jealousy. But Mrs. Spooner, disappointed in not being able to retain the grip she had secured on society, smarting at seeing the man whose influence over her husband she had disliked successful while Spooner was a failure, began a series of innuendoes against Gibson. These had no affect at first, but, being followed up pertinaciously, at last infected the subject on whom she worked.

Finally Spooner, seeing a rare opportunity, made a desperate effort to interest certain men with capital, succeeded and with one of these brilliant strokes for which he had formerly been remarkable made a fortune. As soon as Gibson heard of the fact he sent a note to his friend offering to sell him his former home at the price he had paid for it, which was about half its present valuation. But the poison was in Spooner's blood, and he replied curtly that the place would not now be commensurate with his altered fortunes.

From that time there was a continued effort on the part of the Spooners to flaunt their position in the face of the Gibsons—that is, on the part of Mrs. Spooner. What her husband did was inspired by her. But this Gibson didn't know, and he felt his old friend's antagonism keenly. The Spooners grew richer, and the richer they grew the more they snubbed the Gibsons. Mrs. Spooner's chief desire seemed to be to make them understand that while they had thousands the Spooners had millions and that there was as wide a difference in the social position of the two families as there was in their financial position.

And so it came that the two friends drifted apart. Both retired from business, and both were old men. Neither had any use for the money he had accumulated beyond a bare living. Whatever enjoyment there was in wealth was derived by their families. Friends had dropped away, and the old men were companionable with no one. One evening while Mrs. Spooner was entertaining a house full of guests her husband, letting himself out through a back door, walked into the street. He felt the desolation of a homeless man.

Passing a cafe that had been in the same location for half a century, where he and Gibson had in their youth met for a bite, a glass of beer and to talk over their affairs, he was seized with a melancholy desire to go in and sit in the old familiar seat. As he approached the stall he found it occupied by an old man. He was about to pass on when he heard his name spoken. Turning, he saw the veteran in the booth looking at him intently.

"Bob!"

"Lars!"

They sat side by side, as they had done when boys just entering upon their careers, remaining for a time hand in hand like two lovers. The past was not referred to.

"Lars," said Spooner, "here we are in the place from which we started, successful in the end and unable to enjoy the results of our success. The only marked effect it has had has been to separate us. What use was there in the struggle after all?"

"Without the interest we took in it we would have always been what we are today—men without life. Our children are enjoying it, or at least they think they are, but I doubt if their lives have the intensity in them that ours have had. We love our wives and them, but there is a different affection which they cannot supply—it is that which we feel for each other."

The place had run down since they were there as boys, but it was all they required. They met often during the remainder of their lives in that old booth, before which a curtain could be drawn to shut them from the view of others. One night a waiter, entering to tell them that the closing hour had come, found them sitting hand in hand, both dead.

He Came by Freight.

Big Bill Edwards was born in Lisle, an upstate town in New York.

When big Bill was little Bill a village character ran amuck through the place one afternoon, and the village constable arrested him. There was no calaboose in Lisle, and the constable locked his prisoner in a convenient freight car that stood on the siding.

When the man awoke next morning he was halfway through Pennsylvania on his way to New York. It was a through freight, and he never did get out until he landed in the yards in Jersey City, nor did he ever return to Lisle.

The incident made a deep impression on Bill's mind, and he decided to travel himself some day. He did, and eventually he landed as boss of the street cleaning department in New York. The first man who applied to him for a job was the hero of the freight car adventure.

"Hello, Bill!" said he. "How did you get away from Lisle? Did they lock you in a freight car too?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Work.

Let me but do my work from day to day,
In field or forest, at the desk or loom,
In roaring market place or tranquil room.
Let me but find it in my heart to say
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray:
"This is my work—my blessing, not my doom.
Of all who live I am the only one by whom

Then shall I see it not too great nor small
To suit my spirit and to prove my powers;
Then shall I cheerful greet the laboring hours
And cheerful turn when the long shadows fall
At eventide to play and love and rest,
Because I know for me my work is best.

Then "everybody laughed but father."—Judge.

WOMAN TELLS STORY OF INTENSE SUFFERING

At the age of about 40 years, I was attacked with hemorrhage of the kidneys or bladder which continued for several years without a check. I finally took advantage of your generous offer and procured a sample bottle of Swamp-Root. Believing it helped me, I purchased a fifty-cent bottle, which convinced me that it was helping me. Three other bottles cured me. In two or three years, over-work brought my ailment back, but one bottle stopped it.

I feel as if I owe my life to you for the great blessing Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root has been to me. I recommend it to all human beings suffering as I was. You have my permission to publish this letter and if any person doubts it, if they will write me, enclosing stamp, I will give full particulars. Yours very truly,

MRS. T. B. PHELPS,

Somewhat Indignant.

The two extra specialists had pounded and sounded him, and felt of his pulse and tapped his frame till he could only lie in a cold perspiration of fear.

"Undoubtedly it's a case of appendicitis!" said specialist No. 1, gravely.

"Ah, would he?" echoed No. 2.

They dug him in the ribs again, and he squealed.

"Ah!" remarked No. 1, "I think we ought to let him get a bit stronger before we cut into him."

EXPOSURE BROUGHT IT ON.

Thousands of Soldiers Contracted Kidney Trouble in the Civil War.

John T. Jones, Pauls Valley, Okla., says: "The hardships and exposure I endured in the Civil War and when serving as a scout under Bill Cody, brought on my kidney trouble. I was confined to bed for days and the pain through my back and limbs was the worst I ever experienced. The kidney secretions were profuse, filled with blood and burned terribly. I became weak and debilitated. Soon after I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, I improved and it was not long before I was a well man."

Back to the Wild.

There was a time when all dogs were wild and when what we call wolves were different from other dogs only as a collie now is different from a Newfoundland, for instance. From time to time you will hear of dogs that have returned to the life of their ancestors and have run wild with the wolves of the prairie or of the woods. In the town of Sandy in Oregon a greyhound one night made the acquaintance of a coyote, which is a kind of wolf, and ever since he has lived away from the town, running with the coyotes and approaching human dwelling places only to steal a hen or two when he has been more than usually hungry.

A Touch of Family Life.

When the country youth proposed to the city girl, he received the conventional assurance that she would be his sister. It happened that this youth had sisters at home and knew exactly his privileges. So he kissed her. At this juncture she availed herself of the sisterly right to call out to father that brother was teasing her. Father responded in good, muscular earnest. Then the new brother-and-sister relation was dissolved by mutual consent. —Judge.

MORE THAN EVER

Increased Capacity for Mental Labor Since Leaving Off Coffee.

Many former coffee drinkers who have mental work to perform, day after day, have found a better capacity and greater endurance by using Postum instead of ordinary coffee. An Illinois woman writes:

"I had drank coffee for about twenty years, and finally had what the doctor called 'coffee heart.' I was nervous and extremely despondent; had little mental or physical strength left, had kidney trouble and constipation.

"The first noticeable benefit derived from the change from coffee to Postum was the natural action of the kidneys and bowels. In two weeks my heart action was greatly improved and my nerves steady.

"Then I became less despondent, and the desire to be active again showed proof of renewed physical and mental strength.

"I am steadily gaining in physical strength and brain power. I formerly did mental work and had to give it up on account of coffee, but since using Postum I am doing hard mental labor with less fatigue than ever before."

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Gertrude and her fiance, Jack Bailey, had conversed in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found unconscious at the bottom of the circular staircase. She said something had brushed by her in the dark on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a note in his pocket bearing the name "Lucien Wallace." A ladder found out of place deepens the mystery. The stables were burned, and in the dark Miss Innes shot an intruder. Halsey mysteriously disappeared. His auto was found wrecked by a freight train. It developed Halsey had an argument in the library with a woman before his disappearance. New cook disappears. Miss Innes learned Halsey was alive. Dr. Walker's face becomes livid at mention of the name of Nina Carrington. Evidence was secured from a tramp that a man, supposedly Halsey, had been bound and gagged and thrown into an empty box car. Gertrude was missing. Hunting for her, Miss Innes ran into a man and fainted. A confederate of Dr. Walker confessed his part in the mystery. He stated that the Carrington woman had been killed, that Walker feared her, and that he believed that Paul Armstrong had been killed by a hand guided by Walker. Halsey was found in a distant hospital. Paul Armstrong was not dead. Miss Innes discovered secret rooms in which the Traders' bank treasure was believed to be. Mrs. Watson, dying, said she killed Arnold Armstrong, who years before had married her sister under the alias of Wallace. Lucien Wallace was born of the marriage. Miss Innes discovered a secret panel to the mysterious room and unwittingly locked herself within. During the hunt for her the searchers ran across Paul Armstrong. Armstrong pitched forward down the circular staircase, breaking his neck. In the secret room was found the Traders' bank loot, which Armstrong had taken.

As Alex and I reached the second floor, Mr. Jamieson met us. He was grave and quiet, and he nodded comprehendingly when he saw the safe.

"Will you come with me for a moment, Miss Innes?" he asked soberly, and on my assenting, he led the way to the east wing. There were lights moving around below, and some of the maids were standing gaping down. They screamed when they saw me, and drew back to let me pass. There was a sort of hush over the scene; Alex, behind me, muttered something I could not hear, and brushed past me without ceremony. Then I realized that a man was lying doubled up at the foot of the staircase, and that Alex was stooping over him.

As I came slowly down, Winters stepped back, and Alex straightened himself, looking at me across the body with impenetrable eyes. In his hand he held a shaggy gray wig, and before me on the floor lay the man whose headstone stood in Casanova churchyard—Paul Armstrong.

Winters told the story in a dozen words. In his headlong flight down the circular staircase, with Winters just behind, Paul Armstrong had pitched forward violently, struck his head against the door to the east veranda, and probably broken his neck. He had died as Winters reached him.

As the detective finished, I saw Halsey, pale and shaken, in the cardroom doorway, and for the first time that night I lost my self-control. I put my arms around my boy, and for a moment he had to support me. A second later, over Halsey's shoulder, I saw something that turned my emotion into other channels, for behind him, in the shadowy cardroom, were Gertrude and Alex, the gardener, and—there is no use mincing matters—he was kissing her!

I was unable to speak. Twice I opened my mouth; then I turned Halsey around and pointed. They were quite unconscious of us; her head was on his shoulder, his face against her hair. As it happened, it was Mr. Jamieson who broke up the tableau.

He stepped over to Alex and touched him on the arm.

"And now," he said quietly, "how long are you and I to play our little comedy, Mr. Bailey?"

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The Odds and Ends.

Of Dr. Walker's sensational escape that night to South America, of the recovery of over $1,000,000 in cash and securities in the safe from the chimney room—the papers have kept the public well informed. Of my share in discovering the secret chamber they have been singularly silent. The inner history has never been told. Mr. Jamieson got all kinds of credit, and some of it he deserved, but if Jack Bailey, as Alex, had not traced Halsey and insisted on the disinterring of Paul Armstrong's casket, if he had not suspected the truth from the start, where would the detective have been?

When Halsey learned the truth, he insisted on going the next morning, weak as he was, to Louise, and by night she was at Sunnyside, under Gertrude's particular care, while her mother had gone to Barbara Fitzhugh's.

What Halsey said to Mrs. Armstrong I never knew, but that he was considerate and chivalrous I feel confident. It was Halsey's way always with women.

He and Louise had no conversation together until that night. Gertrude and Alex—I mean Jack—had gone for a walk, although it was nine o'clock, and anybody but a pair of young geese would have known that dew was falling, and that it is next to impossible to get rid of a summer cold.

At half after nine, growing weary of my own company, I went downstairs to find the young people. At the door of the living room I paused. Gertrude and Jack had returned and were there, sitting together on a divan, with only one lamp lighted. They did not see or hear me, and I beat a hasty retreat to the library.

He Was Kissing Her.

But here again I was driven back. Louise was sitting in a deep chair, looking the happiest I had ever seen her, with Halsey on the arm of the chair, holding her close.

The next day, by degrees, I got the whole story.

Paul Armstrong had a besetting evil—the love of money. Common enough, but he loved money, not for what it would buy, but for its own sake. An examination of the books showed no irregularities in the past year since John had been cashier, but before that, in the time of Anderson, the old cashier, who had died, much strange juggling had been done with the records. The railroad in New Mexico had apparently drained the banker's private fortune, and he determined to retrieve it by one stroke. This was nothing less than the looting of the bank's securities, turning them into money, and making his escape.

But the law has long arms. Paul Armstrong evidently studied the situation carefully. Just as the only good Indian is a dead Indian, so the only safe defaulter is a dead defaulter. He decided to die, to all appearances, and when the hue and cry subsided, he would be able to enjoy his money almost anywhere he wished.

The first necessity was an accomplice. The connivance of Dr. Walker was suggested by his love for Louise. The man was unscrupulous, and with the girl as a bait, Paul Armstrong soon had him fast. The plan was apparently the acme of simplicity: A small town in the west, an attack of heart disease, a body from a medical college dissecting room shipped in a trunk to Dr. Walker by a colleague in San Francisco, and palmed off for the supposed dead banker. What was simpler?

The woman, Nina Carrington, was the cog that slipped. What she only suspected, what she really knew, we never learned. She was a chambermaid in the hotel at C——, and it was evidently her intention to blackmail Dr. Walker. His position at that time was uncomfortable: To pay the woman to keep quiet would be confession. He denied the whole thing, and she went to Halsey.

It was that that had taken Halsey to the doctor the night he disappeared. He accused the doctor of the deception, and, crossing the lawn, had said something cruel to Louise. Then, furious at her apparent connivance, he had started for the station. Dr. Walker and Paul Armstrong—the latter still lame where I had shot him—hurried across to the embankment, certain only of one thing. Halsey must not tell the detective what he suspected until the money had been removed from the chimney room. They stepped into the road in front of the car to stop it, and fate played into their hands. The car struck the train, and they had only to dispose of the unconscious figure in the road. This they did as I have told. For three days Halsey lay in the box car, tied hand and foot, suffering tortures of thirst, delirious at times, and discovered by a tramp at Johnsville only in time to save his life.

To go back to Paul Armstrong. At the last moment his plans had been frustrated. Sunnyside, with its hoard in the chimney room, had been rented without his knowledge! Attempts to dislodge me having failed, he was driven to breaking into his own house. The ladder in the chute, the burning of the stable and the entrance through the cardroom window—all were in the course of a desperate attempt to get into the chimney room.

Louise and her mother had, from the first, been the great stumbling-blocks. The plan had been to send Louise away until it was too late for her to interfere, but she came back to the hotel at C—— just at the wrong time. There was a terrible scene. The girl was told that something of the kind was necessary; that the bank was about to close and her stepfather would either avoid arrest and disgrace in this way, or kill himself. Fanny Armstrong was a weakling, but Louise was more difficult to manage. She had no love for her stepfather, but her devotion to her mother was entire, self-sacrificing. Forced into acquiescence by her mother's appeals, overwhelmed by the situation, the girl consented and fled.

From somewhere in Colorado she sent an anonymous telegram to Jack Bailey at the Traders' bank. Trapped as she was, she did not want to see an innocent man arrested. The telegram, received on Thursday, had sent the cashier to the bank that night in a frenzy.

Louise arrived at Sunnyside and found the house rented. Not knowing what to do, she sent for Arnold at the Greenwood club, and told him a little, not all. She told him that there was something wrong, and that the bank was about to close. That his father was responsible. Of the conspiracy she said nothing. To her surprise, Arnold already knew, through Bailey that night, that things were not right. Moreover, he suspected what Louise did not, that the money was hidden at Sunnyside. He had a scrap of paper that indicated a concealed room somewhere.

His inherited cupidity was aroused. Eager to get Halsey and Jack Bailey out of the house, he went up to the east entry, and in the billiard room gave the cashier what he had refused earlier in the evening—the address of Paul Armstrong in California and a telegram which had been forwarded to the club for Bailey, from Dr. Walker. It was in response to one Bailey had sent, and it said that Paul Armstrong was very ill.

Bailey was almost desperate. He decided to go west and find Paul Armstrong and to force him to disgorge. But the catastrophe at the bank occurred sooner than he had expected. On the moment of starting west, at Andrews station, where Mr. Jamieson had located the car, he read that the bank had closed, and, going back, surrendered himself.

John Bailey had known Paul Armstrong intimately. He did not believe that the money was gone; in fact, it was hardly possible in the interval since the securities had been taken. Where was it? And from some chance remark let fall some months earlier by Arnold Armstrong at a dinner, Bailey felt sure there was a hidden room at Sunnyside. He tried to see the architect of the building, but, like the contractor, if he knew of the room, he refused any information. It was Halsey's idea that John Bailey came to the house as a gardener, and pursue his investigations as he could. His smooth upper lip had been sufficient disguise, with his change of clothes, and a hair-cut by a country barber.

So it was Alex, Jack Bailey, who had been our ghost. Not only had he alarmed Louise—and himself, he admitted—on the circular staircase, but he had dug the hole in the trunkroom wall, and later sent Eliza into hysteria. The note Liddy had found in Gertrude's scrap-basket was from him, and it was he who had startled me into unconsciousness by the clothes chute, and, with Gertrude's help, had carried me to Louise's room. Gertrude, I learned, had watched all night beside me, in an extremity of anxiety about me.

That old Thomas had seen his master, and thought he had seen the Sunnyside ghost, there could be no doubt. Of that story of Thomas, about seeing Jack Bailey in the footpath between the club and Sunnyside, the night Liddy and I heard the noise on the circular staircase—that, too, was right. On the night before Arnold Armstrong was murdered, Jack Bailey had made an attempt to search for the secret room. He secured Arnold's keys from his room at the club and got into the house, armed with a golf-stick for sounding the walls. He ran against the hamper at the head of the stairs, caught his cuff-link in it, and dropped the golf-stick with a crash. He was glad enough to get away without an alarm being raised, and he took the "owl" train to town.

The oddest thing to me was that Mr. Jamieson had known for some time that Alex was Jack Bailey. But the face of the pseudo-gardener was very queer indeed when, that night, in the cardroom, the detective turned to him and said:

"How long are you and I going to play our little comedy, Mr. Bailey?"

Well, it is all over now. Paul Armstrong rests in Casanova churchyard, and this time there is no mistake. I went to the funeral, because I wanted to be sure he was really buried, and I looked at the step of the shaft where I had sat that night, and wondered if it was all real. Sunnyside is for sale—no, I shall not buy it. Little Lucien Armstrong is living with his step-grandmother, who is recovering gradually from troubles that had extended over the entire period of her second marriage. Anne Watson lies not far from the man she killed, and who as surely caused her death. Thomas, the fourth victim of the conspiracy, is buried on the hill. With Nina Carrington, five lives were sacrificed in the course of this grim conspiracy.

There will be two weddings before long, and Liddy has asked for my heliotrope poplin to wear to the church. I knew she would. She has wanted it for three years, and she was quite ugly the time I spilled coffee on it. We are very quiet, just the two of us. Liddy still clings to her ghost theory, and points to my wet and muddy boots in the trunkroom as proof. I am gray, I admit, but I haven't felt as well in a dozen years. Sometimes, when I am bored, I ring for Liddy, and we talk things over. When Warner married Rosie, Liddy sniffed and said what I took for faithfulness in Rosie had been nothing but mawkishness. I have not yet outlived Liddy's contempt because I gave them silver knives and forks as a wedding gift.

So we sit and talk, and sometimes Liddy threatens to leave, and often I discharge her, but we stay together somehow. I am talking of renting a house next year, and Liddy says to be sure there is no ghost. To be perfectly frank, I never really lived until that summer. Time has passed since I began this story. My neighbors are packing up for another summer. Liddy is having the awnings put up, and the window-boxes filled. Liddy or no Liddy, I shall advertise to-morrow for a house in the country, and I don't care if it has a Circular Staircase.

Queer Place for Lightship

Government Has Ordered It Moored in a Peach Orchard 40 Miles Inland.

A lightship in the heart of Delaware and in a peach orchard at that? Sounds strange, but according to "Notice to Mariners No. 27" that is precisely what the lighthouse board contemplates.

Fenwick Island Shoal lightship, off the Delaware coast, is to be moved, and according to this official bulletin it is to be placed in latitude north 38 degrees 27 minutes 25 seconds, longitude west 75 degrees 46 minutes 40 seconds.

Mariners upon receiving copies of the notice sent out by the lighthouse board concerning the change promptly began to plot it out on their charts. When they found that the ship would be located 40 miles inland from the coast they rubbed their eyes and began to calculate over again, but each time the lightship brought up in a Delaware peach orchard.

"How does it happen," Lieut. Com. Blepham, lighthouse engineer of this district, was asked, "that Fenwick Island Shoal lightship is to be moved inland?"

"Why, of course it isn't." Then he, too, began to use instruments, and brought up where the mariners had. "It's a mistake," he said, "and there will have to be a correction. We don't want them trying to navigate through the state of Delaware. That longitude should be 74 degrees instead of 75."—Philadelphia North American.

Hunters Kill Big Grizzly.

The monster grizzly bear that for years has been making many sleepless nights for the farmers, miners and residents of the northwestern Trinity region has at last been slain.

This monarch of the forest and slayer of small domestic animals was killed by Thomas McDonald, a wealthy mining man who has been camping along the Salmon range in Trinity.

Single-handed McDonald, who is a mountaineer of marked ability, killed the bear after a lively tussle.

The bear weighed 1,000 pounds, and is the finest and biggest specimen ever seen in the Trinity mountain regions. The animal had for years defied all efforts to capture or kill him. —Maryville Correspondence San Francisco Call.

Looking After the Eggs.

Lady Betty, who is four years old and never misses a trick, was taken the other evening to a restaurant for her supper, and with all the importance and sprightly dignity of her years calmly ordered poached eggs on toast. While the little family group was awaiting its service the "kiddie" amused herself by looking out of the window, pressing against a screen to get a closer view of something below. She was warned by her mother that the screen might give way and let her fall to the sidewalk, perhaps injuring her terribly. She drew away, thought a minute, and then said naively: "Would I fall if the screen went out?" "You certainly would," was her mother's reply. "And would I get awful hurted?" "Very likely." "Then what would the man do with the eggs?"

An Exciting Town.

Los Angeles is a truly exciting town to live in. To say nothing of its heavenly climate and its bombs, there is always something stimulating in the occult line going on. Just the other day a widow of the angelic city began to long for a sight of one of her schoolmates whom she had not seen for 45 years. The longing brought its fulfillment. A spirit told her to look for him in Brooklyn. She obeyed, met him on the street a few hours after she arrived, and promptly married him. It is worth while to live in a city where things like this happen, even at the risk of being blown up now and then.

What's in a Name?

"See here, waiter," said Mr. Gronch, growling deeply over his plate, "I ordered turtle soup. There is not even a morsel of turtle flavor in this."

"Of course not, sir" returned the waiter. "What do you expect? Shakespeare said there was nothing in a name. If you ordered college pudding would you expect a college in it? In Manchester pudding would you look for a ship canal or a cotton exchange? And tea, sir?"—Tit-Bits.

DRINK WATER TO CURE KIDNEYS AND RHEUMATISM

The People Do Not Drink Enough Water to Keep Healthy, Says Well-Known Authority.

"The numerous cases of kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

Stop loading your system with medicines and cure-alls; but get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicines—plain, common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach."

To cure Rheumatism you must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach trouble and poor digestion. For these conditions you can do no better than take the following prescription: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often.

This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

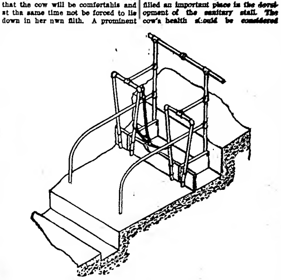
NECESSITY OF PROVIDING SANITARY DAIRY METHODS

Stanchions Formerly Used Do Not Keep Cows Clean, Nor Are They Comfortable—Many Systems Have Been Tried.

(By C. A. OCOCK.)

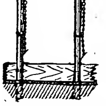
The need of sanitary stalls in dairy barns has been especially emphasized recently by the agitation which has resulted in pure food laws and a public sentiment which demands a higher grade of milk and its products. Public discussion has attracted attention to the unsanitary methods of housing milch cows and dairymen have been impressed with the need of providing fastenings for their animals, which will be comfortable, sanitary and inexpensive.

Many systems have been tried for fastening cows to secure sanitary milk. Ties, rigid and swinging stanchions, stalls, and the open shed system have been resorted to and are still being used. The method of fastening dairy cows which best meets the demands of the dairy and pure food laws is the stall. The stall must be sanitary to be a success. Stalls are of many different types, but to be sanitary they must be constructed so that the cow will be comfortable and at the same time not be forced to lie down in her own filth. A prominent authority gives five things to be accomplished in cow stall construction. (1). It should keep the cow clean. (2). It should make the cow comfortable. (3). It should be convenient for feeding, milking and cleaning. (4). It should be inexpensive. (5). It should hold the cow securely.



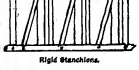
The New Ideal Stall.

Since the earliest days of dairying some method of fastening cows has been resorted to. If not tied with a rope or thong attached to the base of the horns, a rope or chain was placed about the neck and fastened to a post, tree or other stationary object to prevent the cow moving about while being milked.



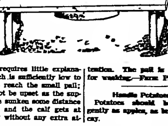
Single Chain Tie.

A familiar tie still in use in a great many barns is the chain tie herewith illustrated. This simple arrangement has many good features. A ring large enough to pass freely up and down on a five-inch post is attached to a chain which is placed about the cow's neck. With the proper construction of manger, platform and gutter this method of tying is even more desirable from a humanitarian standpoint than the rigid stanchion. Although the chain tie is fast becoming obsolete it has filled an important place in the development of the sanitary stall. The cow's health should be considered when choosing a method of fastening. It is undesirable to place cows in rigid stanchions, since they do not have the freedom of their heads obtainable in a stall. Compelling a cow to lie in a cramped position is not conducive to a gentle disposition. Such a disposition is found in those individuals producing the largest returns for food consumed. A stall which most nearly approaches perfection is one in which the cow is permitted to have the freedom she has when lying in the field or paddock. Just how these devices of torture—the rigid stanchion shown herewith—originated is not generally known, but after years of service they have been discarded. These stanchions hold the neck of the animal in a vise-like grip when closed; especially is this true when the stanchion is too narrow. Such a stanchion not only irritates the neck of the cow but also prevents the free movement of the head from side to side, so that a cow is prevented from throwing her head around in a resting position upon her fore leg when stretched out upon the ground, which is a common habit with this animal. Freedom of movement is very important to the cow and every effort should be made to discourage the use of the rigid stanchion. In order for milk to be sanitary the surroundings of the cows must be cleanly in every particular, the floors especially. The floors now commonly found are dirt, wood, either block or plank, brick, stone, and in some cases concrete.



Rigid Stanchions.

FEEDING TROUGH FOR CALVES



This device requires little explanation. The bench is sufficiently low to allow a calf to reach the small pail; the outfit cannot be upset as the supporting legs are sunken some distance in the ground, and the calf gets at the milk easily without any extra attention. The pail is easily removed for washing.—Farm Press.

Handle Potatoes Gently.

Potatoes should be handled as gently as apples, as bruises cause decay.

Resetting Horseshoes.

According to the Colorado experiment station, it is best to have the horse's shoes reset every four or six weeks. If the horse can be kept off the road during the summer months have the shoes pulled off and allow the feet to come down to the ground and get the natural frog pressure. The feet should be kept growing; then there will be very little trouble from the feet getting dry. Oil the coronary band on each foot twice a week. This band is located just underneath the hair line. It forms the horn of the wall, and if a new hoof is produced normally, the foot will not have time to become too dry.

An Excellent Roller.

A very good one may be made of a length of glazed tile, say two feet in diameter, filled with concrete. Before filling, fix in the center of the tile a piece of inch and a quarter gas pipe, allowing the ends to project two or three inches from each end of the tile, to which an iron handle may be attached. Any blacksmith can make the handle, at small cost. Fill the cylinder with small stones, and pour in a mortar composed of one part cement to six parts sand, thoroughly mixed and then made so thin with water that it will fill all the spaces between the stones. When the cement has become hard and dry, you will have a cheap and handy implement with which to roll your garden after planting.

Good Roads.

New Jersey was the pioneer in the good roads movement, but New York has 80,000 miles of road, with a greater mileage of improved highways than all the other eastern states put together. New York will this year spend $21,000,000 on roads.

Revenue From National Forests.

Under the new law requiring 25 per cent. of the gross proceeds from the national forests to be paid over to the states and territories for schools and roads, the amount last year was $477,000.

A LOVABLE WOMAN

Queen Amelie of Portugal Most Unfairly Treated.

Woman of Many Sorrows and Tragedies Who Devoted Herself to the People—Charities Were Her Only Extravagance.

Lisbon.—Perhaps there is not in all Europe today a more pathetic figure than Queen Amelie. Brave she has proved herself to be often, but there is something about the calm intrepid spirit with which she has faced this latest trouble, which calls forth the deep sympathy of womankind the world over.

After having had her husband and her eldest son slain by her side, in the most shocking fashion, nearly three years ago, and her own remaining boy wounded, she has now been compelled to submit to the loss of her son's throne (that was also her own), and has been driven with him to seek refuge abroad—leaving all their belongings, all their personal treasures, in the hands of the revolutionists.

Born in England at Twickenham on the banks of the Thames—her father, the late Comte de Paris, being banished at the time from France—Amelie will doubtless add one more to that Parisian group of throneless royalties who furnished the inspiration of one of Alphonse Daudet's famous novels.

What Amelie Fears.

Perhaps Queen Amelie's greatest grief in connection with the recent tragic events will be the shattered future of her only remaining son. For all hopes for the future are practically at an end for a monarch who has been deposed by his people. Another source of profound sorrow will be the fact that she will be barred henceforth from that Church of St. Vincent at Lisbon where her murdered husband and eldest son sleep their last sleep.

She will be in doubt, indeed, whether the remains of those so dear to her will not be subjected to some such frightful indignities as those which characterized the last revolutionary outbreak in Barcelona, when the mob having sacked the convents and monasteries, tore the dead monks and nuns from their tombs, paraded them about the city, either whole or piecemeal, exposed them to every sort of outrage, and ended by setting them up in grotesque positions at the ruined entrances of the sacred buildings from which they had been taken.

Queen Amelie.

Ever since Amelie's husband and eldest son were assassinated she had lived in utter terror lest her only remaining son, Manuel II., should share their fate. For herself, her own safety and welfare, she cared little. Those who know Amelie realize that when a cruel death claimed her husband on that terrible afternoon in February, 1908, her heart was quite broken, and the only interest left for her in life lay in her son, Manuel. The domestic life of King Carlos and Amelie was utterly unclouded and the queen was the happiest of wives and mothers. Nothing has hurt her more cruelly than the assertion made so often that King Carlos was murdered by the people, especially by the Republicans, on account of his thefts from the public treasury and because of his immoralities. The truth is that Carlos was free from any feminine entanglements, devoted as any lover to his beautiful wife and that he was killed not by reason of his thefts from the national treasury, but because he was endeavoring to stop the wholesale robbery of the national funds by the leaders of the two great political parties of the kingdom.

Tried to Help the People.

Amelie has been obliged to submit to seeing the instigators of the murder of King Carlos and the crown prince not only unpunished, but even occupying positions of influence and rank. Indeed, she was brought face to face with them almost daily and had to remain silent for the sake of the young king.

She was debarred from rewarding those who had endeavored to defend her husband on the day of his assassination and could not open a Portuguese paper without finding its columns filled with calumniations of her dead husband, which she was powerless to officially or publicly deny.

Since Amelie, then a slender young woman renowned for her exquisite beauty, came to Portugal a little over 24 years ago, she has done nothing but good. Out of her own personal fortune she has had built and endowed homes for crippled children, orphan asylums, homes for the blind and public dispensaries.

Marie Amelie is possessed of a sufficiently large fortune of her own to have rendered her wholly independent of the Portuguese treasury. Her own extravagances consisted of her many charities, and that from her own purse she returned to the Portuguese government money which it was asserted had been advanced to her husband, the late king, but which he did not in reality owe, it will be realized that Portugal has driven from her soil a wise, good and energetic princess, who spent her entire married life in [illegible] —a woman toward whom they should be filled with feelings of gratitude.

Scottish humor is dry rather than boisterous, and I always think there is exquisite drollery in the story of the Stonehaven railway porter and the Salvation Army "captain." To catch the hang of a little yarn readers must remember that Stonehaven lies to the south of Aberdeen. The London train had drawn up at Stonehaven on account of a slight mishap a mile or two ahead, and Andra, the old porter, had got into conversation with a Salvation Army officer who had popped his head out of the compartment to ask the reason for the delay.

"Aye aye," mused Andra, after giving the desired information, "ye'll be for Aiberdeen, I'm thinkin'?"

"Yes, my man," was the reply; "I'm bound for Aberdeen—a very wicked place, I'm told!"

"Whet micht ye be goin' to dae there, sir, if it's as bad as a' thet?" asked Andra, rather amused at the visitor's words.

"Ah," was the pious answer, "I'm going to drive the devil out of Aberdeen."

"See an' drive him north, chiel; haud him well to the north!"—Exchange.

Supreme Test.

"I thought you said this bathing suit was in fast colors," said Binks, indignantly, to the bathing master of whom he had bought his dollar suit that morning.

"Yes, that's what I said," returned the bathing master.

"Well, every blessed stripe on the blooming thing has come off on my back," retorted Binks.

"Ah, but wait until you try to get 'em off your back," smiled the bathing master, suavely. "Then you'll see."—Harper's Weekly.

BABY WASTED TO SKELETON

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face. I had a physician treat him, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come out on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. Then I called another physician. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad that I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton, and was hardly able to walk.

"My aunt advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I sent to a drug store and got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of the Ointment and followed directions. At the end of two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since. I can sincerely say that only for Cuticura my child would have died. I used only one cake of Cuticura Soap and about three boxes of Ointment.

"I am a nurse and my profession brings me into many different families and it is always a pleasure for me to tell my story and recommend Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, Litchfield, Conn., Oct. 23, 1909."

PUTS STOMACHS IN ORDER.

No Indigestion, Gas, Sourness or Dyspepsia Five Minutes After Taking a Little Diapepsin.

There should not be a case of indigestion, dyspepsia or gastritis here if readers who are subject to Stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the sourest, acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all foul, nauseous odors from the breath.

If your stomach is sour and full of gas, or your food doesn't digest, and your meal don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any druggist here in town, and make life worth living. Absolute relief from Stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and besides, one fifty-cent case is sufficient to cure a whole family of such trouble.

Surely, a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Pape's Diapepsin, which will always either, at daytime or during night, relieve your sick, sour, gassy, upset stomach and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.

A Very Good Guess.

Foote Lighte—I understand there were several dozen bad eggs in the possession of persons in the audience last night and not one was thrown.

Miss Sue Brette—Because the author of the piece refused to show himself, I guess.

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Cresson, Pa.—"Five years ago I had a bad fall, and hurt myself inwardly. I was under a doctor's care for nine weeks, and when I stopped I grew worse again. I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it as directed, and now I am a stout, hearty woman."—Mrs. Ella E. Aikey, Cresson, Pa.

Baird, Wash.—"A year ago I was sick with kidney and bladder troubles and female weakness. The doctors gave me up. All they could do was to just let me go as easily as possible. I was advised by friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am completely cured of my ills, and I am nearly sixty years old."—Mrs. Sarah Leighton, Baird, Wash.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

IT MIGHT BE SAID ---I TOLD YOU SO

Organization of the So-called Pennington County.---The Officers.

The [illegible] has happened. Immediately following the announcement of the state canvassing board that Pennington county had received a majority of the votes cast on division and the proclamation of the governor stating [illegible] the county, the county [illegible] Thief River Falls [illegible] county division [illegible] that city and a hungry host [illegible] and proceeded [illegible] with a capital B.

Having [illegible] county and [illegible] their wishes, Thief River [illegible] claimed everything [illegible] way of fat offices [illegible] to do all the time [illegible] knew they [illegible] poor [illegible] [illegible] obtain [illegible] the best offices [illegible] register of deeds, auditor, [illegible] of probate, and county [illegible] and Thief River Falls [illegible] to fill all of these. The [illegible] which pays a [illegible] was treasurer and they [illegible] to a man who lives in the [illegible] only four miles from the city [illegible] not to have it too far away.

To St. Hilaire [illegible] gave the offices of county surveyor and coroner, which don't amount to anything and which nobody else wanted anyway. The only job in sight for the coroner is to bury the disappointed [illegible] who regret having voted for Pennington county.

But we have forgotten Harry Ives, who is not from St. Hilaire, because he did not vote there, and not from Red Lake Falls because he did not vote there either, and not from Thief River Falls because he has never lived there, except in the spirit. He is the genial gentleman who has been drawing salary as county treasurer at Red Lake Falls. He has recently developed acrobatic qualities, turning a complete flip flop into the air and coming down in the clerk of court's office at Thief River Falls. He has experienced extreme difficulty in getting into office during the past twenty years, but has now attained what must be heaven to him, since he holds two at once. He is treasurer of Red Lake county until his bond is released and at the same time is issuing marriage licenses as clerk of court of Pennington county.

The eleven towns—that dear Reservation over whose wrongs Thief River Falls has wept these many moons—what did they get out of the plums to be distributed? Just what you might expect—nothing. They had been promised the register of deeds office, sheriff, judge of probate, and half a dozen more, and each office had been promised to twenty different men, but when the round-up came, there was nothing left for the farmers, Thief River Falls had hogged everything in sight. Finally it was found that Professor Hay could not be county superintendent and city superintendent of schools in Thief River Falls and as no one else wanted this job, the Reverend Mostue of Deer Park was made superintendent of schools.

Here are the officers of the new county which was to be a model of virtue and fairness, but which started out with an exhibition of more selfishness than was ever shown in Red Lake county during its existence:

Auditor—A. H. Fasel, Thief River Falls.

Register of Deeds—E. L. Quist, Thief River Falls.

Treasurer—A. Trovaton, Town of North.

Judge of Probate—Wilhelm Michelet, Thief River Falls.

County Attorney—E. M. Stanton, Thief River Falls.

Sheriff—Jesse LaBree, Thief River Falls.

Coroner—Dr. Swanson, St. Hilaire.

Surveyor—C. H. Mertz, St. Hilaire.

Superintendent of Schools—E. A. Mostue, Deer Park.

The naming of the candidates has resulted in the utmost dissatisfaction not only among the farmers who received no recognition, but among the people of Thief River Falls themselves. That city contains many honest men. If division was to be voted on again within a week, a majority would be cast against it, not only in every town in Pennington county, but in the city of Thief River Falls itself. When the announcement of the above appointments to office was made, a public mass meeting was held, attended by the most prominent business men of Thief River Falls and several prominent men, and city officers who had been most active in working for Pennington county, took the platform and openly denounced the action of the county board and declared they would have nothing to do in the future with the county division. One speaker who ought to know made the statement that $5000.00 had been stolen out of the city treasury to aid the division fight. The city hall had been obtained by a bogus sale for $1,500.00, which money had been guaranteed by a joint note of the business men, but which was to be paid directly out of the city treasury, that is, the city would pay the city and the tax payers would be robbed of $1,500.00. All these and more revelations were made of the crooked methods by which Pennington county has been brought into existence. Several business men named each other liars and to add to the general pandemonium, the disappointed candidates paraded the streets and stirred up several fights.

Taken all together, they had a sweet time of it and it is too bad it can not last, but when the courts have set aside this Pennington county, born in corruption and loaded down with the sins of those who brought it about, all this will be a memory.

BIG CHUNKS OF LOCAL HISTORY

Governor Eberhart Issues Proclamation—Officers Resign and Others Appointed.

Treasurer, Attorney and Commissioner Resigned--Kindseth and Boughton Appointed.

Much local history has been made during the past few days and it is a strenuous task to keep tab of the many events transpiring.

Following the report of the canvassing board, showing on the face of the report a small majority for the division of Red Lake county, Governor A. O. Eberhart issued a proclamation providing for the creation of Pennington county and the new county has been formally organized and will make some interesting history during the probable short time of its existence. More about that later.

Pennington county, or rather Thief River Falls city, or, to get closer to facts, a few of the citizens of the city, have chosen a set of county officers. That event has been commented upon elsewhere.

The county commissioners of Red Lake county—three of them—met in special session this week to act upon some important matters.

The resignation of County Attorney Wilhelm Michelet was accepted and Chas. E. Boughton, county attorney-elect, was appointed to fill the vacancy.

The resignation of County Treasurer Harry E. Ives was approved and will be accepted as soon as the board of audit have made an examination of his books. G. G. Kindseth, county treasurer-elect, has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

Commissioner Ed. A. Aubol resigned and his resignation was accepted. It will be the duty of the governor to appoint men to succeed three of the five members of the board who reside in the so-called Pennington county. It is believed that Governor Eberhart will name Hermann Schultz, commissioner-elect from the first district, C. O. Kankel of Terrebonne and Sam E. Hunt of this city.

MILLER FORFEITED MATCH.

Injured His Shoulder so Gave the Match to Ober.

In the wrestling match at the Bijou theatre last Thursday evening between Ed. Ober of Crookston and Harry Miller of Angus, Miller sustained such a severe injury to his shoulder that he had to forfeit the match to Ober. Miller secured the first fall in 22 minutes by using a toe hold. It was in this fall that Miller secured his injury. Dr. Wilkinson officiated as referee with E. G. Buse as time keeper.

E. A. Nelson, promoter and manager of the last two matches, announces that he has secured another match in the future between Miller and Ober, the date to be decided upon later. Betchel, a wrestler of some renown, of McIntosh, is also after a match here with Ober and as he recently managed to secure the decision over Ober, a good match is looked for if the details can be managed.

On Monday, Dec. 2, Robert Meikle, the eminent Scotch baritone, supported by Frank Lloyd, Comedian; Nannie Strachan, Soprano; and Nellie Malcolm, pianiste, will be heard here in concert, under the auspices of the local M. B. A. lodge. This is Mr. Meikle's third trans-continental tour and his popularity is ever on the increase. As the Winnipeg Free Press says, "Mr. Meikle has no superior as an exponent of the martial songs of Scotland" He is worth hearing and everybody should be at the Bijou Monday night to hear him.

Mr. Meikle will be remembered by all who were fortunate enough to attend his concert here last December when he appeared in the Metropolitan opera house the night the building was destroyed by fire.

At that time the audience was not as large as it might have been but it is a safe prediction to say that the attendance will be considerably larger next Monday night.

Governor Eberhart of Minnesota, Governor Warner of Michigan and Governor Davidson of Wisconsin will take part in the conference.

The program for the conference has just been completed by J. E. Rhodes, president of the Minnesota Forestry Association. Mr. Rhodes has succeeded in inducing many prominent men to agree to come to St. Paul to discuss the causes and prevention of forest fires, which, including the great Hinckley disaster in 1894, have cost hundreds of lives and millions of dollars in property.

The cause of these fires, it is believed, will cause one of the most important discussions. Investigations always follow the disasters and there always is a hot argument concerning the cause. Recently it was charged that that blaze which destroyed Spooner and Baudette, Minn., and laid in waste thousands of acres of land, was caused by sparks from a locomotive on a Canadian railroad. This was vehemently denied by officials of the railroad, who in turn claimed the settlers themselves were to blame. It is expected that this most recent of fires will be thoroughly probed at the coming conference and there is a chance that the responsibility for it will be fixed.

Governor Eberhart, of Minnesota; Governor Davidson, of Wisconsin, and Governor Warner, of Michigan, are to speak on the opening day. Governor Eberhart will talk on "The State's Duty in the Preservation of Its Forests; Governor Warner's subject is, "Michigan's Forestry Policy," and Governor Davidson is on the program to discuss, "What the Forests Mean to the People."

Opening address, Z. D. Scott, president of the Minnesota State Forestry Board, presiding officer; address of welcome, Herbert P. Keller, mayor of St. Paul; "What the Forest Service Does to Prevent Fires," H. S. Graves, Chief Forester of the United States; "The Forest Fire Patrol System of the Western States," E. T. Allen, forester Western Forestry and Conservation Association; "Forest Protection in Canada," R. H. Campbell, forester, Dominion of Canada; "Why Our Forests Burn," Filbert E. Roth, professor of Forestry, University of Michigan; "Forest Protective Legislation Proposed by the State of Wisconsin," E. M. Griffith, state forester, Wisconsin; "Minnesota's Forest Fire Warden System," C. C. Andrews, Forestry Commissioner, Minnesota.

Sessions of December 7.

"The Interest of the Railroads in Protecting the Forests," R. H. Aishton, vice president, Chicago & Northwestern railroad; "The Interest of the Lumbermen in Forest Fire Protection," Thornton A. Green, Ontonagon, Mich.; "Legal Questions Involved in Forest Fire Laws," W. B. Douglas of the Minnesota Forestry Board; "Fire Protection on the Minnesota State Reservations," Prof. E. G. Cheyney, Minnesota Forestry School; Discussion of the Michigan forest fire laws, led by Charles W. Garfield, president of the Michigan Forestry Association. Discussion of Wisconsin's proposed forest fire warden system, William M. Bray, chairman committee of forestry, Assembly, Wisconsin legislature. Discussion of the forest fire protective laws proposed by the Minnesota Forestry Board, John Lind, member Minnesota's forestry school.

W. B. Douglas, former attorney general of Minnesota, has outlined amendments to the state forestry laws for the prevention of fires. He says many fires have been caused by the neglect of railroads to clear their right of way, that spark arresters should be placed on locomotives and that there should be a law against the building of camp fires between the dates of April 1 and November 10. These suggestions, it is believed, will call for a protest from the railroads and it is expected that the conference will be "hot" in keeping with the subjection under discussion.

Carpenter Killed by Fall.

STRICKEN TOWNS RISE.

Seventy-five New Buildings Erected at Beaudette and Spooner.

Spooner. — Seventy-five residences and business houses are ready for occupation at Spooner, while in Beaudette practically every person is living in newly constructed houses, and the council is planning permanent improvements.

Beaudette is in an excellent condition financially. A modern city hall of brick will be one of the first buildings to go up next spring. Cement walks are to replace the old board ones and the erection of a school building to cost $25,000 probably will be decided upon. In the meantime work is going ahead on four school buildings for use this winter.

Among the Beaudette business blocks which will be erected is one of solid brick, 100 feet square, with office apartments on the second floor. Architects are drawing plans for not less than twelve brick business houses and concrete structures also will go up.

Albert Berg has moved his bank fixtures and funds from temporary quarters in the Shevlin-Mathien lumber mill offices into a new building. Mr. Berg, who at one time was secretary of state of Minnesota, had planned on retiring from active business, but owing to the losses sustained by the fire, will continue an active force in his institution, the Security Bank.

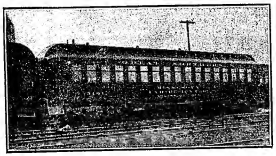
WILL SHOW MINNESOTA'S RESOURCES.



STATE IMMIGRATION BUREAU'S MINIATURE STATE FAIR.

What Minnesota has to offer in agricultural opportunity and as a place of desirable residence will be brought direct to the attention of hundreds of thousands of people in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania when the Great Northern exhibit car makes its five months' tour.

A state fair in miniature, a state fair on wheels that may be visited without charge, will be taken over an immense extent of country and placed, at stopping places, within easy access of all. George Welsh, state immigration agent, has worked with H. A. Noble, of the Great Northern road, on the arranging of the exhibits, and S. J. Ellison, general passenger agent, is planning the itinerary.

Everything Is Shown.

Everything that Minnesota has to offer is shown in the car, not excepting the timber and mining products. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley, flax, timothy, clover, and alfalfa, are so displayed as to show not only what the state can do in actual production, but to indicate also to the observer the position Minnesota holds, in consequence of these productions, as a dairy state, and how its prominence in dairying must necessarily increase.

The exhibit has not stopped at the practical but has gone into the attractions other than wealth production that determines the selection of a new home.

The Minnesota lake resorts are shown in many pictures of large size, and the fish and game commission has provided an exhibit of fish in the different stages of propagation from the spawn to the three-inch minnow that is turned into the streams. Bass, mounted on boards, also are exhibited for the benefit of sportsmen who may visit the car.

The northern part of the state has not been overlooked and the great mining industry receives recognition Granite and building stone are shown and the car, in short, carries a comprehensive exhibit of the resources and attractions of the state.

Dan Wallace has written the initial article in a special booklet, printed in handsome colors, which will be carried by thousands and banded out along the route. A dairy cow has the place of honor on the cover. The possibilities for profit in the taking of cut-over timber lands and the turning of such holdings into dairy farms are shown.

Question of Land.

The homeseekers are told in the booklet just how much free land may be found in each locality, how much state land, and under what conditions it may be obtained and where to apply for it. The importance of the Twin Cities, Duluth and Superior as markets is pointed out.

One million pieces of advertising matter, it is estimated, will be given out on the trip, and the state will receive the widest publicity ever given it, and publicity, it is believed, of the kind will show in practical results.

L. W. Hill's Idea.

Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern road, first presented the idea of using a car for the purpose, and his offer brought before the state immigration board at a time when there was much talk of the movement of people, west, who were passing through Minnesota without having opportunity to learn of the advantages close at hand, brought acceptance, and the fitting up of the car followed.

The car left the Twin Cities, Nov 19. The itinerary has not been worked out in detail, but it is planned to strike the populous eastern centers from which many people have been moving west.

CIVIL WAR IS ON

MANY CITIES CAPTURED

Americans are Leaving Country as Rapidly as Possible—Insurgents are Gaining, But Diaz Is Confident.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 22.—Passengers arriving this morning from Mexico report a terrible condition in that country. The train was loaded with American refugees, and the Americans are leaving the country as fast as possible. Refugees report Parral, state of Chihuahua, in the hands of the revolutionists, with wires cut, and the mayor and chief of police dead. How many others had been killed, the refugees did not know.

Troops being sent from Chihuahua to Parral, left the train at Jiminez, a junction point, and refused to go further. Jiminez was captured by the rebels on Monday after a fight, in which 15 of their number and seven rurales were killed.

The Mexican officials permitted the Americans to retain their arms to protect themselves.

The passengers say the Mexican government is placing little reliance on the army, as half of it is made up of the better class of criminals and convicts sentenced to a term in the army instead of prison. Most of these are known to be in sympathy with the revolutionary movement, and many officers who have been offered promotion by Francisco Madero, are suspected of being ready to join him.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The success of the revolutionists in Mexico in capturing several towns was confirmed in official advices received by the officials that reports reaching this state department today, but notwithstanding this it was reiterated by the country through diplomatic channels indicate that President Diaz had the situation well in hand and that the stability of his government was not seriously threatened.

Senor De La Barra, the Mexican ambassador, received a dispatch today from Enrique C. Creel, minister of foreign affairs, minimizing the importance of the outbreaks which have occurred.

Creel declared that the reports of the disturbances had been greatly exaggerated. At Zacatecas, where some reports stated that 400 had been killed Creel telegraphed there had been no trouble.

Thousands Flock to Tolstoi's Funeral.

Tula, Russia, Nov. 22.—Throughout the night and during the early hours of today special trains arrived at the Zaseika railway station near the Yasnaya Poliana estate bearing delegations to the funeral of Count Leo Tolstoi. Students from Moscow occupied twenty-three coaches.

Following Tolstoi's written request his grave has been made under poverty oak in a spot where in childhood he buried a green rocking horse. This reference was to an episode of the early life of Tolsoi and his brothers, who with childish rites consigned to the earth the hobby horse in the belief that when it was interred a reign of happiness would be inaugurated.

The novelist often referred to the disposition of his body and in the directions left, specified explicitly that the ceremony incident thereto should be of the simplest without the rites of the orthodox church.

Missouri Farmer, Wife and Children Killed.

Maryville, Mo., Nov. 21.—Oda Hubbell, a farmer near Barnard, Mo., and his wife and two children were shot and killed at their home last night by an unidentified person who set fire to their house to conceal the crime.

Neighbors heard shots at the Hubbell home last night but no one made any effort to investigate the case. At midnight it was discovered that the Hubbell home was burning and people in the neighborhood hurried to assist in extinguishing the flames.

When this was accomplished the charred bodies of the two children were found in bed where they appeared to have been killed while sleeping. Hubbell's body was found lying on the floor in another room. Mrs. Hubbell's body was found in bed. It is believed she was shot without warning. Hubbell is thought to have struggled with the murderer. There is not clue to the identity of the murderer.

CARING FOR FACE

Prof. Paschkis of Vienna Gives Valuable Advice.

Expert in Dermatology Tells Men and Women What to Do in Properly Caring for Skin—Careful as to Soap.

Vienna.—Prof. Heinrich Paschkis, a distinguished member of the medical faculty of the University of Vienna, and a high authority in dermatology, has been giving his colleagues some valuable advice in cosmetics, the result of many years' experience. He thinks that doctors make a mistake in leaving beauty culture to manicures and quacks, as they themselves are much better able to detect the true causes of slight defects in physical appearance and to remedy them, thereby bringing happiness to many women, and men, too.

Professor Paschkis regards washing and bathing as the foundation of all cosmetics. The face should be washed morning and evening, the body once and the hands several times during the day. The water should not be hard; rain, river or boiled water is best. For the body the water may be according to custom and sensitiveness, from 60 to 68 degrees, warmer for the hands and quite hot for the face. As a refresher immediately after the hot water, cold water can be used to bathe the face.

A quick succession of hot and cold face baths is very good for treating red faces and the same may be used for red hands.

Fragrant toilet additions for the face washing are often desired, especially in the summer. But all sorts of resinous solutions, such as benzoin and balsam tinctures, should be avoided, as they tend to stop the exudations from the oleaginous glands. A teaspoonful of cologne water, alone, or with a few drops of vinegar, can be added with benefit to the water for washing the face.

For the ordinary bath aromatic tincture or ether oils mixed in the water will not only produce a pleasant odor, but will also exert a mildly stimulating effect on the skin.

Great care must be exercised in the choice of soap. Alkali soaps should be avoided, as they often produce skin eruptions. Neutral soaps are to be preferred. The soap must be thoroughly washed off and the skin dried with rough linen towels by vigorous rubbing toward the center. Sensitive skins should be dried with a soft cloth. An air bath is specially good for the body after the ordinary one.

Very highly important is the treatment of the skin after washing. Some sort of after treatment is really necessary, not alone in beauty culture, but for the rational care of the skin. Ointments, powders, alcoholic liquids or combinations of various kinds can be employed, according to individuality and the special qualities of the skin. The oldest practise, that of anointing, is seldom employed in Austria, as the climate is apt to make the skin too moist rather than too dry. For women particularly the best after treatment of the skin is with powder, especially for the face, neck and shoulders. With few exceptions, when properly employed, there is nothing to be said against its use. But strong starch powders and all unknown preparations should be carefully avoided. As absorbent, quickly drying and glistening powder for the body there is nothing better than the finest talc powder.

But as it is shiny and doesn't stick to the skin it must, when used for visible parts of the body, be mixed with some preparations of chalk or oxide of zinc. As white and rose colored powders make the skin look blue they should be mixed with yellow ochre and a little carmine made to a chamois color. This will take some trouble, as yellow ochre produces so many shades. For special purposes other powders may be mixed together; for instance, a large quantity of yellow ochre and umber brown for protection against the sun. In every case before going to bed the powder must be removed from the skin by grease.

Another after treatment consists in the use of alcoholic washes, scented or unscented. Cologne water diluted 30 to 50 per cent. makes a very good mixture. Generally it may be said that ointments are better for winter use for blondes, and powder and alcohol for the summer, and for brunettes altogether.

EARLY RISING BAD FOR BOYS

Londoner Maintains That Children Up Before Sunrise Are Usually Dull During Day.

London.—The old idea that it is good for boys to get up early and hustle about was vigorously assailed at a public inquiry at Spring gardens into the London county council by-laws regulating the employment of children under fourteen.

Among the witnesses was Mr. Jackman, a London county council headmaster, who said employment in barbers' shops was particularly objectionable, as the boys learned to bet and talk about horses and horse racing.

"To say it is not natural for boys to go to bed at 7:30 is beside the point," a doctor said, in commenting on the evidence. "The natural thing to do is to sleep when you are tired and get up when you wake.

"Children of fourteen want quite nine hours' sleep and should not have to work so that their systems are overtaxed.

"If they do it is quite probable that getting up in the dark on raw winter mornings will, particularly when they have to trudge through snow and slush, give rise to bronchial and lung trouble. They are not in a condition to resist chills.

"But you never hear of a well fed boy who rises with the dawn to go out and amuse himself coming to any harm. It doesn't do to coddle boys—and it is wicked to overwork them. Overworked children are failures as adults, physically if not mentally."

ODD THINGS EATEN

Few People Aware That Muskrats Are Good.

Pork Is Important Article of Food with Anglo-Saxons and Teutonic People—Indians Eat Snakes and Grasshoppers.

New York.—Possum and raccoon are generally considered pretty good eating in the United States by folks who wouldn't dream of tasting woodchuck. And yet, says a writer in the American Boy, the woodchuck is far more cleanly in habits and diet and is far better eating than either of the former.

Few people are aware that muskrats are good to eat, and still more rare is the man who eats skunk, yet both of these animals are excellent if properly cooked.

Pork is an important article of food with Anglo-Saxon and Teutonic peoples, and yet there are whole races which regard it as absolutely unfit for human consumption.

Snakes are not at all bad, once people can overcome their natural prejudice, and lizards are eaten in many parts of the world. Grasshoppers are said to make excellent soup, to be good fried or roasted, and many Indian tribes dry them and grind them into flour.

Crickets are also dried and ground into meal by Oregon and California Indians, and ants are used to a large extent as food by Indians and African tribes. The Samoan islanders are very fond of a species of marine worm which appears periodically at their islands, and the natives leave all other occupations to gather the harvest of worms.

In Japan ferns of several kinds are eaten to a great extent, while burdock is raised extensively for the tuberous roots, and seaweeds of various kinds form an important article of diet.

On the American coast there are numerous edible seaweeds, but few people are aware that they are edible and nutritious. In fact, the value of sea animals and plants as food is little known, and many a white man would starve to death where an Asiatic or South Sea islander would find abundant food if cast away on an oceanic island.

Crabs, shrimp, sea shells, in fact, nearly every marine creature is edible, while the gigantic holothurians, or "sea cucumbers," so abundant in many tropical seas, are considered a great delicacy by many races, and the industry of gathering, drying and shipping these is very important in the Malaysian and Australian waters.

Dried and prepared for market, these creatures are known as beche-de-mer, and bring a good price in the Japanese, Chinese, Greek and southern European markets. The octopus or devilfish is also eaten extensively in China, Japan, Greece and West Indies, and when this repulsive looking creature is pounded into a pulp and made into soup it is really excellent.

In the West Indies the natives are fond of the great tree lizards known as iguanas. These creatures often grow to five or six feet in length.

EASY LIFE IN SWISS PRISON

London.—Prison life in Switzerland is a luxury instead of a punishment. The comic opera jail at Thorburg, where the inmates did as they pleased, has only recently been suppressed by the Berne authorities, yet details are published of a similar institution at Sarnen, in the canton of Oswald.

Sarnen is apparently an ideal penal resort, for the happy criminals who are sentenced to terms of "detention" in that institution have a far better time than hundreds of "free" Swiss citizens who are forced to earn their bread.

A correspondent of a Lausanne paper states that he was passing through Sarnen when he saw a number of men dressed in dark blue clothes with white stripes walking about the village smoking and joking.

Others were seated in a cafe and some were working in leisurely manner carrying bricks for the construction of a new building. To his astonishment the correspondent found that the men were convicts from the cantonal prison close by.

These convicts were permitted to leave the prison early in the morning and find work around Sarnen or walk about the country until nightfall, when they return of their own accord to the prison.

They are unaccompanied by wardens and there is nothing to prevent their escaping, but they are far too comfortable to think of relinquishing their quarters, for they have as much liberty as other men and are, moreover, fed and lodged for nothing.

The money earned by those convicts who choose to work can be spent as they like. One convict who is employed as a gardener by a local magistrate sends his monthly salary to his wife and children.

Two or three convicts "escaped" several weeks ago, but they eventually returned to the prison in a half famished condition, and after being severely reprimanded they were allowed to return to their apartments.

Prettiest Austrian Named.

Vienna.—Miss Melia Rybicke, hailing from the Tyrol, is the handsomest gentlewoman in the Austrian empire. At least she was so pronounced at the national beauty competition, at which she won the first prize. This competition was restricted to women of title and the wives and daughters of military and professional men. Actresses and professional beauties were rigorously excluded.

Values Hair at $50,000.

New York.—Mrs. Clara Beddow of Elizabeth, N. J., is suing the Public Service Railway company to recover $50,000 for the loss of her hair.

She alleges that she fell from a car a year ago, receiving a scalp wound which necessitated the clipping of her tresses, and that they never grew in to their former length and beauty. A jury will pass upon their value.

FIGHT TO FINISH

HOUSE OF LARDS THE MOST PROMINENT QESTION NOW IN ISSUE.

OPPOSE AMERICAN CASH

Asquith and Balfour Have Both Announced Plan of Campaign—Will Be Short, Sharp and Decisive.

London, Nov. 19.—With the delivery of Premier Asquith's speech declaring the policy of the government, following as it did Balfour's speech outlining the Unionist policy early in the week, the two parties in the political contest have laid their cards on the table. The fight will be short and sharp and, from the attitude of the politicians who have already taken the platform, as bitter as it will be short.

When the failure of the veto conference was announced, all signs favored the government's candidates, just fresh from their success in the elections. Good trade returns increase the popularity of free trade while Unionists disorganized, had apparently lost heart, some of their newspapers even predicting their defeat should the election ensue. The approach of the dissolution of parliament, however, restored their confidence and although a section of the party, which a few days ago, advocated federal home rule, is finding it awkward to recant, the ranks generally have been reformed.

The house of lords naturally is the foremost question on which the election will be fought. A section of Unionists made up of old tories, is unwilling to accept Balfour's scheme for the reform of the upper chamber, particularly owing to the elimination of hereditary principles, but the influence of the men who comprise this section will have little effect.

A plank of importance in the Unionist platform is the opposition to home rule and the "use of American dollars to destroy the British constitution."

The latter has lost some force through the publication of a statement that a sum of only $75,000 was collected by the Irish leader, one-third of which came from Canada, the subscription list in that country being headed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, premier.

COUNT TOLSTOI DEAD.

Aged Novelist and Reformer Succumbs to Inevitable.

Astapova, Nov. 19.—Count Leo Tolstoi died peacefully this morning. Dr. Makovetsky and the other attending physicians and Countess Tolstoi were at his bedside when the end came. It was recognized long before that his case was hopeless and at 5 o'clock in the morning after the countess had been summoned and other members of the family had gathered in an adjoining room, the physicians issued a bulletin announcing that the activity of the heart had almost ceased and that Tolstoi's condition was extremely dangerous. Several of the physicians were greatly overcome by the approaching death of Russia's great writer.

Count Lyof Nikolaivitch Tolstoi, usually called Count Leo Tolstoi, novelist and social reformer, was born Aug. 28, 1828, at Yasnaya Poliana in the province of Tula, Russia. When 23 years old, he entered the army and served in the Caucasus and in the defense of Sebastopol against the British and French allied forces. He first made his reputation in literature by a series of vivid sketches written from Sebastopol. When he left the army, soon after the Crimean war, he devoted himself entirely to literature.

Insurrection in Mexico.

Mexico City, Mex., Nov. 19.—Reports from Puebla, where a revolutionary rioting occurred yesterday are that the town is quiet today. Similar reports are received from interior cities.

The estimates of number killed in the fighting vary from 100 to 170.

Strong forces of cavalry and infantry are patrolling the streets and pickets and sharpshooters occupy church towers. The revolutionary movement which began when the police attempted to break up a meeting of anti-re-electionists, appears to have ended with the capture of the home of Jose Cordan, who is credited with having headed the rebels. Cerdan is said to have escaped. He is a grandson of Gen. Miguel Alathiste, former governor of the state of Puebla.

American Sailor Stabbed.

Cherbourg, France, Nov. 19.—Patrick J. Fitzsimmons, a sailor from the battleship Louisiana, who was stabbed during a fight last night between white and colored bluejackets from the American fleet, died this afternoon. Benjamin Prim from Kansas, who also was wounded, is improving.

Cloudy in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 19.—Twelve minutes of sunshine in seven and one-half days is all that Pittsburg enjoyed from midnight Nov. 10 until noon yesterday, according to an announcement of the weather bureau last night. This is less than two minutes a day.

Suffragettes Released.

London, Nov. 19.—To their chagrin, 116 suffragettes who were arrested yesterday during their attempt to force an audience with Premier Asquith were discharged in Bow street police court today. The defendants had been released on bail last night. When they were arraigned today the attorney for the crown announced that Home Secretary Churchill had decided on the ground of public policy, that no benefit would be gained by proceeding with the prosecution. The willing martyrs to the cause of woman suffrage received this statement with hisses and boos.

The Duma Adjourns.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 21.—The duma adjourned today's session out of respect for Count Leo Tolstoi. The decision to adjourn was reached only after a wrangle, the members of the extreme right contending that to honor the memory of Count Tolstoi would be to challenge the Greek Catholic church It also was asserted that the duma was a state institution to which the count was especially opposed.

Queen of Belgium Ill.

RODE A HORSE TO COLLEGE

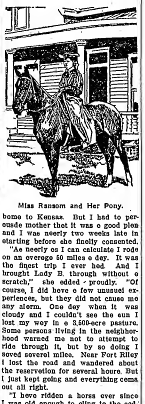
Lawrence, Kan.—Miss Mabel Edith Ransom arrived at Lawrence from her former home at Perry, Okla., after riding 350 miles on the back of her little two-year-old pony, Lady Barber. Ascending Mount Oread, the young woman left her horse long enough to register in the department of home economics at the school. Remounting, she rode to a house on Ohio street, where her mother has recently moved from Perry. Then she entered the regular state university classes in which she had enrolled.

The young woman decided to ride to Lawrence because of her great love for horseback riding and partly because of her love for the pet pony.

"There was no way I could bring her with me," she declares, "unless I shipped her in a stock car. I was afraid she might take ear fever or be injured during the trip, and finally hit upon the plan of riding from Oklahoma to Kansas. But I had to persuade mother that it was a good plan and I was nearly two weeks late in starting before she finally consented.



Miss Ransom and Her Pony.

"As nearly as I can calculate I rode on an average 50 miles a day. It was the finest trip I ever had. And I brought Lady B. through without a scratch," she added proudly. "Of course, I did have a few unusual experiences, but they did not cause me any alarm. One day when it was cloudy and I couldn't see the sun I lost my way in a 3,500-acre pasture. Some persons living in the neighborhood warned me not to attempt to ride through it, but by so doing I saved several miles. Near Fort Riley I lost the road and wandered about the reservation for several hours. But I just kept going and everything came out all right.

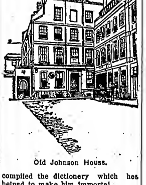
"I have ridden a horse ever since I was old enough to cling to the saddle, so I suppose I had more confidence in myself and my pony than had the thing been entirely new to me."

DICTIONARY WAS MADE HERE

Unless Steps Are Taken to Prevent It, Dr. Johnson's House Will Be Destroyed.

London.—To many American tourists the English seem to be a nation of beggars. His royal highness, the Prince of Teck, begs that you will subscribe to his pet hospital fund; old Harry, from the gutter, begs you to buy a boot-lace. Today we read the advertisement, "Wanted a millionaire," who will come forward and secure for the nation Doctor Johnson's house in Gough Square.

It was here that the men who defined a lexicographer as "a compiler of dictionaries, a harmless drudge," compiled the dictionary which has helped to make him immortal.



Old Johnson House.

Commissioned by the chief booksellers in London in 1747, for a fee of $7,500, the dictionary was completed in eight years. The attic of his house was fitted up like a counting house, in which he gave to his six copyists their several tasks. The words partly taken from other dictionaries and partly supplied by himself, having been first written down with a space left between them, he delivered in writing their etymologies, definitions and various significations. The authorities were copied from the books themselves, in which he had marked the passages with a lead pencil, the traces of which would be easily effaced.

Roast Python.

Paris.—Every year the Societe d'Acclimation de France holds a banquet in Paris at which strange dishes appear on the menu. This society was founded in 1854 and numbers some of the most illustrious men in France. This year the dish about which the most interest centers was furnished by two venerable pythons. The snakes came from Borneo 15 years ago, and each was considerably over ten feet long. There was some hesitation about tasting roast snake, but the president, Edmond Perrier, set the example, and the others took courage. The verdict was that python is something like eel, neither very good nor very bad, so the public has not missed much, after all.

Youthful Wisdom.

Father—Why did my little boy send his papa a letter with only a capital T written on the page while he was away?

Little Son—Because I thought you'd go around among your friends with it and say: "My boy is only four years old, and just see the capital letter he writes!"—Judge.

Now that the state of Washington has given the vote to women, the suffragets will have the strenuous task of "getting out the vote."

For a boy to have a few hard raps in his struggles in youth increases his equipment for bigger encounters later in life. Just watch us soak it to Michigan next year.

The senator who opposes reapportionment because to favor it will aid in legislating himself out of office, reduces the "position" he is presumed to occupy to a mere "job."

The twin city managers in placing the ban on the Salome show were probably acting in self-defense. Chicago has just "seen" Salome and is terribly shocked, and it takes some kind of a show to do that to Chicago.

An excuse that will be offered by certain members of the legislature for opposing reapportionment is that to give northern Minnesota more representation will be to give to the steel trust added political power. That is, of course, a debatable question and has no bearing on the real reapportionment agitation. The talk is simply an evasion. The reapportionment demand stands on its merits. In a government presumed to be representative northern Minnesota has only meagre representation. The reapportionment demand is going down to the legislature next winter and is going to find out just where every senator and representative stands on this representative government idea.

Southern Minnesota exchanges commenting on northern Minnesota's demand for reapportionment and other needed legislation give expression to the opinion that the demands of northern Minnesota are just and fair, but that the legislature will back up in a corner and refuse to act until 1914. That northern Minnesota is taxed without representation is admitted, but to provide for reapportionment at once would be to legislate senators who were elected for four year terms last fall out of office. That, of course, is no reason for refusing to act, and is a very poor excuse. Northern Minnesota is not asking for what is not its due; no favors are asked. The north country has been unfairly treated for years, and the demand at this time is that justice, long withheld, shall at last be given.

THE COMMON CAUSE.

As we were saying when we were interrupted by the late unpleasantness—if so amiable and docile and sluggish an affair as the recent campaign can be called an unpleasantness—it is time to remember that the word is "All eyes on Brainerd."

The third and most important meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association will be held at Brainerd Dec. 1 and 2. and all northern Minnesota should be there. Every county, every city, every village, every township, every farming community, ought to be represented at that meeting, for questions that vitally concern farm, home and city will be discussed there with a view to forming plans for tangible and aggressive action.

The Northern Minnesota Development association has proved itself the biggest institution ever devised for the common good in northern Minnesota. It has concentrated the scattered forces of northern Minnesota. It has developed the statin power of northern Minnesota and generated from it a dynamic force. It has knitted all sections of northern Minnesota together with a common cause. It has made reapportionment a word known in every part of the state. It has forced reapportionment into the platforms of both the parties, so that no public official can evade his duty of justice toward the disfranchised thousands of northern Minnesota without treachery to his party and betrayal of its pledges. It has woven into the plaforms of both parties positive declarations for positive efforts toward the development of northern Minnesota and toward uplifting from the shoulders of the settlers the heavy burdens placed upon them by the state's neglect.

All this the Northern Minnesota Development association has achieved, and its age is young, its work hardly begun.

At Brainernd plans will be formed for marching, with this newly united force, upon the state legislature to demand justice. The demand will not be made in any preemptory or impudent form; neither will the approach be made with bending knees and curving backs. If necessary it may be called a "request" instead of a "demand;" but it will be a self-respecting and confident request, made firm by the knowledge that the cause is just.

The real issues of the legislature at the session begining in January will be justice to northern Minnesota in the matter of reapportionment and justice to the whole state in the matter of dealing with state lands. The plan of handling state lands needs a thorough overhauling and changes amounting to complete revolution.

Northern Minnesota is asking no charity. It is asking only justice. When it asks the state to use the contents of its treasury to improve and develop its landed possessions of the north, it does not ask for a donation, but for a wise investment that will return handsome profits to the state.

These things are the meaning of the Brainerd meeting, which will be held in a short time. The session of the legislature is not far away, and plans must be made for the effective presentation of the case of northern Minnesota. To that end every section and every community of northern Minnesota should be represented at Brainerd. —Duluth Herald.

COADJUTORS' REMARKS.

"If all that prevents the senators voting for reapportionment is the prospective loss of salary," says R. C. Dunn, "then for one I am ready to introduce a bill for an appropriation of $60,000 to pay them off at the close of two years. If it's salary they want they can have no further objection if we who favor reapportionment are ready to vote with them for it. If there is any other reason why they don't want reapportionment, the people ought to know it. If they have tied themselves up I believe in giving them an opportunity to explain where and how."

Anyway, if we had women suffrage, we could expect to see a few of the political plums fall into the laps of some of the peaches, and that would help some.—Walker Pilot.

The Rule of Three.

Professor McGoozie—It is astonishing how little the young people of the present day know of mathematics. For example, Miss Turtun—or you, Mr. Sparks—do you remember what the rule of three is?

Miss Turtun—Oh, yes, professor; I haven't forgotten that, I think. "Three is a crowd." That right?—Chicago Tribune.

A Hard World.

"Barker is awfully discontented."

"What's the matter with him? He earns enough to keep his family together, doesn't he?"

"Yes, but he wants to make enough to keep them apart."—Philadelphia Ledger.

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S.S.S. to any who are likewise afflicted.
MRS. LUCY GOODING
Pollock, La.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Shorthand Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All Fargo banks and 685 others employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers, stenographers or cashiers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement.

Our $50.00 Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk or bookkeeper. The new $85.00 course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court, Third Judicial District and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

The D. B. C. has built a magnificent new building (30,000 square feet) is seated with roll-top desks, has 60 typewriters, adding machines, billers, money changers, etc. Pupils deal with each other and with magnificiently equipped offices, using aluminum money. The work is fascinating and practical. The Northwest has "no other school like the D. B. C." For catalogue and full information about any department, address

One bottle did me more good than all the others put together, as they only poisoned my system. Peruna cured me. The Skeleton in the Closet

A TRUE STORY OF THE SECRET SERVICE

By COL. H. C. WHITLEY

Former Chief U. S. Secret Service

I HAD MET the judge frequently and felt quite well acquainted with him. He was a politician of note and a member of the president's cabinet. Because of his prominence and his one-time important connection with the government, I shall forbear the mention of his name. It would be familiar to every reader.

One day I received a message from him requesting me to call at his office at my earliest convenience. Presenting myself I was given a private interview. After a little preliminary conversation the judge said that he wanted to talk to me in regard to a personal matter. He needed my assistance in an affair of much concern to himself and wife. He then related at some length the history of his family troubles. There was a skeleton in his closet. He had sent for me believing that I might be able to devise some measure of relief.

"My wife," he said, "is very much worried and quite prostrated with grief. She is in such a nervous state of mind I fear she will break down altogether." His eyes filled with tears as he explained the cause of their great trouble. "She was a widow with an only son when I married her. This son, notwithstanding his moral training and tender care, has turned out to be an unmitigated villain and a constant menace to our peace of mind. He seems to be heartless and devoid of decency and respect for our position. Besides, he is a thief. Only a short time ago he was arrested in Chicago, taken to Baltimore and charged with committing a robbery in a house of ill repute. I was compelled to settle the case or suffer the disgrace of an exposure. Wine and women are his hobbies. He is reckless in the use of money and will resort to any means to obtain it. Even now I am furnishing the money wherewith to gratify his vicious appetite. God knows what he will do next! We are living in constant fear that he will do something to publicly disgrace us. Now, if there is any way that he can be got out of the country without publicity, if you can devise any plan to get rid of him without killing him or sending him to the penitentiary, it will meet with my approval. I think it is a case where severe measures would be entirely justifiable. Just think of it! The scapegrace has gone so far in his depravity as to escort a woman of known bad character to his mother's receptions."

My sympathies once aroused and a promise made, I felt bound to take some action. It appeared a difficult undertaking. The fellow was to be got rid of, but just how was the question that puzzled my brain. I had read of many strange disappearances of persons who were never afterwards heard of, but the manner of their disappearance was not always clear. It may have been a voluntary act, mental aberration or the result of a crime. I prided myself upon my skill in devising ways and means to accomplish an end, but the case in hand, after some deliberation, appeared somewhat like perpetrating a wrong deed for the purpose of accomplishing a good result.

If the story told by the judge was true, there would be but little difficulty in landing the rascal in the penitentiary for the crimes he was committing almost daily; but a measure of this kind would mean exposure and disgrace. To put him away by foul means was out of the question. He may have deserved a sharp medicine, and the world may have been better off without him, but there was no thought of doing him bodily harm. The idea was to dispose of him and slide him out of the country tenderly. The judge wanted to get rid of him, but could suggest no way. It was a delicate case to handle. I knew that the judge was a conscientious and humane man and that he meant no wrong, and it was difficult for me to understand the course I could safely pursue.

As I turned to leave the judge's office his wife entered the room. I was introduced, and cast my eyes upon her face. It did not appear quite new to me. Could I be mistaken? Had I met her before? As the possible recognition did not appear mutual I was unable to place her.

The judge turned away to converse with his disbursing clerk. The wife, who had evidently been informed in regard to the purpose of my interview with the judge, requested me to be seated. Placing her hand upon my arm she smiled pleasantly, while assuring me of her faith in my ability to do something to help them out of the deep trouble they were in. She spoke bitterly of her son and of the many indignities he had heaped upon her. She wanted to be freed from him. The manner in which he was to be disposed of did not seem to give her much concern. She wished him banished in some far-away country; if he were dead, she would feel relieved.

While relating her troubles she chanced to mention the name of her first husband. On the instant I recognized her as an old acquaintance. I had known her when she was a rosy-cheeked young woman some twenty-five years before. She was then living with her husband in a little town in northeastern Ohio. This was before she became the wife of the judge. Her first marriage was said to be a runaway match. She was a remarkably beautiful woman then, but there was a cloud hanging over her life. I cannot say what it might have been that caused gossiping women to shake their heads and whisper as she passed by. Shortly after she gave birth to a son she left the village. I do not know just where she went, but it was shortly afterwards rumored that she had been granted a divorce.

She was now cutting a large figure in society and often spoken of as the handsomest woman in the capitol city.

Her husband, the judge, was up to this time quite successful in political life. Possessed of considerable brain force and much amiability of character, he might have risen still higher had not the intrigues set on foot by his ambitious wife contributed to pull him down. She planned schemes to exalt him and to acquire wealth. In making these efforts she aroused the jealousies of others and made the judge quite unpopular with the leading politicians. Her misdirected zeal not only crushed the political prospects of her husband, but finally resulted in expelling her from Washington society.

I was furnished a photograph of her profligate stepson. He was a fine-looking young man, with wavy hair, keen blue eyes and rosy cheeks; in fact, much like his mother in her youth. His face was indicative of criminal tendencies. I was told that he was a difficult man to approach, that he did not care for the companionship of men. This being the case I was at a loss to determine how to reach him. It was necessary to introduce a stranger in order to carry out the plot I had in view.

HIS LANK BODY WAS LAID UPON THE BED AND STRIPPED OF ITS VALUABLES

THE FIRST THING THAT MET THEIR EYES WAS A BILL OFFERING A REWARD FOR THEIR ARREST

THE STEP-SON WAS ALMOST PARALYZED WITH FEAR AS JONES SLIPPED FROM HIS CHAIR TO THE FLOOR

After pondering over the matter for some days I hit upon an expedient that I believed would dispose of the young man without public exposure or resorting to crime. There was in my employ at this time a man whom I shall call Reed. If ever there was a born confidence man he was the one; an actor that could assume a part, live it and play it through with a face as solemn as the graveyard; never vicious, but ever apparently in earnest while practicing a deception for misleading only those who ought to be misled. I had found him on all occasions to be a valuable assistant in furthering the ends of justice.

Reed hailed from the south, had just arrived in the city and was in quest of a private lodging place. The judge's stepson was now occupying an elegant suite of rooms in a fashionable location. He was so completely captivated by Reed's assumed manners and apparent wealth that he was delighted at the opportunity afforded to secure a roommate. The detective accepted the offer made by his new friend and soon found himself in quite a novel and dangerous situation. He was the companion of a thief whose exploits were liable to involve both in trouble.

He had led his roommate to believe that he was himself engaged in questionable transactions and that New York was the place to operate in. "There," said he, "are chances to make big hauls." The judge's stepson took to a suggestion of this kind like a duck to water and was highly elated on account of the proposed trip. He no doubt imagined a broader field for the exercise of his own peculiar talent. On their arrival at New York they registered under assumed names at the Merchants' hotel on Courtland street.

For several days following they strolled about the city, taking in the sights and waiting for something to turn up. While walking along Broadway, near the old Astor hotel, they chanced to pass a middle-aged man who was gazing about in an uncertain sort of way. His dress and manner gave him the appearance of a green one from the rural districts, presumably from some place out west.

"Here," said Reed in an undertone, "is the very fellow we are looking for. Let us try a hand on him. I will make him think I have met him before." Reed now stepped up and accosted the green one with an air of assumed familiarity. Seizing him by the hand he said: "How do you do, Mr. Glick? I am so glad to see you." The verdant man responded: "You are mistaken, sir; my name is Jones, and I live at Fort Wayne, Indiana." "Never mind the name," said Reed, "I got the names mixed, but I remember now where I met you. You used to run a livery stable at Kokomo."

"Yes, I did."

"Then of course you remember me. I am the man that sold pumps and kept my team at your stable. You and I have taken many drinks together."

"Oh, yes," drawled Mr. Jones; "what on earth are you doing in New York?"

"Just looking around and having a good time. Let's go and take something."

"Come along, Jones. Let us go around to our hotel," said Reed. The trio went to the Merchants. Jones accepted an invitation to go to the room of his friends.

"What is your favorite drink?" asked Reed.

"Plain brandy," said Jones.

"I will go down and bring up a bottle." As Reed moved away he winked slyly to the judge's stepson. After an absence of some thirty minutes or more Reed returned with the brandy. He pulled the cork. While Jones was looking out of the window he slipped a small vial out of his pocket and, giving his partner an opportunity to see it, he turned the contents into the bottle of brandy. He gave the bottle a shake and set it down on the table. The judge's stepson's face flushed and there was a tremor in his voice. He seemed to comprehend the noxious power of the venomous ingredient that had been poured into the bottle. Reed appeared self-possessed and proficient in the art of deceiving and bold and bad enough to commit any crime, while the young man was evidently greatly frightened—not because of any compunctions of conscience, but for the reason that he was, as was afterwards shown, a natural born coward. He possessed none of the elements and rugged force of an assassin. He seemed to have a nervous apprehension that he was wading in water too deep and dangerous. He was heartless enough, but somehow lacked the nerve to perform.

Step by step Jones became drowsy. The stepson strove to rally him to his senses. Jones closed his eyes. What might have been a phantom of overheated imagination now became a fearful reality. The stepson was now almost paralyzed with fear as Jones slipped from his chair to the floor.

Was he dead or alive? He uttered a low and suppressed moan as his lank and livid body was laid upon the bed and stripped of all its valuables. The stepson, thoroughly in earnest, wanted to take Jones' overcoat, but Reed said it would be dangerous, as it might lead to detection.

I now leave the horrors of this occasion to the imagination of the reader.

The two survivors suddenly left the hotel and crossed over to Jersey City and took lodging at Taylor's hotel, where they registered under assumed names, as they had done previously at the Merchants'. It was late in the evening when they went to bed.

They had left the Merchants' hotel late in the afternoon. Jones, the supposed drugged countryman, was not quite as dead as the judge's stepson thought him to be. He, too, was a skilled pretender.

Soon after his entertainers had taken their departure he, possum-like, came to life, got up and took a drink from the brandy bottle that was left upon the table, and made his way at once to the government secret service office, where he told the story of his adventure and received further instructions. This so-called Jones was a detective of marked ability. He could assume almost any character and deceive the best educated criminal, yet withal an honest, faithful servant to the government.

At an early hour on the following morning at Taylor's hotel Reed pretended to be taken suddenly sick with a cramp in his stomach. He left his roommate and went below. A short time afterwards he rushed back into the bedroom and informed the judge's stepson with a trembling voice that they must get out of the place in a hurry or they would be arrested. Reed said that while downstairs he had torn a slip from a newspaper. He handed it to the judge's stepson, who, on glancing at it hastily, at once sprang out of bed.

It was a sensational article and bore the appearance of having been clipped from a newspaper. As a matter of fact, however, it had been printed at the New York Tribune job office. It was a nice piece of deception and read as follows:

A Brutal Murder and Robbery.

Another of those outrageous and dastardly murders which have so recently startled the community occurred in this city yesterday afternoon, the particulars of which are as follows: It appears that shortly after dark last evening a well dressed man, apparently thirty-five years of age, was found by the police lying near the foot of Courtland street in an insensible condition. He was taken to the police station, where restoratives were administered, and when he had revived sufficiently he stated that his name was P. R. Jones and that he was from Fort Wayne, Ind.

Mr. Jones was removed to the city hospital last evening, where he became delirious and died about nine o'clock. The police are on the track of the murderers, who are supposed to be from Baltimore or Washington, as the clerk at the hotel states that they came in just after the arrival of the Washington train. The clerk is positive he can identify them.

A frightful ghost had risen and was standing in its most horrible form before the now half-crazed stepson. The rope of the hangman was looming up before his eyes. He did not even take time to wash his face, so great was his anxiety to leave New York behind him. Even the very air he breathed seemed tainted with the foul odor of his crime. It was thought to be dangerous to travel by rail at first, and they started away on foot, and finally concluded to make their way to New Orleans.

Reed was, of course, the ruling spirit and was carrying out the plan they had agreed upon. They doubled back and forth with the object of putting imaginary pursuers off the track. Reed was seeking delay for the purpose of gaining time. When the pair arrived at New Orleans about the first thing that met their eyes was a handbill posted in the depot describing the fugitives and offering a reward for their arrest and conviction. Staring at the bill with beads of perspiration starting upon his brow the judge's stepson nearly collapsed. He was careworn, downhearted and ready to speed away as swift as steam could carry him. In the course of time the fugitives arrived at Brownsville, Tex. From this point I received a note from Reed saying that they intended to cross the Rio Grande and work their way to the City of Mexico.

To the minds of the detectives who played their part in this case the whole affair appeared a farce.

After a time Reed returned from Mexico. He had given his companion the slip and was quite positive in his opinion that the judge's stepson would never dare show his face in the United States. He declared the man was about the greatest coward he had ever met with.

Reed was correct in his opinion, as the fugitive, so far as I know, has never been heard of. He certainly did not appear in Washington to further annoy the judge and his wife. He may still be running from a Nemesis that will never overtake him.

Enemies Necessary

Have you enemies? Go straight on and mind them not. If they block up your path, walk around them, and do your duty regardless of spite. A man who has no enemies is seldom good for anything—he is made of that kind of material which is so easily worked that it resists nothing, while every one who thinks for himself, and speaks what he thinks, is always sure to have enemies. They are as necessary to him as fresh air; they keep him alive, active. A celebrated character who was surrounded by enemies used to remark. "They are sparks which, if you do not blow, will go out of themselves." Let this be your feeling, while endeavoring to live down the scandal of those who are bitter against you. If you stop to dispute with them, you do but as they desire, and open the way for more abuse. Let them talk—there will be a reaction if you perform your duty, and hundreds who were once alienated from you, will flock to you and acknowledge their error. Follow this advice, and you will never have cause to regret it.—A. F. H.

Somebody took the rope off the bell in the fire engine house to use for a clothesline, and now, when there is a fire, the constable has to climb up into the tower and ring the bell with a hammer. Somebody took the hammer the other day, and, when Hank Purdy's corncrib ketched fire, the constable had to hurry down to Hilliker's store for to borry a hammer. Hilliker had lent his hammer to Deacon Renfrew, who lives four miles out in the country, and by the time the constable had got there and hunted around in the barn for the hammer and got back to the engine house, the angry elements had done their worst and Hank's corncrib was a mass of smoldering ruins.—Judge's Library.

Schurz Was Sure of Him.

Carl Schurz was dining one night with a man who had written a book of poems, so called, and who was pleased with himself.

The poet was discoursing on the time-worn topic of politics of the men who take office.

"I consider politics and politicians beneath my notice," he said. "I do not care for office. I wouldn't be a senator or cabinet officer, and I doubt if I could be tempted by the offer of the presidency. For the matter of that, I would rather be known as a third-rate poet than a first-rate statesman."

"Well, aren't you?" Schurz shouted at him.

"Lame Leg Well"

"I wish to say that I have used Sloan's Liniment on a lame leg that has given me much trouble for six months. It was so bad that I couldn't walk sometimes for a week. I tried doctors' medicine and had a rubber bandage for my leg, and bought everything that I heard of, but they all did me no good, until at last I was persuaded to try Sloan's Liniment. The first application helped it, and in two weeks my leg was well."—A. L. HUNTER, of Hunter, Ala.

The MAN in LOWER TEN

AUTHOR of the CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

I Go to Pittsburg.

McKnight is gradually taking over the criminal end of the business. I never liked it, and since the strange case of the man in lower ten, I have been a bit squeamish. Given a case like that, where you can build up a network of clews that absolutely incriminate three entirely different people, only one of whom can be guilty, and your faith in circumstantial evidence dies of overcrowding. I never see a shivering, white-faced wretch in the prisoners' dock that I do not hark back with shuddering horror to the strange events on the Pullman car Ontario, between Washington and Pittsburg, on the night of September 9, last.

McKnight could tell the story a great deal better than I, although he cannot spell three consecutive words correctly. But, while he has imagination and humor, he is lazy.

"It didn't happen to me, anyhow," he protested, when I put it up to him. "And nobody cares for second-hand thrills. Besides, you want the unvarnished and ungarnished truth, and I'm no hand for that. I'm a lawyer."

So am I, although there have been times when my assumption in that particular has been disputed. I am unmarried, and just old enough to dance with the grown-up little sisters of the girls I used to know. I am fond of outdoors, prefer horses to the aforesaid grown-up little sisters, and without sentiment ("am" crossed out and "was" substituted.—Ed.) and completely ruled and frequently routed by my housekeeper, an elderly widow.

In fact, of all the men of my acquaintance, I was probably the most prosaic, the least adventurous, the one man in a hundred who would be likely to go without a deviation from the normal through the orderly procession of the seasons, summer suits to winter flannels, golf to bridge.

So it was a queer freak of the demons of chance to perch on my unsusceptible 30-year-old chest, tie me up with a crime, ticket me with a love affair, and start me on that sensational and not always respectable journey that ended so surprisingly less than three weeks later in the firm's private office. It had been the most remarkable period of my life. I would neither give it up nor live it again under any inducement, and yet all that I lost was some 20 yards off my drive!

It was really McKnight's turn to make the next journey. I had a tournament at Chevy Chase for Saturday, and a short yacht cruise planned for Sunday, and when a man has been grinding at statute law for a week, he needs relaxation. But McKnight begged off. It was not the first time he had shirked that summer in order to run down to Richmond, and I was surly about it. But this time he had a new excuse.

"I wouldn't be able to look after the business if I did go," he said. He has a sort of wide-eyed frankness that makes one ashamed to doubt him. "I'm always car sick crossing the mountains. It's a fact, Lollie. Seesawing over the peaks does it. Why, crossing the Alleghany mountains has the gulf stream to Bermuda beaten to a frazzle."

So I gave him up finally and went home to pack. He came later in the evening with his machine, the Cannonball, to take me to the station, and he brought the forged notes in the Bronson case.

"Guard them with your life," he warned me. "They are more precious than honor. Sew them in your chest protector, or wherever people keep valuables. I never keep any. I'll not be happy until I see Gentleman Andy doing the lockstep."

He sat down on my clean collars, found my cigarettes and struck a match on the mahogany bed post with one movement.

"Where's the Pirate?" he demanded. The Pirate is my housekeeper, Mrs. Klopton, a very worthy woman, so labeled—and libeled—because of a ferocious pair of eyes and what McKnight called a buccaneering nose. I quietly closed the door into the hall.

"Keep your voice down, Richey," I said. "She is looking for the evening paper to see if it is going to rain. She has my raincoat and an umbrella waiting in the hall."

The collars being damaged beyond repair, he left them and went to the window. He stood there for some time, staring at the blackness that represented the wall of the house next door.

"It's raining now," he said over his shoulder, and closed the window and the shutters. Something in his voice made me glance up, but he was watching me, his hands idly in his pockets.

"Who lives next door?" he inquired in a perfunctory tone, after a pause. I was packing my razor.

"House is empty," I returned absently. "If the landlord would put it in some sort of shape—"

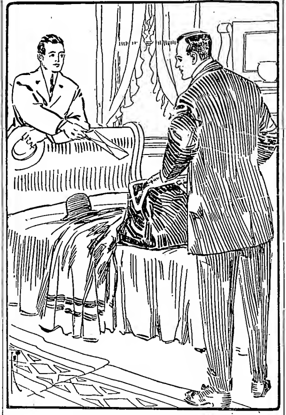
"Did you put those notes in your pocket?" he broke in.

"Yes." I was impatient. "Along with my certificates of registration, baptism and vaccination. Whoever wants them will have to steal my coat to get them."

"Well, I would move them, if I were you. Somebody in the next house was confoundedly anxious to see where you put them. Somebody right at that window opposite."

I scoffed at the idea, but nevertheless I moved the papers, putting them in my traveling bag, well down at the bottom. McKnight watched me uneasily.

"I have a hunch that you are going to have trouble," he said, as I locked the alligator bag. "Darned if I like starting anything important on Friday."



"Guard This with Your Life."

"You have a congenital dislike to start anything on any old day," I retorted, still sore from my lost Saturday. "And if you knew the owner of that house as I do you would know that if there was any one at that window he is paying rent for the privilege."

Mrs. Klopton rapped at the door and spoke discreetly from the hall.

"Did Mr. McKnight bring the evening paper?" she inquired.

"Sorry, but I didn't, Mrs. Klopton," McKnight called. "The subs won, three to nothing." He listened, grinning, as she moved away with little irritated rustles of her black silk gown.

I finished my packing, changed my collar and was ready to go. Then very cautiously we put out the light and opened the shutters. The window across was merely a deeper black in the darkness. It was closed and dirty. And yet, probably owing to Richey's suggestion, I had an uneasy sensation of eyes staring across at me. The next moment we were at the door, poised for flight.

"We'll have to run for it," I said in a whisper. "She's down there with a package of some sort, sandwiches probably. And she's threatened me with overshoes for a month. Ready now!"

I had a kaleidoscopic view of Mrs. Klopton in the lower hall, holding out an armful of such traveling impediments as she deemed essential, while beside her, Euphemia, the colored housemaid, grinned over a white-wrapped box.

"Awfully sorry—no time—back Sunday," I panted over my shoulder. Then the door closed and the car was moving away.

McKnight bent forward and stared at the facade of the empty house next door as we passed. It was black, staring, mysterious, as empty buildings are apt to be.

"I'd like to hold a post-mortem on that corpse of a house," he said thoughtfully. "By George, I've a notion to get out and take a look."

"Somebody after the brass pipes," I scoffed. "House has been empty for a year."

With one hand on the steering wheel McKnight held out the other for my cigarette case. "Perhaps," he said; "but I don't see what she would want with brass pipe."

"A woman!" I laughed outright. "You have been looking too hard at the picture in the back of your watch, that's all. There's an experiment like that. If you stare long enough—"

But McKnight was growing sulky; he sat looking rigidly ahead, and he did not speak again until he brought the Cannonball to a stop at the station. Even then it was only a perfunctory remark. He went through the gate with me, and with five minutes to spare, we lounged and smoked in the train shed. My mind had slid away from my surroundings and had wandered to a polo pony that I couldn't afford and intended to buy anyhow. Then McKnight shook off his taciturnity.

"For heaven's sake, don't look so martyred," he burst out; "I know you've done all the traveling this summer. I know you're missing a game to-morrow. But don't be a patient mother; confound it, I have to go to Richmond on Sunday. I—I want to see a girl."

"Oh, don't mind me," I observed politely. "Personally, I wouldn't change places with you. What's her name—North? South?"

"West," he snapped. "Don't try to be funny. And all I have to say, Blakeley, is that if you ever fall in love I hope you make an egregious ass of yourself."

In view of what followed, this came rather close to prophecy.

The trip west was without incident. I played bridge with a furniture dealer from Grand Rapids, a sales agent for a Pittsburg iron firm and a young professor from an eastern college. I won three rubbers out of four, finished what cigarettes McKnight had left me and went to bed about one o'clock. It was growing cooler, and the rain had ceased. Once, toward morning, I wakened with a start, for no apparent reason, and sat bolt upright. I had an uneasy feeling that some one had been looking at me, the same sensation I had experienced earlier in the evening at the window. But I could feel the bag with the notes, between me and the window, and with my arm thrown over it for security, I lapsed again into slumber. Later, when I tried to piece together the fragments of that journey, I remembered that my coat, which had been folded and placed beyond my restless tossing, had been rescued in the morning from a heterogeneous jumble of blankets, evening papers and cravat, had been shaken out with profanity and donned with wrath. At the time, nothing occurred to me but the necessity of writing to the Pullman Company and asking them if they ever traveled in their own cars. I even formulated some of the letter.

I was more cheerful after I had had a cup of coffee in the Union station. It was too early to attend to business, and I lounged in the restaurant and hid behind the morning papers. As I had expected, they had got hold of my visit and its object. On the first page was a staring announcement that the forged papers in the Bronson case had been brought to Pittsburg. Underneath, a telegram from Washington stated that Lawrence Blakeley of Blakeley & McKnight had left for Pittsburg the night before, and that, owing to the approaching trial of the Bronson case and the illness of John Gilmore, the Pittsburg millionaire, who was the chief witness for the prosecution, it was supposed that the visit was intimately concerned with the trial.

I looked around apprehensively. There were no reporters yet in sight, and thankful to have escaped notice I paid for my breakfast and left. At the cabstand I chose the least dilapidated hansom I could find, and giving the driver the address of the Gilmore residence, in the East end, I got in.

I was just in time. As the cab turned and rolled off, a slim young man in a straw hat separated himself from a little group of men and hurried toward us.

"Hey! Wait a minute there!" he called, breaking into a trot.

But the cabby did not hear, or perhaps did not care to. We jogged comfortably along, to my relief, leaving the young man far behind. I avoid reporters on principle, having learned long ago that I am an easy mark for a clever interviewer.

It was perhaps nine o'clock when I left the station. Our way was along the boulevard which hugged the side of one of the city's great hills. Far below, to the left, lay the railroad tracks and the seventy times seven looming stacks of the mills. The white mist of the river, the grays and blacks of the smoke blended into a half revealing haze, dotted here and there with fire. It was unlovely, tremendous. Whistler might have painted it with its pathos, its majesty, but he would have missed what made it infinitely suggestive—the rattle and roar of iron on iron, the rumble of wheels, the throbbing heat, against the ears, of fire and heat and brawn welding prosperity.

Something of this I voiced to the grim old millionaire who was responsible for at least part of it. He was propped up in bed in his East end home, listening to the market reports read by a nurse, and he smiled a little at my enthusiasm.

"I can't see much beauty in it myself," he said. "But it's our hedge of prosperity. The full dinner pail here means a nose that looks like a flue. Pittsburg without smoke wouldn't be Pittsburg, any more than New York prohibition would be New York. Sit down for a few minutes, Mr. Blakeley. Now, Miss Gardner, Westinghouse Electric."

The nurse resumed her reading in a monotonous voice. She read literally and without understanding, using initial and abbreviations as they came. But the shrewd old man followed her easily.

As the nurse droned along, I found myself looking curiously at a photograph in a silver frame on the bedside table. It was the picture of a girl in white, with her hands clasped loosely before her. Against the dark background her figure stood out slim and young. Perhaps it was the rather grim environment, possibly it was my mood, but although as a general thing photographs of young girls make no appeal to me, this one did. I found my eyes straying back to it. By a little finesse I even made out the name written across the corner, "Alison."

Mr. Gilmore lay back among his pillows and listened to the nurse's listless voice. But he was watching me from under his heavy eyebrows, for when the reading was over, and we were alone, he indicated the picture with a gesture.

"I keep it there to remind myself that I am an old man," he said. "That is my granddaughter, Alison West."

I expressed the customary polite surprise, at which, finding me responsive, he told me his age with a chuckle of pride. More surprise, this time genuine. From that we went to what he ate for breakfast and did not eat for luncheon, and then to his reserve power, which at 65 became a matter for thought. And so, in a wide circle, back to where we started, the picture.

"Father was a rascal," John Gilmore said, picking up the frame. "The happiest day of my life was when I knew he was safely dead in bed and not hanged. If the child had looked like him, I—well, she doesn't. She's a Gilmore, every inch. Supposed to look like me."

"Very noticeably," I agreed soberly.

I had produced the notes by that time, and replacing the picture Mr. Gilmore gathered his spectacles from beside it. He went over the four notes methodically, examining each carefully and putting it down before he picked up the next. Then he leaned back and took off his glasses.

"They're not so bad," he said thoughtfully. "Not so bad. But I never saw them before. That's my unofficial signature. I am inclined to think"—he was speaking partly to himself—"to think that he has got hold of a letter of mine, probably to Alison. Bronson was a friend of her rapscallion of a father."

I took Mr. Gilmore's deposition and put it into my traveling bag with the forged notes. When I saw them again, almost three weeks later, they were unrecognizable, a mass of charred paper on a copper ash tray. In the interval other and bigger things had happened: The Bronson forgery case had shrunk beside the greater and more imminent mystery of the man in lower ten. And Alison West had come into the story and into my life.

NO ESCAPE FROM THE TUNAS

Flying Fish and Sardines Rounded Up in Schools and Devoured by Hundreds.

I have observed some curious scenes at sea, but never have I seen fear so forcibly expressed as by a school of flying fishes exhausted and at the mercy of the voracious tunas, declares a correspondent of the Outing Magazine. I have had them gather about my boat and cling to its keel as closely as they could, while the air was full of leaping tunas and soaring flying fish. At such times when a school of sardines is rounded up the fishes are so terrified that men have rowed up to them and scooped them in by the pailful.

I have stood in a boat when the air seemed literally full of fish, the tunas coming up with a rush from below, and endeavoring to catch the flying fishes with tremendous leaps. Sometimes they take them in midair; again they strike and knock them higher, bleeding or dead, or miss them altogether. But whatever the result, the tuna is never displaced; it makes the same spectacular jump, utterly unlike that of the swordfish, shark, or tarpon, returning to the sea head first with a graceful [illegible].

Mr. Grady will handle the business which Mr. Mayhury has in hand at present at Crookston, and after the latter leaves to locate in Seattle will handle all the new business which develops in Mr. Mayhury's practice there, but which can be handled best from Crookston. Mr. Mayhury will visit this section as business requires, but Mr. Grady will handle practically all the business.

Mr. Grady has been a leading attorney of Red Lake county for many years and served several years as county attorney. He has been prominently identified with the fight to retain the county seat for Red Lake Falls and is an attorney of recognized ability. Many friends of the Gradys in this city will regret the announcement that they are to leave and will wish them success in their new home.

New Soo Line Town.

Oklee, situated east of Brooks on the Thief River Falls-Duluth line of the Soo railroad is fast developing into a thriving little village. All southern Red Lake county talks Oklee, thinks Oklee, and boosts Oklee, and the spirit is contagious. This little town is situated but two or three miles from Lambert and is the first station east of Plummer. Situated as it is in a prosperous community, thrift and enterprise are as essential and evident in its make up as can be.

At present there are six stores, two banks, two hotels and numerous other business concerns, all backed by men of means and all enjoying a brisk business. Oklee has a large territory to draw from and the time is not far distant when the town will rightfully take its place with the rest of the prosperous villages in the county.

To the Public.

I have decided to engage in the meat business in Red Lake Falls and on Monday will open an up-to-date market in the Boughton building, two doors north of the Bijou. It will always be my aim to handle the best there is in the meat line, and to get it to my patrons with the best possible service. Relying on this platform, I ask your patronage. —Aris Lambert, Prop.

What He Was.

A man of letters—of poor physique—recently knocked a policeman down and is still at large to tell the tale. It was on the bank of the upper Thames, where a notice bids pedestrians to enter the towing path by the roadway. The man of letters, however, knew the short cut and took it, running into a huge Berkshire constable. "See that notice board?" remarked the constable, blocking the narrow path. The man of letters looked, considered and replied. "But you see I'm not a pedestrian." The constable considered him from his hat to his boots and back again. "Why, what are you then?" he asked. "I'm a Congregationalist," said the man of letters. The constable dropped.—London Chronicle.

THIS CONVENTION IS DIFFERENT

First Ever Held Solely for Discussion of Political Principles

An unusual political convention is to be held in Minneapolis Jan. 4, 1911. It is a convention of the progressive republicans of the state and is called solely for the consideration of political questions. That is something new in political conventions. The call is signed by many prominent men in the state and is of sufficient interest to warrant its publication as follows:

The Progressive Republicans of Minnesota are waging a vigorous fight within their party for clean government and popular rule. This is an uprising that is spontaneous and not the result of any pre-arranged leadership or plan. It springs from causes that are deep seated and common to the whole state.

The voters of Minnesota are driving special interests from the control of the state government. They are driving business out of politics and politics out of business. They are restoring to themselves the power guaranteed in the state constitution.

The essentials of success in this struggle comprize a complete organization of the people, together with such progressive legislation as will give the people an equal opportunity with predatory interests.

It is deemed wise and necessary that Progressive Republicans from all parts of the state shall convene for careful consideration of the best means of securing these results. With this purpose in view the Progressive Republican Leagues of St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Stillwater have, through a joint committee, arranged for a convention to be held in Minneapolis on the fourth day of January, 1911, and a banquet to be held in St. Paul on the evening of the same date.

The committee signing this call therefore extends an invitation to the Progressive Republicans of the state to be well represented at this convention and banquet.

This is the first political convention ever held in the northwest solely for the purpose of considering political principles. It is the hope of the committee that every Progressive Republican in the state will co-operate to make this movement a success.

The Company's Policy

Mr. A. S. Huey, vice-president in charge of operated properties for H. M. Byllesby & Company, Chicago, expresses the sentiment of that large organization as strongly in favor of the tungsten lamp. Electric service properties are operated by Byllesby & Company in forty-two municipalities in the Central, Southern and Western states. Mr. Huey is decidedly of the opinion that the tungsten lamp has been a great benefit to the industry. He says that central station companies should above all things serve their communities and their customers faithfully, giving them the advantages of improvements in the art and the tungsten lamp has been a conspicuous instance of the manner in which the companies may seize upon this advancement for the benefit of their public. Their aim should be to produce electricity as cheaply as possible, and to sell it in large quantities at a small margin over the cost of manufacture. The service must be popularized to the last degree, and the policy of the companies with which Mr. Huey is connected is in favor of the introduction and extensive use, not only of the tungsten lamp, but of any other article or device that will enable the consumer to get his service at a rate less than he is now paying.

The public should be educated to use more light. This has been done in a degree in the large cities, as any one can attest who can look back 20 or 30 years and contrast the appearance of these cities after nightfall with their present comparative brilliancy. But in the smaller cities and towns, both indoors and out, there is still, as a general rule, dimness after dark instead of plenty of light. The cry should be: "More light." This represents a characteristic of advancing civilization. In a large way the central station manager should identify himself with this progress, and in doing so the tungsten lamp will be found an effective ally.

The Byllesby companies are not frightened by the existence or prospect of tungsten lamps of low candle-power. They take the position that whatever benefits the consumer will in the long run benefit them. If for some certain purposes the customer wants tungsten lamps of low candle-power, he should have them. In the increasing use of electricity for all purposes, and in the constant betterment of relations between sellers and buyers of electricity, the situation is one that will take care of itself, if the management of the company on the whole is judicious, progressive and enterprising. The manager of the central station property should identify himself with the needs and advancement of his own community; doing this is more important than worrying about the introduction of low candle-power lamps. If correct and broad lines of policy are laid down and adhered to, the use of the tungsten lamp in small sizes will undoubtedly be found to be a benefit, although some station managers may now consider it a blessing in disguise. —Electrical World.

The above article will be of local interest because the Red River Power company's plant here is under the control of the Byllesby company.

The Price of Butter.

The discussion given to the subject of cost of living has directed more or less attention to the federal oleomargarine tax and the price of butter. People who are in favor of repealing the present oleomargarine law have taken advantage of the situation to loudly condemn as "un-democratic and un-American" this "burden-some tax on a pure, wholesome and nutritious food product."

They conveniently forget to explain that over 97 per cent of the oleomargarine put upon the market is taxed at only one-fourth cent per pound. They do not explain that only that oleomargarine that is artificially colored is taxed at ten cents per pound.

Even if it were all taxed at ten cents per pound it would have absolutely nothing to do with the price of butter after the latter reaches thirty cents a pound retail. It costs about fourteen cents a pound to produce the very best grade of oleomargarine. Add to this a ten cent tax and the cost of production is twenty-four cents. The product could be retailed at thirty cents at a handsome profit to manufacturer and retailer.

Looking at the question from any viewpoint it is clearly seen that the oleomargarine law has absolutely nothing to do with the price of butter.

The dairy interests of the country are not enjoying any benefit through oleomargarine legislation except as the integrity of the industry is maintained. In this every honest citizen should feel a keen interest. He should also understand that the effort put forth by the manufacturers of oleomargarine to secure legislation which will make it easy for men to commit fraud in selling oleomargarine is not inspired by love for the "poor man who wants a cheap substitute for butter."

The whole proposition may be thus summed up: Oleomargarine is now made to taste and smell something like butter. The manufacturers and a few retail dealers want the privelage of putting it upon the market so that it will look like butter, thus making it easy to commit fraud.

Every good citizen should be interested in effective pure food legislation and the oleomargarine law is just such legislation—no more, no less.

After the Season Closes—Game Warden Makes Some Suggestions.

The seasons for deer and other big game closed Nov. 30. It was the best season the sportsmen have had for years and everybody ought to be ready to quit slaughtering the animals now. Nearly every man who has spent much time in pursuit of big game got some, if not the limit, and ought to be satisfied. If the laws are obeyed big game will be plentiful next season.

E.E. Fletcher, deputy game warden, says that in years past people have killed deer during the winter months. This year it is going to be his particular occupation to see to it that no illegal shooting is done and he is going to be on the job all the time. He told the Gazette to make this statement just as strong as possible.

The sportsmen have had an excellent season and ought to be ready to quit shooting now. Anyone who can't resist the temptation to kill is inviting the game warden to "pop it to him" to the limit.

LIQUOR RETURNED

NEMESIS OF SALOONMEN IN INDIAN COUNTRY CLOSES MANY BARROOMS.

DETROIT HAS GONE DRY

Over 5,000 Cases, Kegs, Barrels and Demijohns Sent Back to St. Paul—T. E. Brents Follows in Wake of Shipment.

St. Paul.—"The 'Pussyfoot' Johnson Booze special," composed of nine cars made the trip from Detroit to St. Paul. T. E. Brents, nemesis of liquor dealers in the Indian country, closely followed the "special" on the regular Northern Pacific passenger train. He came to see that the carloads of liquor were not sidetracked on the way. He was accompanied by Clarence T. Johnson, the 22-year-old son of "Pussyfoot" Johnson, chief Indian agent.

It required the efforts of 50 men, working for 12 hours at Detroit to load the nine cars composing the train. The shipping bills show that more than 5,000 cases, kegs, barrels and demijohns were consigned to one St. Paul wholesale liquor firm.

Agent Brents, in charge of the raid permitted the saloonkeepers to sell or return all liquor in their establishments. Only twenty gallons of whiskey, 24 gallons of wine, 40 cases and one barrel of beer were destroyed in the raid at Detroit. According to Mr. Brents, even this much would not have been poured into the gutters had the proprietors not tried to smuggle it from their buildings.

Four saloons and two agencies for foreign breweries were closed by Brents and his deputies in the raid at Detroit. The saloonmen have informed the Indian agents that they will under no circumstances reopen their places of business.

Thirty Liquor Men Face Trial.

Brents, in company with Clarence T. Johnson, left for Sioux Falls. They will appear as witnesses at the coming session of court in that city. Thirty violators of liquor laws on and in the vicinity of Rosebud and Pine Ridge reservations are on the calendar for trial. "Pussyfoot" Johnson left for Detroit to take personal charge of the work in that section of the state.

When he returns from Sioux Falls he says it is his intention to start in and make a general clean-up of every saloon in the territory in which he has been working for the past month.

Detroit land men and others interested in local business affairs are planning to put the liquor question squarely before the Northern Minnesota Development association when it convenes in Brainerd Dec. 1, to determine if some action may be taken to set aside the liquor clause in the Indian treaties. They are not optimistic regarding congressional action along this line, and say none may be hoped for unless there is a far-reaching sentiment against the "lid."

Bemidji Celebrates Last Night.

Bemidji, Nov. 29.—Revelry reigned here on the eve of what probably will be the last day that Bemidji will have licensed saloons. Nearly every one of the 28 places now doing business here was crowded with men who celebrated the closing order as a holiday event.

Following the raid of government agents upon the saloons at Perham where places were closed, the officers under command of T. E. Brents, headed for Bemidji. It is taken for granted that Bemidji will be the next town to be closed, and it for that reason that the crowds made merry.

The passing of the saloons is a notable epoch in the history of this city. Half a dozen years ago Bemidji was wide open. There were more saloons than all other business houses combined and open gambling was rampant.

Already there are applications from men of other lines of business to rent the buildings to be vacated by the saloons. Some of the places here which will ship away their liquor supplies probably will continue as soft drink parlors and will attempt to sell malt, but up to this time there has been but little malt shipped into Bemidji.

The Bemidji brewery recently received a heavy shipment of malt and has enough to insure the brewing of beer for months to come. The brewery has received no notice from the government that it must shut down and it expects to continue, and although it cannot ship to outside points it hopes to be able to supply the family trade in Bemidji which the brewery people contend promises to be large from now on.

St. Paul.—Governor A. O. Eberhart's official plurality over James Gray in the state election, Nov. 8, was 60,406. COOK IS COMING

CRAZED BY HARDSHIPS

New York, Nov. 30.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Brooklyn explorer, in an article which will be published in Hampton's magazine, confesses that he does not know whether he reached the north pole or not.

Dr. Cook, who has been in hiding for over a year, has informed the editor of the magazine publishing his story that he will return to the United States with his wife and children Dec. 22, if only to spend Christmas here.

Dr. Cook in his story deals with the psychology of his adventure and says "Did I get to the north pole? Perhaps I made a mistake in thinking that I did. Perhaps I did make a mistake. After mature thought I confess that I do not know absolutely whether I reached the pole or not."

"This may come as an amazing statement, but I am willing to startle the world, if by so doing I can get an opportunity to present my case. By my case, I mean not my case as a geographical discoverer, but my case as a man. Much as the attainment of the north pole once meant to me, the sympathy and confidence of my fellow men mean more.

"Fully, freely and frankly I shall tell you everything. Tell you everything and leave the decision with you. If, after reading my story, you say Cook is sincere and honest, half crazed by months of isolation and hunger, he believed he reached the pole, he is not a faker, then I shall be satisfied."

Cook tells the story of his life and pictures what he calls the overpowering ambition of an exploration that beset him, until it finally culminated in his effort to reach the pole. Cook declares that at the time he convinced himself that he had discovered the pole he was half mad. He spent two years in his quest and during that time endured hunger and privations that, he says, would unbalance any mind.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—Robert E. Peary, commander of the expedition which the National Geographic society recognized as having reached the north pole, declined today to make any comment on the confession of Frederick A. Cook after hearing of it. When asked whether he would have anything to say after Cook's article appeared, he replied that he did not think he would.

Revolt in Macao.

Macao, Island of Macao, China, Nov. 30.—Portuguese troops of the local garrison and the crew of Portuguese gunboat, Patria, revolted last night and taking possession of the city, proceeded to enforce certain changes in the administration of the affairs of this dependency of Portugal. The rebels continued to control today, the governor and military officers being powerless.

Hong Kong, Nov. 30.—Later advices from Macao state that the foreigners there are safe. The Chinese shops are closed. Nuns and children of foreigners are coming to Hong Kong. It is stated the governor, after being forced to comply with the demands of the rebels, resigned.

No casualties are reported, but military officers say that they have lost all control of the troops. The security of life and property is not guaranteed.

Governors at Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 30.—The scene of the governors' conference shifted from Frankfort to Louisville this morning, when a special train brought the governors, their wives and daughters here, where the sessions will be held until Saturday. Today the governors settled down to the work for which they met, discussing the problems that now confront many states.

The morning session was given over to short talks on the responsibilities of the governor, the appointment of his cabinet, the power of removal and like subjects.

The discussion embodied matters pertaining alone to states but beginning with the opening session tomorrow the subjects will be of national scope. Among the subjects are the conservation of national resources and human life, income tax, direct primaries, popular election of United States senators and corrupt practices act.

Twenty Hunters Dead.

Calumet, Mich., Nov. 30.—During the deer hunting season which opened Nov. 10 and closed today, there were forty-six accidents in the upper peninsula of Michigan, twenty of which were fatal. More deaths are expected.

On the final count Stanley had 783; Palermo 517, Ross 479 and Plaza 421. Immediately after the election and until the board's figures were made public, Palermo claimed to have the lead in the race.

Stanley was made the temporary county seat of Mountrail at the time of the organization of the county.

Vice president Corral is very sick and is expected to soon go to Europe for treatment. Finance Minister Limantour is expected to resign on his return from Europe as he and Reyes are enemies.

NICARAGUA REVOLUTION

TROUBLE BREAKS OUT IN CENTRAL AMERICA AGAIN.

Comic Opera War Is On in Nicaragua—Has Been Peaceful for the Past Six Months.

San Juan Del Sur, Nicaragua, Nov. 29.—Advices today from Tegucigalpa state that the Atlantic ports of Honduras and the department of Comayagua have been captured by the revolutionists under the leadership of Former President Manuel Bonilla. Government forces sent to retake the territory joined the enemy.

General Bonilla brought about an unsuccessful revolt against the government last summer. Later he sought refuge in Guatemala from which country he was deported. Recently he was reported to be in New Orleans, organizing an expedition which was to attack the Atlantic coast of Honduras. Bonilla's cause was helped somewhat by the rebellion of General Jose Valladares, governor of the Island of Amapala. The latter was recently deposed and came to this country.

New Orleans, Nov 29.—It was learned late today that Manuel Bonilla, credited with leading the attack on Atlantic ports of Honduras, is in this city and has been here for some time.

MUST CUT DEEP.

President Taft Says Nation Must Economize in all Departments.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—President Taft today informed his cabinet officers after scrutinizing the final draft of the estimate of the various government departments, for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1911, that there must be a further and deeper cut in them; that they would not do in their present form.

In response to urgent demands of the president, the heads of various departments already held their estimates down to what they considered rock bottom figures. The president today, however, pointed out a number of places where he declared the pruning knife could be used to advantage. The president went into the details of each department.

Taft believed he made considerable headway in holding down the expenditures for the current year, but he hopes to make a still greater stride toward economy in 1911. In order that he might take up departmental estimates the president ordered a postponement of the regular cabinet session scheduled for today, until tomorrow. Tomorrow he hopes to be able to submit the major portion of his message to the cabinet for consideration.

Tolstoi's Son Very Bitter.

St. Petersburg, Russia, Nov. 29.—Count Leo Tolstoi publishes a bitter denunciation of Count Tschertoff, the intimate friend and literary agent of the late Count Tolstoi. The son declares that Tschertoff was the worst enemy that his father had in all educated Russia and the civilized world and that he was directly guilty of the tragedy of Yasnaya, Poliana.

"The malign influence of Tschertoff," writes Count Leo, "caused the premature death of my father, his superhuman sufferings and separation from his family."

But for his literary agent the son adds, his father would have lived for many years peacefully at Yasnaya, Poliana, with his family who loved him and whom he loved so devotedly. The arrival of Tschertoff was the beginning of the end.

Want Uniformity.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 29.—Representatives from more than thirty states gathered here to attend the convention of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments opening today. The convention will be in session for four days. One of the important questions which is expected to claim attention will be that of uniformity in state and national pure food laws.

Must Come to Trial.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 29.—Judge Scanlan today refused to allow a further delay in the trial of Attorney Charles Erbstein who is indicted on charges of bribing in the second trial of Lee O'Neil Browne, an Illinois legislator who was accused of bribery in connection with the election of United States Sen. Wm. Lorimer. The trial is set for Dec. 1. Judge Scanlan also denied Erbstein's plea for a bill of particulars from prosecution.

Dine American Officers.

London, Nov. 29.—The mayor of Gravesend gave a luncheon today for Rear Admiral Murdock and the officers of the third division of the American fleet at the town hall. A number of British naval officers and officials were present as were Commander Edward Simpson, American naval attache at London, and Captain Sydney A. Cloman, the American military attache here.

Census Returns of Minnesota.

Dynamite Outrage.

New York, Nov. 29.—A bomb explosion early this morning in the doorway of the Bella Trinacria saloon, owned by Francesco Lebarbera, is believed to be the revenge work of kidnapers in a case originating five years ago. The saloon is located in the heart of the Sicilian settlement in Elizabeth street.

The explosion completely wrecked the saloon, the front of which was blown inward, badly damaged adjacent stores, hurled sleepers in the tenements above from their beds and cracked the windows for blocks around.

Revolution About Over.

A dispatch to the state department, United States ambassador to Mexico City. In a battle between government and revolutionary forces which was waged near Chihuahua on Sunday, Wilson reports that the defeat of the rebels was accompanied with considerable loss to them. The strength of the government troops in this encounter was 600, the revolutionists 400.

MAKING SNAP-SHOTS OF CELEBRITIES

SNAP SHOT OF THE BRITISH AMBASSADOR AND MRS. JAMES BRYCE

THE past few years has witnessed the development of a unique activity, the purpose of which is to satisfy public curiosity regarding men and women who are prominent in one or another of the conspicuous walks of life. This particularly up-to-date vocation might be denominated the "snap-shotting" of celebrities, which means the taking of instantaneous photographs of the people who are temporarily or permanently in the public eye and whose personal appearance is consequently a matter of interest to the people of all parts of the country.

Few newspaper readers who take delight in the mass of pictures spread nowadays over every printed page ever stop to reflect what a comparatively short time ago it was that first saw such embellishment of the chronicle of the day's happenings. Most of our readers can doubtless remember distinctly the time when pictures were unknown in their favorite newspaper, and even after crude cuts began to make their appearance in the advertising columns of the weeklies, and later in the dailies, it was a long time before the pictures were to be found in the reading columns—and a yet longer time before the reader came to expect not mere scenic subjects but graphic pictures of the current happenings of the busy world.

The vocation of snap-shotting celebrities has been the outgrowth—the very latest outgrowth, it might be termed—of the practise of recording in pictures as well as in story the doings of all the world. When the newspaper-reading public came to expect the quick reflection in picture form of great happenings all over the world it speedily progressed from interest in places and things to curiosity regarding the actual appearance of the people regarding whose doings the papers had much to say. It was not enough that the newspapers should print as a counterfeit presentment of this or that public man a carefully posed bust portrait, touched up to show the subject as he wanted to appear rather than as he actually did appear. Newspaper readers with a thirst for accurate information came to demand pictures that would show the subjects as they actually appeared. Moreover, they wanted not a commonplace bust photo, but a full-length picture that would represent its object as he would appear to one who met him on the street and with a hint as to his distinctive characteristics as to dress, etc. From this demand was born the personal "snap-shot."

Nowadays the snap-shot is to a large extent displacing the stereotyped visage in the public prints. Almost everybody who achieves fame or notoriety must must needs fall victims to the sharpshooters of the camera. The snap-shotter is no respecter of persons or calling so long as "human interest" is present, and everybody, from preachers to pugilists and from statesmen to suffragists, is the quarry of the camera scout at one time or another. Some of the people who are snap-shotted manifestly relish it; a great number accept it as a matter of course and a minority wriggle and squirm and even fight at sight of a camera. Conspicuous among the latter are Harry Lehr, the Newport society pet of monkey dinner fame, and J. Pierpont Morgan, the financier. It must be admitted that the father of trusts does not make a pretty picture when taken unawares and he evidently realizes this, for he is usually guarded by several private detectives when he appears in public and carries a cane which he is quick to use on any offending camera that he can reach.

Public officials, headed by the president of the United States, are usually the most satisfactory subjects for snap-shots because, whatever may be their natural inclination in the matter, they quickly learn to submit gracefully to this sort of attention. A leading statesman or army or navy official who realizes that at public functions he is liable to be continually in the camera eye is likely to instinctively avoid those awkward attitudes and facial grimaces that sometimes spoil things in the case of a celebrity who is new to the game and self-conscious in consequence. From the standpoint of the snap-shotters perhaps the most satisfactory subjects in this country are the diplomats at Washington—that is, the alien officials who are stationed at our seat of government as the ambassadors or ministers of foreign powers. For one thing, these titled foreigners are possessed of gorgeous uniforms that show up well in unconventional pictures, and then again they are accustomed to being constantly on dress parade.

The snap-shotter must "quick on the trigger" and he cultivates ability in this direction almost as earnestly as the gun fighter of the west did in the old days. The newspaper snap-shots are made by means of special cameras made specially for the purpose, and costing as much as $250 apiece. Only a fraction of a second is required, if a man is to make a snap-shot, once the lens is focused upon a celebrity in a desired position, but the uncertainty lies in the fact that the celebrity is seldom actually posing for his picture. More than likely he may not realize that he is being caught by the camera or maybe may be trying to dodge the glass eye pointed toward him. In any event quick action is necessary at the critical moment if the subject sought is to be caught ere he moves away, turns his head or otherwise spoils the picture. Indeed the snap-shotter who would "catch on the wing" such restless spirits as Colonel Roosevelt must develop a sort of sixth sense that will enable him to anticipate with reasonable certainty the future moves of his subject.

No other American of the day is so much photographed as is Colonel Roosevelt, and yet he is by no means an easy subject for good pictures. It is not that he objects to the operation; indeed, he seems to utterly ignore the cameras that are pointed at him a dozen times a day. But the colonel is one of the most active and sudden of men, and the snap-shotter must be on the alert every minute of the time or he loses the golden opportunity to catch the ex-president at the "psychological moment." This was admirably illustrated many a time during the colonel's trip through the west. Several professional photographers accompanied him, and a number of the press correspondents also carried cameras, and often it was a wild race for them to keep up with Mr. Roosevelt and be on hand at the time when the good "human interest" pictures were to be had.

Whenever Colonel Roosevelt appeared, unless the police arrangements prevented, he was at once surrounded by a cheering crowd, every man, woman and child of which was trying to get close enough to grasp his hand or at least to say "Hello, Teddy." At such times a snap-shot usually yielded only a mass of heads and backs surrounding a set of gleaming teeth. If Mr. Roosevelt was carefully guarded by police or soldiers, as was the case in some cities, the task of the photographer was almost as difficult, for the "coppers" and deputy sheriffs of the western towns seemed to have much more self-importance than common sense. In Denver two of the camera men were left behind when the colonel and his party went to the auditorium and arrived to find that building packed to the doors and surrounded by a ring of mounted police. To one of these they appealed in vain. "But we are supposed to be with Mr. Roosevelt's party," said one of them finally. "Well," was the chilly response, "if you are supposed to be with them, why aren't you?" And the officer's horse scornfully switched his tail in their faces.

It was in Denver, too, that one of the most amusing scenes of the trip was witnessed. The Press club gave a "chuck-wagon" luncheon to the colonel in a park. "Here," said the camera men, "is our chance for some good stuff." So they put in fresh films or plates and hustled out there by the dozen. The colonel, in the midst of a throng of self-invited Colorado deputy sheriffs, stood at the rough board table and every time he reached for a bit of meat or put a morsel of food into his mouth there was a perfect fusillade of clicks from the cameras that surrounded him. The photographers were ranged in a triple ring about the chuck wagon, those with little cameras in front, stooping low; next, the men with the larger hand cameras, and in the rear the local artists, who had big machines on high tripods. It was in truth a comical sight, but the colonel did not seem to mind it a bit, and went on eating and talking with the utmost enthusiasm.

The visit to Cheyenne, of course, gave the snap-shotters their best chances for picturesque views, for there the colonel could be caught almost any time shaking hands with the cowboys, cowgirls and gaudily painted Indians, or applauding the work of the broncho-busters.

There is a Chicago newspaper man who once had the unique experience of being the only person with a camera present at the coronation of a king. The monarch in question was Matasfa, who had been elected king of Samoa by a majority of the inhabitants of those delectable islands in 1898. His reign, to be sure, lasted but a few months, for after a gallant struggle he was most unjustly deposed by the Americans and British, who thereupon partitioned the islands with Germany. The performance took place in the open, but the king and the chiefs who anointed him were not to be approached within some fifty yards. So rigid is Samoan etiquette that the one man with the camera did not dare to break through the surrounding ring of natives, and had perforce to be content with such views as could be had from a distance.

ENTERTAINING THE BLIND.

"In these days of specialists you can't just step out and help your fellow humans in haphazard fashion," said the matron of an institution for the blind. "You have to take a course of training before you can even do good in the world. In this position the task that requires most diplomacy is declining the services of people who offer to entertain the blind. All sorts of incompetents volunteer. Their intentions are good, but their achievements are deplorable. Poor readers are most numerous and are hardest to manage. They have had no practise in reading aloud since they left the lower grades in the grammar school, yet when the fires of benevolence break out that is the first thing they want to do.

"The blind are particularly sensitive to the quality of a voice. A harsh, high pitched voice that rambles on without rhyme or reason gets on their nerves, and it is our duty to shut out all such readers. They have to be handled with care because their hearts are in the right place, and with tact their good intentions may be deflected into some useful channel."

KING'S BEARD MODEL FOR ENGLISHMEN.

Beards are at present the order of the day among London's fashionable "men-about-town." In remarking about the prevalence of facial hirsute adornments, a prominent hairdresser said:

"One would not have thought that the coming of King George to the throne would have made much difference to the fashion of current hairdressing, in view of the fact that his father wore a beard for so many years, but I can assure you it has, and a very great difference at that.

"In all probability the present fashion of the point beard is due in a great measure to so young a man affecting one. I have been told that there was a great rage for beards among 'men-about-town' when King Edward first grew a beard many years ago.

"In my opinion the average Englishman is tremendously imitative. The style of beard King George wears is appropriately named the 'torpedo' in the navy, and since the king's accession many of the younger men in the service have started to grow them."

WAS SIRE OF TEXAS

Moses Austin, Grandfather of the Lone Star State.

Former Republic Asked to Care for Missouri Home and Tomb of Famous Pioneer Who Made Possible Its Founding.

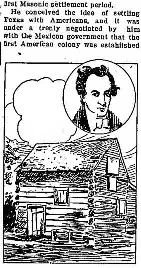
Potosi, Mo.—Washington county officials have recently appealed to Texas state officials to arrange for that commonwealth to care for the grave and home of Moses Austin in this city. Moses Austin was father of Stephen F. Austin, honored as the father of Texas. As truly as Stephen F. Austin was the father of the former republic and the late state, Moses Austin was its grandfather, for he did the preliminary work, made the treaty and planned the colony that made possible the work of his son as founder of the republic.

It is believed here that the recent removal of the body of Stephen F. Austin from a lonely grave in a Texas village to a state-built tomb in the capital city that was named for him, and the memorial services in several cities, will arouse sufficient interest in the Austin family to result in arrangements being made to care for the almost dismantled tomb and the decaying cabin here.

The cabin stands on one corner of the public square of this city. It is all that is left of the once pretentious Durham Hall, Moses Austin's early-day home. At the time of the Louisiana purchase there was no more elaborate private estate in the whole Mississippi valley than Durham Hall, where the owner entertained such notable men as Aaron Burr, Andrew Jackson and Thomas H. Benton.

Moses Austin, under a grant from the Spanish government, opened the first lead mines and built the first lead smelter in Missouri. He was at the head of the first bank established in St. Louis and was a member of the first Masonic settlement period.

He conceived the idea of settling Texas with Americans, and it was under a treaty negotiated by him with the Mexican government that the first American colony was established in Texas. The consummation of these plans necessitated an overland trip from Potosi to San Antonio, the hardships of which resulted in the death of the projector.



Austin and His Home.

Stephen F. Austin continued the work of his father, led the American colony into the southwest wilderness and helped the Texans to establish a republic.

Moses Austin's body lies in a rickety, weed-covered tomb in the Presbyterian churchyard, not a block distant from the log cabin. A marble slab, not more than 18 inches square, set in a rustic tomb of hand-hewn rock, bears this simple inscription:

MOSES AUSTIN,
DIED 1820.

When the condition of the tomb was called to the attention of Washington county officials, it was their opinion that Texas residents would be pleased to have the tomb better cared for, hence the letter to a state official stating its condition.

Had Cost England Many Millions.

London.—Hermuzd Rassam, the Assyrian scholar and explorer, whose cruel treatment by King Theodore involved England in a $45,000,000 war with Abyssinia, which ended in the suicide of the African ruler, died a few days ago in the English village of Hove, where he had been many years in peaceful retirement. He was born in northern Mesopotamia, opposite the site of the ancient Nineveh, and went to England early in life, becoming connected with the British museum.

In June, 1864, after having held a British political position at Aden, at the Indian ocean end of the Red sea, he took charge of the English mission to King Theodore of Abyssinia, who had imprisoned and maltreated the British consul and several other Europeans. He demanded the release of the prisoners. At first he was treated with consideration, but afterward he and two of his companions were shut up in the fortress of Magdala and were kept there almost two years in chains. They suffered from misery, cold and hunger, and were in constant fear of death. When Great Britain sent to Abyssinia a punitive expedition under Lord Napier, King Theodore shot himself to death to avoid the humiliation of capture.

New Products From Sugar.

Berlin.—Until very recently the molasses residuum from the manufacture of beet sugar in Germany was considered worthless, but now several valuable by-products are obtained. One is a 37.7 per cent. alcohol—for medicinal and chemical purposes—produced by distillation, with a second quality denatured for fuel and light. There still remains a thicker and darker molasses, resembling pine tar in appearance, and from this residue, after a variety of processes of somewhat dangerous nature, there is extracted potassium cyanide, besides several other by-products of commercial value.

WICKERSHAM TELLS THIS ONE.

Attorney General Wickersham is a great story teller. He brought the following tale back from the northwest and told it at the White House:

A man there was who was in mortal fear of his wife, especially when he indulged in spirits to excess and forgot to go home until the early hours of the morning. One night he drank until he became hilarious, and it was in the small hours of the morning that he reached his home. He gained an entrance without arousing his sleeping spouse.

Shoeless he climbed the stairway, opened the door of the bedroom, entered and closed it after him without being detected. Just as he was about to get into bed his wife, half aroused from her slumber, turned and sleepily said: "Is that you, Fido?"

The husband, telling the rest of the story, replied: "For once in my life I had real presence of mind. I licked her hand."—Washington Herald.

SAD BUT TRUE.

First Cannibal—I don't see why there should be so much talk about that story of Jonah and the whale.

Second Cannibal—Neither do I; you and I have swallowed men ourselves.

Adam.

Adam never was a little boy,
He had no toys to scatter on the floor,
And furthermore he missed the youthful joy
Of carving his initials on the door.

Canis Major emitted a bark.

"On a hot scent, are you," said Canis Minor.

"If you had to carry a flaming star like Sirius in the end of your nose," retorted the other, "you'd know what it is to have a hot scent!"

Fine Music.

They were enjoying some music.

"Phwat was that song called, Dennie?" she asked.

"Bedad, Mory," replied Dennie, "it's down on the bill of fare as an aria."

"Is that so, Dennie? Faith, and it was foine enough to be called a front door."—Tit-Bits.

Where His Interest Lay.

Mr. A. (recently betrothed)—Can I confide in you, young man?

Jeweler's Assistant—Why, yes, sir.

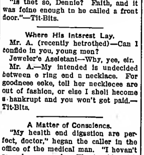
Mr. A.—My intended is undecided between a ring and a necklace. For goodness sake, tell her necklaces are out of fashion, or else I shall become a bankrupt and you won't get paid.—Tit-Bits.

A Matter of Conscience.

"My health and digestion are perfect, doctor," began the caller in the office of the medical man. "I haven't an ache or a pain. The trouble with me is that I cannot sleep at night."

"Well, if that is the case, sir," said the learned physician, "I suggest that you consult your spiritual adviser rather than me."—Lippincott's.

ANOTHER OUTRAGE.



Mr. Hicks (reading paper)—Well! well! Another Chinese outrage!

Mrs. Hicks (breathlessly)—Where?

Mr. Hicks—Right here. Blamed Chinese restaurants are going to charge ten cents more for chop suey.

So Say We All.

We would have all men live in peace, each man respect his fellow man; all lying, cheating, grafting cease—and the whole world live on a better plan. But we claim one lone privilege we insist: 'Tis this—the right, should any dare our slightest purpose to resist, to annihilate him then and there.

KEEPING RECORD STRAIGHT.

Peach basket hats,
And high-heeled shoes,
And heaps of rats,
We write these few
Short lines to you
To keep the record
Straight, we do.
We long to have
You understand
We love the girls
To beat the band,
Not because they
Wear things like you,
But in spite of
That fact, we do.

Hen's Teeth.

"Your composition, as a whole," said the professor of literature, "deserves a great deal of praise, but I must object to the expression, 'as fine as hens' teeth;' it is not merely uncouth, but also suggestive of nature faking; for it is common knowledge that hens' teeth do not exist."

"I don't see why they don't exist," muttered the composer; "don't combs have teeth, and don't hens have combs?"

Some Kicking.

"That actress says she will earn enough money on the stage to put Manuel back on the throne of Portugal."

"Makes a regular football of Manuel, doesn't it?"

"How so?"

Exchange of Courtesies.

"Mornin', Riggs."

"Mornin', Griggs."

"I hope you're enjoying good health."

"You don't suppose I could enjoy poor health, do you?"

"You could if you were a new doctor in a strange community. Mornin'."

"Mornin'."

Not Reasonable.

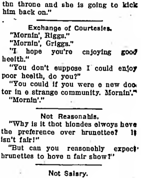
"Why is it that blondes always have the preference over brunettes? It isn't fair!"

"But can you reasonably expect brunettes to have a fair show?"

Not Salary.

She said: "What is your salary
Before us two engages?
He said: "Twelve plunks a week." She said:
"Gee whiz! that's only wages."

NO CHANGE TO AGREE.



Judge—And is there no chance for an agreement?

Foreman of the Jury (rising)—Wal, if your honor will give me back the gun that was took from me when we was locked up, I reckon I kin bring these here 11 onery critters to time in less than five minutes, but there ain't no chance for an agreement while I'm lackin' a strong argument.

His Way of Proposing.

"Everyone is saying that we are engaged."

"Indeed? I suppose you are denying it?"

"No, I—I thought I would leave it to you, and—er—if you don't deny it, we are."

Woman's Way.

"That's the girl who is engaged to Cholly Noodle; she is flat hunting."

His Friends to Blame.

"Why, how is that?" queried the parson.

"De judge said it was de 'electric chair fer mine, but me friends got bizzy an' hed de sentence chang'd t' imprisonment fer life," explained the other.

Not a Matter of Money.

Stern Parent—I'm afraid that young man is mercenary.

The Daughter—Oh, no, he isn't, papa.

Stern Parent—But he knows I am worth two millions, doesn't he?

The Daughter—Yes, of course; but he says he would love me just as much if you were only worth a million and a half.

A Steady Income.

"I'm afraid," said the critical friend, "that you will never be able to make anything out of Miss Screecher's voice."

"That's all you know about it," retorted the vocal instructor. "Why, I've made over $800 out of it already."

Making of a Great Novel

Many Things Other Than Powers of Description Enter Into Its Composition.

The commonest fault of novels is lack of knowledge and it is just because of this lack they fail in imagination. For imagination is encouraged and enriched by knowledge of all kinds, and flags for the want of it. Knowledge is, as it were, the soil by which the flower of imagination is nourished; and the greater the writer the greater his passion for knowledge and the more use he can make of all that he knows. Scott is perhaps the most imaginative of all our novelists, and none of them has had knowledge so vast and diverse. It is the same with Tolstoi. His novels interest us so much, even when the story seems lost in them, because he is always telling us of what he knows. He can interest us as in Levin mowing, because he had mowed himself, or in Andrew Bolkonsky fighting, because he had fought himself. If in these cases he were not writing out of his own experience, his narrative would be empty of detail and illusion.

And so it is with stories of poems of passion. They are dull if the writer can only tell us how he or some one else is very powerfully moved. He must, even in poetry, tell us facts about passion if we are to listen to what he says, though he may tell them indirectly; and they must not be second-hand facts that he has learned from other writers. For it is easier to detect "cramming" in literature than in examination papers; and when the reader detects it he loses interest. There is this fault in many of Zola's novels. He was thoroughly aware of the value of knowledge in a novelist; but he thought he could cram it. His books are full of facts, but they are often facts too easily come by and acquired for a particular purpose.

"Reapportionment first" always—but don't forget to do your Christmas shopping early.

Dr. Cook's latest magazine article has the advantage of probably being nearer the truth than any others he has written.

No doubt a very diligent search was made for "competent men from the country" to serve as county officers in the so called Pennington county!

The Erie Eleven Towns has discovered rather late in the county division game, that Thief River Falls people do not need the aid of the reservation people in handling the affairs of the so called Pennington county.

The commissioners "would have preferred to have distributed more of the offices to competent men from the country if such could have been found who would have accepted the appointments," is the way the Thief River Press explains the Pennington county situation.

The deadly corn shredder does the work all right, but it mixes too many fingers and thumbs and hands and arms with the fodder "Billy" McEwen, state labor commissioner, says that when he visited Europe he found American made machines in use equipped with safety devices not used in this country, and he wants to know the reason why.

It is doubtful if the anti-optionists are guilty of planning the legislative program with which they are credited that of attempting to hold up all legislation until the county option question is settled definitely. That would be just about as productive of results as for them to finance the anti-saloon league's campaign. Nothing will pass a county option bill quicker than for the liquor interests to assume a dictatorial attitude on legislative questions.

Mary Garden says Salome is "high art" and the Chicago police chief says it's "black art." The actress says the play is bad only in the minds of those who think evil thoughts. That can be said of so many things, so much depending upon the "atmosphere," you know. Much is done in the name of art and one just begins to appreciate high art when he finds that it was just plain vulgar. There is a difference of course—as the difference between nude and naked but the police officer says the Salome show has gone over the line and he is going to hue to the line. That is probably a good solution of the delicate, or indelicate, situation; evil minded people will have no difficulty in finding something just as bad in Chicago, something that does not pretend to be something else, and the other people can find something better.

Editor Miller of the St. Peter Free Press has given much space in his valuable paper to the consideration of northern Minnesota's agitation for reapportionment and his statements are usually fair. While expressing the opinion that it is doubtful if the legislature will make provision for reapportionment to take effect before 1914, the Free Press has frankly acknowledged the fairness of the legislation asked for by the north country people.

However, northern Minnesota's hold-out to secure equitable reapportionment before there are any other legislative enactments is severely criticised. The Free Press says that reapportionment should take its chances with all other classes of legislation; that to demand other consideration is much like an appeal to sectional prejudice. The Free Press should consider the difference between the proposed reapportionment and other legislation and qualify its statements. Representation is the primary right of popular government. It is a right that should be secured to the people before all other considerations.

Northern Minnesota has less than a fifty per cent franchise. The result of the 1910 census, recently announced, shows that clearly. Governor Eberhart said, after looking at the figures, that if the legislature does not pass a fair reapportionment bill he will call an extra session of the legislature to do just that thing. Is not the governors position right? Above all things, should not every section of the state have fair representation in the government of which it is a part? Is it not entitled to that above all other considerations?

Northern Minnesota does not demand the passage of Bob Dunn's good roads bill or any other measure for which it will work before other meritorious measures are considered. But the north country people know that they should have representation; they know that to deny them that is to exercise sectional selfishness. They are not asking a favor, so why call it an appeal to sectional strife? They are asking for representation—the primary right of popular government. If that is denied them, are they to be blamed if they play Indian as did our forefathers who cast a cargo of tea into the bay?

COADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Warren Register: Red Lake Falls people say the town up the river is not out of the woods yet and that Pennington county will have to wait awhile yet before it can appear upon the map of Minnesota. They propose to contest the election, which on the face of the returns resulted in cutting Red Lake county in two. The Red Lake Falls people have shown great resourcefulness in the past in their contests with Thief River Falls and may be counted upon to give it a lot more trouble if they can.

A GRAND VOTE OFFER

On account of a great many new subscriptions that can be had and old subsriptions paid in advance and as there is only a very short time left in which to do the hustling, as an inducement for all candidates to get busy we will give hereafter 20,000 votes for every $1.50 turned in on all old and advance subscritions, and as a farther inducement to get busy at once, we will give in addition 30,000 votes for every $1.50 turned in on NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS between now and the close of the contest. Think of it! 30,000 votes for one subscription. All the money you turn in on this special offer has several times the ordinary voting power. How can you afford to hesitate? You can't if you expect to win, as all the other candidates are hustling around and reaping big results, so do not lose another minute. This is your last chance to get in some big licks and cinch the grand prize before it is too late.

Do not wait until the last day and then begin to hustle, it will be too late. Start now.

What is a New Subscription?

A new subscription is one sent to a person who is not now a subscriber and whose name has not been on our list since this contest began; and no member of whose immediate faimly in the same household is a subscriber. We will be absolute judges of what contsitutes old and new subscriptions.

The Coupon-Ballot.

In the columns of this paper will be found a coupon-ballot worth 5,000 votes when accompanied by ten merchants' coupons, thus giving in all 6,000 votes. The coupon-ballot is void unless the merchants' coupons are attached thereon or placed in an envelope with the required amount of merchants' coupons. This is the last grand offer for merchants' coupons, therefore request your friends to make use of the coupon-ballots published every week.

IT WILL HELP HER WIN

This coupon-ballot is void unless 10 merchant's coupons are attached hereon or placed in the envelope with it. Vote this for your favorite candidate.

How to Help Her.

"I'd like to see her win that piano." That sounds well, but what have you done to make her believe you are telling the truth? What can you do? Here are a few things that will help her win it and prove that you mean what you say:

Every time you buy a dollar's worth of goods and pay cash for it, secure a merchant's coupon. Then vote it for your favorite candidate.

Subscribe for this paper to be sent to your relatives who live at a distance that you don't have time to write to.

Ask your neighbor who does not take this paper to subscribe for it and have the votes credited to your favorite candidate.

Save all your contestant's ballots.

Pay your subscription to this paper in advance and give her enough votes to put her in first place.

If you do not do any of these things don't say. "I'd like to see you win." for she will know it is only talk.

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S. S. S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

The Shoe Which Stands the Test

If you have a business deal with a man, you do not rely on his appearance or his manner alone. Thieves often look as well and talk as fair as trustworthy men. What you need to know is his reputation. If that is good, either from your experience with him or from what others tell you, you feel safe.

It is even more so with shoes. A poor shoe does not disclose its weakness at a glance. It may be made of paper but look better than if made of leather. You cannot tell until you have worn it. And then it is too late.

The only safe course is to buy a shoe with a reputation. Our shoes have been made in St. Paul since 1855—for more than half a century. Their name stands for honesty and square dealings with merchants and wearers.

CHAPTER II.

A Torn Telegram.

I lunched alone at the Gilmore house and went back to the city at [illegible]. The sun had lifted the mists, and a strong summer wind had cleared away the smoke pall. The boulevard was full of cars flying countryward for the Saturday half holiday, toward golf and tennis, green fields and babbling girls. I gritted my teeth and thought of McKnight at Richmond. And then, for the first time, I associated John Gilmore's granddaughter with the "West" that McKnight had brutally flung at me.

I still carried my traveling bag, for McKnight's vision at the window of the empty house had not been without effect. I did not transfer the notes to my pocket, and if I had, it would not have altered the situation later. Only the other day McKnight put the whole thing up to me.

"I warned you," he reminded me. "I told you there were queer things coming, and to be on your guard. You ought to have taken your revolver."

"It would have been of exactly as much use as a bucket of snow in—Africa," I retorted. "If I had never taken my eyes off, or if I had kept my finger on the trigger of a six shooter (which is novelesque for revolver), the result would have been the same. And the next time you want a little excitement with every variety of thrill thrown in, I can put you by way of it. You can begin by getting the wrong berth in a Pullman car, and end—"

"Oh, I know how it ends," he finished shortly. "Don't you suppose the whole thing's written on my spinal marrow?"

But I am wandering again. That is the difficulty with the unprofessional story-teller. He yaws back and forth and can't keep in the wind; he drops his characters overboard when he hasn't any further use for them and drowns them; he forgets the coffee pot and the frying pan and all the other small essentials, and, if he carries a love affair, he mutters a fervent "Allah be praised" when he lands them, drenched with adventures, at the matrimonial dock at the end of the final chapter.

I put in a thoroughly unsatisfactory afternoon. Time dragged eternally. I dropped into a summer vaudeville, and bought some ties at a haberdasher's. I was bored but unexpectant; I had no premonition of what was to come. Nothing unusual had ever happened to me; friends of mine had sometimes sailed the high seas of adventure or skirted the coasts of chance, but all of the shipwrecks had occurred after a woman passenger had been taken on. "Ergo," I had always said, "no women!" I repeated it to myself that evening almost savagely, when I found my thoughts straying back to the picture of John Gilmore's granddaughter. I even argued as I ate my solitary dinner at a downtown restaurant.

"Haven't you troubles enough," I reflected, "without looking for more? Hasn't Bad News gone lame, with a matinee race booked for next week? Otherwise aren't you comfortable? Isn't your house in order? Do you want to sell a pony in order to have the library done over in mission or the drawing room in gold? Do you want somebody to count the empty cigarette boxes lying around every morning?"

Lay it to the long idle afternoon, to the new environment, to anything you like, but I began to think that perhaps I did. I was confoundedly lonely. For the first time in my life its even course began to waver. The needle registered warning marks on the matrimonial seismograph, lines vague enough, but lines.

My alligator bag lay at my feet, still locked. While I waited for my coffee I leaned back and surveyed the people incuriously. There were the usual couples intent on each other; my new state of mind made me regard them with tolerance. But at the next table, where a man and woman dined together, a different atmosphere prevailed. My attention was first caught by the woman's face. She had been speaking earnestly across the table, her profile turned to me. I had noticed casually her earnest manner, her somber clothes, and the great mass of odd, bronze-colored hair on her neck. But suddenly she glanced toward me and the utter hopelessness—almost tragedy—of her expression struck me with a shock. She half closed her eyes and drew a long breath, then she turned again to the man across the table.

Neither one was eating. He sat low in his chair, his chin on his chest, ugly folds of thick flesh protruding over his collar. He was probably 50, bald, grotesque, sullen, and yet not without a suggestion of power. But he had been drinking; as I looked, he raised an unsteady hand and summoned a waiter with a wine list.

The young woman bent across the table and spoke again quickly. She had unconsciously raised her voice. Not beautiful, in her earnestness and stress she rather interested me. I had an idle inclination to advise the waiter to remove the bottled temptation from the table. I wonder what would have happened if I had? Suppose Harrington had not been intoxicated when he entered the Pullman car Ontario that night!

For they were about to make a journey, I gathered, and the young woman wished to go alone. I drank three cups of coffee, which accounted for my wakefulness later, and shamelessly watched the tableau before me. The woman's protest evidently went for nothing: across the table the man grunted monosyllabic replies and grew more and more lowering and sullen. Once, during a brief unexpected pianissimo in the music, her voice came to me sharply:

"If I could only see him in time!" she was saying. "Oh, it's terrible!"

In spite of my interest I would have forgotten the whole incident at once, erased it from my mind as one does the inessentials and clutterings of memory, had I not met them again, later that evening, in the Pennsylvania station. The situation between them had not visibly altered: The same dogged determination showed in the man's face, but the young woman—daughter or wife? I wondered—had drawn down her veil and I could only suspect what white misery lay beneath.

I bought my berth after waiting in a line of some eight or ten people. When, step by step, I had almost reached the window, a tall woman whom I had not noticed before spoke to me from my elbow. She had a ticket and money in her hand.

"Will you try to get me a lower when you buy yours?" she asked. "I have traveled for three nights in uppers."

I consented, of course; beyond that I hardly noticed the woman. I had a vague impression of height and a certain amount of stateliness, but the crowd was pushing behind me, and some one was standing on my foot.

"Which Will You Have, Lower Ten or Eleven?"

I got two lowers easily, and, turning with the change and berths, held out the tickets.

"Which will you have?" I asked. "Lower 11 or lower 10?"

"It makes no difference," she said. "Thank you very much indeed."

At random I gave her lower 11, and called a porter to help her with her luggage. I followed them leisurely to the train shed, and ten minutes more saw us under way.

I looked into my car, but it presented the peculiarly unattractive appearance common to sleepers. The berths were made up; the center aisle was a path between walls of dingy, breeze-repelling curtains, while the two seats at each end of the car were piled high with suit cases and umbrellas. The perspiring porter was trying to be in six places at once; somebody has said that Pullman porters are black, so they won't show the dirt, but they certainly show the heat.

Nine-fifteen was an outrageous hour to go to bed, especially since I sleep little or not at all on the train, so I made my way to the smoker and passed the time until nearly 11 with cigarettes and a magazine.

The car was very close. It was a warm night, and before turning in I stood a short time in the vestibule. The train had been stopping at frequent intervals, and, finding the brakeman there, I asked the trouble.

It seemed that there was a hot-box on the next car, and that not only were we late, but we were delaying the second section, just behind. I was beginning to feel pleasantly drowsy, and the air was growing cooler as we got into the mountains. I said good-night to the brakeman and went back to my berth. To my surprise, lower ten was already occupied—a suit case projected from beneath, a pair of shoes stood on the floor, and from behind the curtains came the heavy, unmistakable breathing of deep sleep. I hunted out the porter and together we investigated.

"Are you asleep, sir?" asked the porter, leaning over deferentially. No answer forthcoming, he opened the curtains and looked in. Yes, the intruder was asleep—very much asleep—and an overwhelming odor of whisky proclaimed that he would probably remain asleep until morning. I was irritated. The car was full, and I was not disposed to take an upper in order to allow this drunken interloper to sleep comfortably in my berth.

"You'll have to get out of this," I said, shaking him angrily. But he merely grunted and turned over. As he did so, I saw his features for the first time. It was the quarrelsome man of the restaurant.

I was less disposed than ever to relinquish my claim, but the porter, after a little quiet investigation, offered a solution of the difficulty. "There's no one in lower nine," he suggested, pulling open the curtains just across. "It's likely nine's his berth, and he's made a mistake, owing to his condition. You'd better take nine, sir."

I did, with a firm resolution that if nine's rightful owner turned up later I should be just as unwakable as the man opposite. I undressed leisurely, making sure of the safety of the forged notes, and placing my grip as before between myself and the window.

Being a man of systematic habits, I arranged my clothes carefully, putting my shoes out for the porter to polish, and stowing my collar and scarf in the little hammock swung for the purpose.

At last, with my pillows so arranged that I could see out comfortably, and with the unhygienic-looking blanket turned back—I have always a distrust of those much-used affairs—I prepared to wait gradually for sleep.

But sleep did not visit me. The train came to frequent, grating stops, and I surmised the hot box again. I am not a nervous man, but there was something chilling in the thought of the second section pounding along behind us. Once, as I was dozing, our locomotive whistled a shrill warning "You keep back where you belong," it screamed to my drowsy ears, and from somewhere behind came a chastened "All-right-I-will."

I grew more and more wide-awake. At Cresson I got up on my elbow and blinked out at the station lights. Some passengers boarded the train there and I heard a woman's low tones, a southern voice, rich and full. Then quiet again. Every nerve was tense. Time passed, perhaps ten minutes, possibly half an hour. Then, without the slightest warning, as the train rounded a curve, a heavy body was thrown into my berth. The incident, trivial as it seemed, was startling in its suddenness, for although my ears were painfully strained and awake,

I had heard no step outside. The next instant the curtain hung limp again; still without a sound, my disturber had slipped away into the gloom and darkness. In a frenzy of wakefulness, I sat up, drew on a pair of slippers and fumbled for my bath robe.

From a berth across, probably lower ten, came that particularly aggravating snore which begins lightly, delicately, faintly soprano, goes down the scale a note with every breath, and, after keeping the listener tense with expectation, ends with an explosion that tears the very air. I was more and more irritable: I sat on the edge of the berth and hoped the snorer would choke to death.

He had considerable vitality, however; he withstood one shock after another and survived to start again with new vigor. In desperation I found some cigarettes and one match, piled my blankets over my grip, and drawing the curtains together as though the berth were still occupied, I made my way to the vestibule of the car.

I was not clad for dress parade. Is it because the male is so restricted to gloom in his every-day attire that he blossoms into gaudy colors in his pajamas and dressing gowns? It would take a Turk to feel at home before an audience in my red and yellow bath robe, a Christmas remembrance from Mrs. Klopton, with slippers to match.

So, naturally, when I saw a feminine figure on the platform, my first instinct was to dodge. The woman, however, was quicker than I; she gave me a startled glance, wheeled and disappeared, with a flash of two bronze-colored braids, into the next car.

Cigarette box in one hand, match in the other, I leaned against the uncertain frame of the door and gazed after her vanished figure. The mountain air flapped my bath robe around my bare ankles, my one match burned to the end and went out, and still I stared. For I had seen on her expressive face a haunting look that was horror, nothing less. Heaven knows, I am not psychological. Emotions have to be written large before I can read them. But a woman in trouble always appeals to me, and this woman was more than that. She was in deadly fear.

If I had not been afraid of being ridiculous, I would have followed her. But I fancied that the apparition of a man in a red and yellow bath robe, with an unkempt thatch of hair, walking up to her and assuring her that he would protect her would probably put her into hysterics. I had done that once before, when burglars had tried to break into the house, and had startled the parlor maid into bed for a week. So I tried to assure myself that I had imagined the lady's distress—or caused it, perhaps—and to dismiss her from my mind. Perhaps she was merely anxious about the unpleasant gentleman of the restaurant. I thought smugly that I could have told her all about him: That he was sleeping the sleep of the just and the intoxicated in a berth that ought, by all that was fair and right, to have been mine, and that if I were tied to a man who snored like that I should have him anaesthetized and soft palate put where it would never again flap like a loose sail in the wind.

We passed Harrisburg as I stood there. It was starlight, and the great crests of the Alleghanies had given way to low hills. At intervals we passed smudges of gray white, no doubt in daytime comfortable farms, which McKnight says is a good way of putting it, the farms being a lot more comfortable than the people on them.

I was growing drowsy; the woman with the bronze hair and the horrified face was fading in retrospect. It was colder, too, and I turned with a shiver to go in.

As I did so, a bit of paper fluttered into the air and settled on my sleeve, like a butterfly on a gorgeous red and yellow blossom. I picked it up curiously and glanced at it. It was part of a telegram that had been torn into bits.

There were only parts of four words on the scrap, but it left me puzzled and thoughtful. It read: "—ower ten, car seve—" "Lower ten, car seven," was my berth—the one I had bought and found pre-empted.

Coined By Missouri Judge

First Use of Expression, "The Man Higher Up," Has Been Traced to Its Source.

History may be doubtful as to the identity of the man who fastened the "Show Me" tradition on the state of Missouri, but she will not be in the case of the man who coined the expression "The Man Higher Up." The first use of this expression was made by Elmer B. Adams, judge of the federal bench in St. Louis. Even the very case in which he used the expression has been fixed, and the archeologists who have been carrying on the investigation defy the world to show them (being Missouri men), why and where they are wrong.

Certain claims that the phrase, "Get at the Man Higher Up," was first used by Theodore Roosevelt are scouted by the historians in question, who have gone into the inquiry with all the caution and precaution of true scientists. Nowhere in the folklore of the vaudeville stage or of the daily press can be found the slightest reference to the man higher up previously to the date in 1903, when Judge Adams, charging a federal grand jury in their investigation of certain naturalization frauds which were the talk of the country at that time, told the jury "to look not only for the little man who is made a tool, but for the 'The Man Higher Up.'"

Farmer Boy Presidents.

Prof. W. J. Spillman declares that the farms have furnished this country with 92 per cent. of its presidents, 91 per cent. of its governors, 83 per cent. of its cabinet officers, 70 per cent. of its senators, 64 per cent. of its congressmen and 55 per cent. of its railroad presidents.

The Chinese Day.

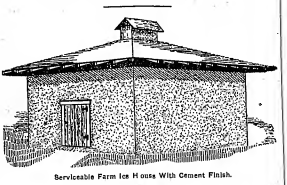
SERVICEABLE HOUSE FOR PRESERVATION OF ICE

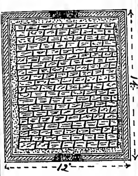
Good Drainage Is Necessary and Walls Must be Constructed So as to Allow Free Circulation of Air Over Top.



Serviceable Farm Ice House With Cement Finish.

A house for ice storage must have proper drainage, to keep the ice out of the water; the foundation and walls must be so constructed that air cannot get to the ice from below, and you must have a free circulation of air over the top of the ice at all times, writes J. E. Bridgeman, in the National Stockman and Farmer. The roof must of course be tight to keep out the rain. Such a house will keep the ice fairly well, regardless of its construction.

But icehouses, like everything else, will give better results if built with some care. The studding should be 2x8-inch timbers, and the spaces between walls filled with sawdust, or other insulating material. The interior walls may be covered with any lumber or material that will keep the sawdust in place. The exterior walls may be covered with boxing and the cracks battened, or drop siding may be used and the roof may be covered with any roofing material that will keep out the rain and snow. To insure proper drainage, excavate the trenches two feet below the foundation and fill the excavation with broken stone. Build the foundation on the stone. A house 10x12 or 12x14 feet square and eight or ten feet in height, will be ample in size for the ordinary family.



Ice House Floor Plan.

Perhaps the best construction for an ice house is one with a stucco finish, as shown in the accompanying illustration. This stucco is simply two coats of Portland cement plaster, over wood or metal lath. Native lumber may be used, and the studding covered with rough lumber, over which is placed the stucco finish. The sand and gravel for cement work are usually found on the farm, or close at hand, which makes the cement work cheaper than wood. This house has a composition roof, and a ventilator built of boards one by two feet square. The spaces between the rafters are left open for ventilation, and the walls are plastered down to grade line. The dirt should be so graded that all water will drain away from the house.

FOR DAISIES AND VIOLETS

Cold Frames Should Have Glass Put on Before Severe Cold Weather Sets in—Air on Mild Days.

The cold frames in which are planted these flowers should have the glass put on before cold weather sets in; cover the sash frosty nights with straw mats. The outside of frame should be banked up with leaves or rotted straw. Air the frames in the middle of every mild day. Daisies and violets will survive the winter in a warm border, covered with a light coat of clean rye straw, which should be taken off in mild weather to harden the plants. When weather is severe put on the straw and cover with a little light brush to hold the straw in place. Plants that are to flower must be given an extra covering in severe weather; a light covering of leaves may be spread over the plants in the frames in severe weather.

MANY SMALL FARM TOOLS

If the average farmer were asked "How much money have you invested in the small tools on this farm?" it is probable that after a moment of thought, during which he would have a mental picture of an axe, a handsaw, a grindstone and rather a confused idea that there was a lot of stuff of one sort or another somewhere about the farm, would reply that from $25 to $50 would cover the cost.

A recent investigation conducted by the Ohio experiment station in co-operation with the U. S. department of agriculture discloses that this is far short of the mark. In order to arrive at some conclusion in regard to this matter, careful inventories were taken on thirty-three Ohio farms, and in every instance the total amount was many times what the owner had "guessed."

The fact that these small tools are bought, one at a time as needed, and are not cared for systematically, leads to a very erroneous idea of their value. In summarizing the inventories of these thirty-three farms, it is estimated that to completely equip a general farm of 160 acres in Ohio with small tools will probably cost from $200 to $300, or in excess of the farmers' "guess" by more than 500 per cent. An error in judgment of this amount, particularly when the error is against the farm, is serious enough to challenge our attention.

Even on farms where inventories are habitually taken, these tools of minor equipment are usually included as "other small tools" and given a guessed at value, somewhat alter the stereotyped expression appearing on sale bills: "other articles too numerous to mention."

Farm requirements differ very greatly, the highly specialized farm not needing nearly so many tools as the general farm. The necessity of a fairly complete outfit is apparent if the farmer would avoid expensive trips to town or to the neighbors to meet some immediate need, thereby stopping teams and laborers until the repair is affected. The advantage of some systematic arrangement is also apparent, in order that the exact tool may be at hand when wanted and thus avoid loss and delay by reason of mislaid, borrowed, stolen or lost tools.

The inventories of the thirty-three farms investigated are summarized and discussed in Circular 98 of the Ohio experiment station, and the articles are so classified and arranged as to make it easy for any farmer to compare the list with those found on his own farm. This circular will be sent free upon request.

Grading Seed Wheat.

Too little stress has been laid on the importance of grading seed wheat. Failure to get a good stand as well as frequently assignable to sowing light, dwarfed seed as to any other cause.

Increased yields, as well as quick germination and uniform stand, says a North Carolina bulletin, are ours to follow careful grading of seed wheat.

Hens Confined.

It has been conclusively proven that hens kept in a yard and fed right will lay more eggs than hens that run at large all over creation. The feed bill will not be so large either, a fact that is worth considering.

CORN CONTESTS FOR YOUTHS

Knowledge and Experience Gained of Far Greater Importance Than Any Prize Offered or Won.

The corn contests which have been carried on in the many states have proven of great educational value to the boys. The prizes offered have added zest to the endeavor to make the best showing and produce the best corn, but the knowledge and experience gained are of far greater importance than any prize. Last year there was issued in Arkansas a circular on the effect of the corn contests upon the boy participating. It says:

"The boy who has engaged in a contest of this kind, whether successfully or not, has gained practical training of far-reaching value and lasting significance. He has been brought in touch with the great natural laws on one hand and with modern science on the other. He has by his own efforts demonstrated the relation between the two. He has been led to work and think, to apply knowledge to the most practical affairs of life. By his own efforts he has made a crop and dignified himself by accomplishment. He has established in his own mind for all time the relation of theory and practice."

Detecting a Chicken Thief.

The wife of a Michigan farmer after losing a number of fine fowls painted the legs of the remainder red. In a few days the red-legged birds turned up in the city market and she had no difficulty in tracing the thief, who is now in jail.

Burying Cabbage.

Do not bury cabbage until danger of very hard freezing. As a rule it should not be buried until about the 10th of November, and later in many sections will insure safer keeping.

The rector suddenly observes that she is hatless and remarks severely:

"Miss Dymple, it is particularly forbidden that women shall come into the church with uncovered heads."

"Oh, bother, I forgot!" responded the young lady irreverently "Well," grabbing up the rector's derby and setting it jauntily on her pert little head, "will this do?"

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING REDUCED

Much has been said about the high cost of living, its causes, and the possibilities of its reduction. But little has been said about the most costly leak: the false economy existing today in nearly every household.

Most foodstuffs are bought with but one point in view: "How cheap can I get it" without a thought of quality or "after cost". One of the most serious is baking powder.

By the use of perfect baking powder the housewife can derive as much economy as from any other article used in baking and cooking. In selecting the baking powder, therefore, care should be exercised to purchase one that retains its original strength and always remains the same, thus making the food sweet and wholesome and producing sufficient leavening gas to make the baking light.

Very little of this leavening gas is produced by the cheap baking powders, making it necessary to use double the quantity ordinarily required to secure good results.

You cannot experiment every time you make a cake or biscuits, or test the strength of your baking powder to find out how much of it you should use; yet with most baking powders you should do this for they are put together so carelessly they are never uniform, the quality and strength varying with each can purchased.

Calumet Baking Powder is made of chemically pure ingredients of tested strength. Experienced chemists put it up. The proportions of the different materials remain always the same. Sealed in air-tight cans, Calumet Baking Powder does not alter in strength and is not affected by atmospheric changes.

In using Calumet you are bound to have uniform bread, cake or biscuits, as it does not contain any cheap, useless or adulterating ingredients so commonly used to increase the weight. Further, it produces pure, wholesome food and is a baking powder of rare merit, therefore, is recommended by leading physicians and chemists. It complies with all pure food laws, both STATE and NATIONAL. The goods are moderate in price, and any lady purchasing Calumet from her grocer, if not satisfied with it can return it and have her money refunded.

Some One Must Do It.

J. Pierpont Morgan, at one of the sumptuous dinners that he gave in Cincinnati during the recent church congress, praised the power of advertising.

Mr. Morgan's eulogy concluded with an epigram quite good and quite true enough to be pasted in every businessman's hat.

"If a dealer," he said, "does not advertise his wares, it is ten to one that the sheriff will do it for him."

Desperate Situation.

"There's no use trying to deny it," remarked Mrs. DeFlatt, "this is the worst cook we've had yet. There positively isn't a decent thing to eat on the table."

"That's right," rejoined DeFlatt.

"Beer" in Kansas.

"Why do you do that?" a subscriber asked him.

"It is for the same reason," he replied, "that we put quotation marks around the word 'ghost.' We don't believe there are any ghosts."—Kansas City Journal.

NEWSPAPERS TAKING IT UP

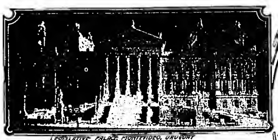
This is a simple home recipe now being made known in all the larger cities through the newspapers. It is intended to check the many cases of Rheumatism and dread kidney trouble which have made so many cripples, invalids and weaklings of some of our brightest and strongest people.

The druggists everywhere, even in the smallest communities, have been notified to supply themselves with the ingredients, and the sufferer will have no trouble to obtain them. The prescription is as follows: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce, and Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle. The dose is one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Recent experiments in hospital cases prove this simple mixture effective in Rheumatism. Because of its positive action upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys, it compels these most vital organs to filter from the blood and system the waste impurities and uric acid which are the cause of rheumatism. It cleanses the kidneys, strengthens them and removes quickly such symptoms as backache, blood disorders, bladder weakness, frequent urination, painful scalding and discolored urine. It acts as a gentle, thorough regulator to the entire kidney structure.

Those who suffer and are accustomed to purchase a bottle of medicine should not let a little inconvenience interfere with making this up, or have your druggist do it for you.

REBELLION IN URUGUAY IS SERIOUS



LEGISLATIVE PALACE: MONTEVIDEO, URUGUAY

DR CLAUDIO WILLIMAN PRESIDENT OF URUGUAY

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay.—Troops are being sent into the interior almost daily by the government in the effort to quell the rebellion that threatens to lead to serious civil war. The insurgents already have captured Nico Perez, a town 125 miles north of Montevideo. The trouble originated in a contest between two factions for the presidency. The government's candidate is Jose Battle y Ordonez, and a large number of the inhabitants are opposed to him and support the pretensions of Dr. Bacchini, who recently resigned the post of foreign minister at the request of President Williman. The four year term of President Williman comes to an end March 1, 1911.

TRAIN APPLE EATER

How Consumers' League Finds Numerous Recruits.

Members Go About Calling for Fruit and When Restaurants and Hotels Refuse Demands Lives Made Miserable.

New York.—A farmer living near Scranton, Pa., disposes of his surplus apples, windfalls, etc., by shipping them to town to be distributed to the children of the factory district.

This is a good way to dispose of cull apples. Every one of these children will become an apple eater and will never get over the habit. We need not fear a surplus of apples in the future while such an army is being trained, says a writer in Rural New Yorker. Every year at this time some one comes asking what the Apple Consumers' league is. It happened that about a dozen years ago the writer had dinner at a well-known New York restaurant. He became apple hungry, but it was impossible to find baked apples or apple sauce on the bill of fare. He called a waiter and put up a hard complaint. In a short time a very polite man came like one who seeks to side-step trouble and about the following dialogue was spoken:

"I hope there is nothing wrong with the food."

"Why, it isn't all here!"

"What is lacking?"

"Apple! Many of us were born in the country and brought up on apples. We like them and want to go where they are served. Why do you not offer baked apple and apple sauce? This is a first-class restaurant—why not make it complete?"

The manager looked around and saw a dozen heads nod with "That's right!" He was a wise man and merely said: "Well, gentlemen, I'll get them. Thank you for the suggestion."

The next day "Baked Apple and Cream" was written in red ink on the bill of fare. There was a rush for the apples that startled the restaurant managers, and several barrels are now served there every week. That suggested the Apple Consumers' league, and we began at once to spread the work. We went about calling for apple, and when the restaurants and hotels failed to offer the fruit we made it our business to make life a burden to the managers. The apple army grew like magic and ere long thousands of travelers took up the refrain. Up to that time the dish of fruit on hotel tables contained bananas and oranges. We filled up these dishes with apples, and made baked apple a fair partner with sliced oranges. There can be no doubt that this simple organization has increased the consumption of apples by 20 per cent.

Some amusing things have grown out of it. The Pennsylvania Horticultural society met at Gettysburg one year. This is the heart of the famous York Imperial section, yet there was not even the smell of an apple about the hotel. Some 50 or more guests began to call for apples, and kept it up at supper until the proprietor sent out and bought some Ben Davis, which he served raw. For breakfast the baked fruit came on piping hot.

When the New York fruit growers met at Penn Yan there was served at dinner an apple pie "like mother used to make." The writer found that the hotel cook was a woman and he suggested that she ought to be made an honorary member of the association as a woman who "could take a handful of flour, a lump of butter and sugar and even a Ben Davis apple and make a pie that would induce a man to buy a sealskin coat for his mother-in-law." At the next meal at the hotel there was such a call for apple pie as nearly to bankrupt the kitchen.

REVIVING HIS OLD ORCHARD

Wonderful Results of Proper Handling of Aged Apple Trees in Massachusetts.

Boston.—J. Stearns Wyman has had an experience in orcharding which will interest growers of fruits. Mr. Wyman's home is in Winchester, and apple trees, some of them half a hundred years old, have bloomed and fruited on his grounds without attention until last year, when he got busy, with a view in mind of trying to make the old trees grow bigger and better fruit.

Large apples were produced by a tree which the owner believed to be the most wretched-looking one in Winchester. It was a down-and-out growth, very old, hopelessly decrepit, and all in as a producer when Mr. Wyman began revival work on it. He cleaned out the hollow trunk, filled the void with cement, removed all loose bark on trunk and limbs, cut away dead branches and covered the cut places with a preparation to keep out the weather.

He did some very close pruning, but that was what the old tree needed, and very early last spring it bloomed in a glory of gladness that surprised some of the neighbors who were quite sure that Mr. Wyman had been too severe in his revival work.

No fertilizers were used. As the weeks rolled their courses the old apple tree seemed to get into the gayety of the sunshine and the breezes. Bees and humming birds quested sweetness in the hearts of its blossoms, robins and finches and bluebirds flittered through its foliage, and early in the summer first baby apples as big as horse chestnuts foretold to Mr. Wyman the autumn coming of big fruit.

STATE TO INSURE ALL MEN

England's Contributory Scheme to Counteract Lack of Employment—Outline of Plan.

London.—As the British government has already announced that it has in hand a national scheme of insurance against unemployment it may be taken for granted that Sir Hubert Llewellyn Smith, who is chief of the permanent staff of the board of trade, indicated semi-officially the lines on which that scheme is based in the address which he delivered recently as president of the economic science section of the British association. "First," he said, "the scheme must be compulsory, otherwise the bad personal risks against which we must always be on our guard would be certain to predominate; second, the scheme must be contributory, for only by exacting rigorously as a necessary qualification for benefit that a sufficient number of weeks' contribution shall have been paid by each recipient can we possibly hope to put limits on the exceptionally bad risks.

"Our analysis leads us step by step to the contemplation of a national contributory scheme of insurance, within the limits of a large group of trades—a group so far as possible self-contained and carefully selected as favorable for the experiment, the funds being derived from compulsory contributions from all those engaged in these trades, with a subsidy and guarantee from the state. The rules relating to benefit should be so devised as to discriminate effectively against unemployment which is mainly due to personal causes, while giving a substantial allowance to those whose unemployment results from industrial causes beyond the control of the individual."

Such a scheme Sir Hubert regards as actuarily possible, at least for such a group of trades as building, engineering and shipbuilding.

GATES FOR PANAMA

Canal Will Require Ninety-Two of Them.

Giant Portals to Be as High as Six-Story House, 65 Feet Wide, 7 Feet Thick—The Cost Will Be $5,500,000.

Pittsburg.—Boys dreaming of gates they will seize as Halloween trophies would not in the wildest nightmare imagine such enormous gates as are being made in Pittsburg for the Panama Canal. They will be the largest gates in the world.

Any one of the 92 of them—for there are to be 46 pairs in all—will be about as high as a six-story building, as wide (65 feet) as many city buildings, and 7 feet thick.

The structural steel that will go to make them will weigh 50,000 tons, or over eight times as much as was used to build the Eiffel Tower in Paris.

The mighty portals, designed to admit a world's commerce from one ocean to another, must withstand a tide of criticism as well as a tremendous pressure of water and possible convulsions of the earth. For years the controversy over gates or no gates, locks or sea level, has been the dividing issue of the canal problem. In the face of fear in some quarters that the foundations on the Isthmus are not sure enough for locks, that earthquakes or water pressure would dislodge them, and that an enemy's mines or accidental explosions might easily destroy them, the government has begun to build the gates.

The cost of the gates will be $5,000,000. Of the 60,000 tons of steel required the heaviest single pieces will weigh about 18 tons. These will be the base girders, which are seven feet long and which will be placed much like the first floor girders of a skyscraper. The series of girders above them will range from 3.3 feet apart near the bottom to 5 feet apart at the top, and over the skeleton structure thus formed a sheathing of water-tight armor plate will be bolted much after the fashion of clapboards on a house.

The thickness of the plates will range from an inch at the base to seven-sixteenths of an inch at the top. The weight of a single gate will be about 600 tons and the dimensions are 77 to 82 feet high, 60 to 65 feet wide and 7 feet thick.

The thousands of individual pieces, numbered and fitted to go together as easily as children's blocks, will be shipped by steamer via Baltimore and with them will go over 400 skilled structural steel builders to set them up. The advance guard of experts leaves here in December and the first work will probably begin early in 1911. It will take three years to complete the job.

The location of the 46 pairs of gates will be: Twenty at the Gatun dam on the Pacific side, 12 at Pedro Miguel and 14 at Miraflores, near the Atlantic entrance. The gates are designed to hold back water 47.4 feet deep in a channel 110 feet wide, which means a pressure of a million pounds.

Engineers assert that even if a tremendous explosion or earthquake should damage or destroy one or more sets of gates, no great disaster would ensue, for all locks are to be made in duplicate to accommodate traffic in both directions at once, and the wreckage of one set of locks would only necessitate the diversion of commerce into another set. But really violent earthquakes have not occurred in the Panama region for more than two centuries.

Each lock will be ample for a ship 50 per cent. larger than any vessel now afloat, and it has been estimated that as many as 100 ocean ships may be handled in a single day.

FINDS CURE FOR PELLAGRA

Chicago.—A cure for pellagra is asserted to have been discovered as the result of experiments conducted at the Cook County Infirmary at Dunning. It consists of the transfusion of the blood of healthy individuals into the veins of the afflicted. Out of 34 cases so treated Dr. C. O. Wilhite asserted that nearly all have been cured.

"Pellagra is common in our institution," said Dr. Wilhite. "The transfusion of healthy blood into the veins of the affected persons is about the only method I know of that will cure it, and certainly we have had great success. I don't think the Rockefeller Institute has anything on us in the treatment of these cases, and, as a matter of fact, I guess we have a little the best of them because pellagra is uncommon on the east, and they can't get as many patients in New York to work on as we have.

"We have been giving this treatment for about four months and have treated 34 cases. The best blood for transfusion comes from persons who have been cured of the disease, and it only takes one inoculation. Shortly after the treatment we notice that the skin of the patient clears up and he becomes more active in body and alert in mind."

HORNETS CLEAN OUT STUDIO

Artist Hangs Up Nest Over Fireplace and Has Decidedly Interesting Time—Got Stung.

Winsted, Conn.—Robert Hamilton, landscape artist of New York, was routed from his studio in the Berkshire hills near Lee, Mass., the other night by hornets which had been brought to the place in cold storage by two women.

The nest, almost as large as a bushel basket, was found in the woods by the women. They cut off the limb to which the nest was fastened and brought the trophy to Hamilton, who placed the nest over his fireplace.

He was on his porch waiting for the hunter's moon to show over the eastern hills when he heard a roaring noise inside. Thinking the chimney was afire he rushed in. The room was full of hornets, swirling in clouds. The warmth from the fireplace had awakened them. The artist pried open two windows and threw open a door to cool off the place. At midnight he ventured into the house, as the cold air had reduced the army to quiet.

At 3 o'clock the next morning Hamilton had cleaned house and buried a pailful of hornets under the pines.

"Did you get stung?" was asked of Hamilton.

"H'm! In what way do you mean?" he sparred. "Oh, by the hornets? No-o; not by them."

A wife is not doing her duty if she loves her husband more than she loves herself.—Father Donnelly.

But Chronic Kidney Trouble Was Finally Cured.

Charles Von Soehnen, 201 A St., Colfax, Wash., says: "For 30 years I suffered from kidney trouble and was laid up for days at a time. There was a dull ache through the small of my back and I had rheumatic pains in every joint. The kidney secretions passed too freely and I was annoyed by having to arise at night. I could not work without intense suffering. Through the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, I was practically given a new pair of kidneys. I cannot exaggerate their virtues."

Hardly a Compliment.

In the excitement of the moment public speakers often say the opposite of what they mean to convey, and "when Henry Irving gave a reading in the Ulster hall, in 1878," says Bram Stoker, in "Personal Reminiscences of Henry Irving," "one speaker made as pretty an Irish bull as could be found, though the bull is generally supposed to belong to other provinces than the hard-headed Ulster. In descanting on the many virtues of the guest of the evening he mentioned the excellence of his moral nature and rectitude of his private life in these terms: 'Mr. Irving, sir, is a gentleman what leads a life of unbroken blemish.'"

A Sure Cure.

Mother—I'm afraid Gwendoline is setting her heart on that young Penniless.

Father—You think so?

Mother—I am almost sure of it.

Father—Well, he is not a fit person for her to marry. He is as poor as a rat and has no prospects. Something must be done to set her against him.

Mother—I have thought of that and have hit upon what I think is an excellent plan.

Father—Yes? What is it?

Mother—We must tell her that we want her to marry him.

BABY'S SCALP CRUSTED

"Our little daughter, when three months old, began to break out on the head and we had the best doctors to treat her, but they did not do her any good. They said she had eczema. Her scalp was a solid scale all over. The burning and itching was so severe that she could not rest, day or night. We had about given up all hopes when we read of the Cuticura Remedies. We at once got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and followed directions carefully. After the first dose of the Cuticura Resolvent, we used the Cuticura Soap freely and applied the Cuticura Ointment. Then she began to improve rapidly and in two weeks the scale came off her head and new hair began to grow. In a very short time she was well. She is now sixteen years of age and a picture of health. We used the Cuticura Remedies about five weeks, regularly, and then we could not tell she had been affected by the disease. We used no other treatment after we found out what the Cuticura Remedies would do for her. J. Fish and Ella M. Fish, Mt. Vernon, Ky., Oct. 12, 1909."

McLean Met His Match.

John R. McLean stepped in front of a lurching Irishman, one evening, and obstructed the sidewalk so that the Irishman was obliged to stop and look at him. McLean said:

"Here's that half dollar I borrowed of you. Now you must quit telling the neighbors that I never pay my debts."

Half drunk, and wholly dazed, the Irishman took the silver piece, looked at it intently, and then said:

No Union.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at a luncheon at the Colony club in New York, urged on women the necessity for union.

"If we are to get the vote," she said, "we must stand together. Too many women face this question as they face all others—like the elderly belles at the charity ball.

"'What a flatterer Wooter Von Twilnice?' said the second.

"'Why, did he tell you you looked ice?' said the second.

"'No,' was the reply. 'He told me you did!'"

It Revolted Him.

William Loeb, Jr., at a dinner in New York, referred with a smile to the heavier penalties, even to imprisonment, that are now to be inflicted upon smugglers.

"They take it hard, very hard, these smugglers," said Mr. Loeb. "Revolted at the size of their fines, they make me think of George White, the chicken thief.

"'What!' George shouted reproachfully on hearing his sentence. 'What! Ten dollars for stealin' that chicken? Why, judge, I could 'a' bought a smarter hen for 50 cents!'"

Costly Talent.

"You are sure that airships will make war so expensive as to be utterly impracticable?" said one military expert.

"Quite sure," replied the other. "The flying machines won't cost so much, but we won't be able to pay the sums required by aviators for going up in them."

All in the Brogue.

The Rev. Charles H. Kelly, an English clergyman, tells a story concerning old General Kemmis, whom he describes as "a fine spoken man." Once the gallant officer found a soldier in a very dirty condition. "Take him," he said to a sergeant—"take him and lave him in the Tagus." Some hours after he met the sergeant again and inquired, "Sergeant, did you do as I ordered you?" "I did, sir." "Where is the culprit?" "Sure," replied the sergeant, "I left him in the Tagus, as your honor ordered—up to his neck."

And the author proceeds: "The story of General Kemmis and his way of fine talking, with the Irish sergeant's reply in good Irish brogue, brings to mind one of O'Connell, a cousin of the liberator. Once O'Connell was pointing out the celebrities in Phoenix park to a young friend when the Hon. and Very Rev. Fitzroy Stanhope passed. 'D'ye see that man,' he said—'him in the trap? That's a dane.' The youth, however, had seen the reverend gentleman before. 'No, it isn't,' he replied. 'That's Mr. Stanhope, an Englishman.' " "'Tis not a Dane of Sweden I mane, sir,' said O'Connell angrily. ''Tis a dane of the church.' "

The Oldest Epitaph.

The oldest epitaph in English, which is found in a churchyard in Oxfordshire and dates from the year 1370, to modern readers would be unintelligible not only from its antique typography, but from its obsolete language, the first two lines of which run as follows and may be taken as a sample of the whole:

"Man com & se how schal alle dede be; wen yow comes bad & bare; noth have ven we away fare; all ye werines yt ve for care."

The modern reading would be: "Man, come and see how shall all dead be when you come poor and bare; nothing have when we away fare. All is weariness that we for care."

Dreadful.

On the question of the practicability of prohibition Mark Twain is said to have expressed his views as follows:

"I am a friend of temperance, and I want it to succeed, but I don't think prohibition is practical. The Germans, you see, prevent it. Look at them. They have invented a method of making brandy out of sawdust. Now, what chance will prohibition have when a man can take a ripsaw and go out and get drunk with a fence rail? What is the good of prohibition if a man is able to make brandy smashes out of the shingles on his roof or if he can get the delirium tremens by drinking the legs of the kitchen table?"

The Quarrel.

Greene—My wife and I quarreled last night for the first time in years. Browne—What about? Greene—She thought the reason we had never done so before was due to her generous nature, and I thought it was mine.—Exchange.

Humor is not expected on a deathbed, but it is often there. An English clergyman, Rev. Charles H. Kelly, relates a good story about the late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. He was on the borderland of death at Mentone, and the night was very stormy. Next morning a lady said to Spurgeon, "I am afraid the wild waves disturbed you, Mr. Spurgeon."

"No," replied the great preacher, "but do you know what the wild waves were saying? They were saying, 'Let us spray.' "

A Hard Jolt.

At a certain college it was the custom to have the students write the following pledge at the bottom of their examination papers: "I hereby certify on my honor that I have neither given nor received aid during this examination."

Soon after handing in his paper to a professor, noted for his sarcasm, a young fellow hurriedly entered the classroom and said, "Professor, I forgot to put the pledge on my paper."

"Altogether unnecessary," replied the teacher. "I have just finished looking over your paper, and I feel sure that you did not give nor receive aid."

For Breakfast Try "Sunkist" Oranges

Luscious Tree-Ripened Fruit

Get This Valuable Orange Spoon

Save 12 "Sunkist" orange (or lemon) wrappers and send them to us, with 12 cents to pay charges, packing, etc., and we will present you with a genuine Rogers Orange Spoon, of beautiful design and highest quality. Begin saving wrappers today. If you desire more than one, send 12 "Sunkist" wrappers and 12 cents for each additional spoon. In remitting, please send one-cent stamps when the amount is less than 24 cents; on amounts above 24 cents, we prefer money order, express order or bank draft. Don't send cash. 'Your marriage to this plebeian American heiress, my son," said the Countess De Rroque, "will humble our ancestral pride in the dust."

If you are in a certain Irish town and are looking out for lodgings you would probably come to the conclusion that none are to be had, for, search as you will for the familiar "Apartments to Let" notice so often seen in the windows of houses in other places, you will search in vain. Instead you may observe fastened by the flap to the window a clean white envelope. This is an indication to all whom it may concern that apartments are to be had within. This curious custom is greatly in vogue at the seaside health resort Kilkee, County Clare, where all houses that have apartments to let exhibit a white envelope in the window.—London Answers.

He Was Losing Money.

A pair of preliminary fighters, Marty Allen and Tim Morrissey by name, met at one of the clubs not long ago. Mr. Morrissey had hardly swung at Mr. Allen before he landed flush on the jaw. A pivot tooth that Mr. Allen had just paid $12 to have set in place was knocked loose. Mr. Allen swallowed it.

"Go easy on that side, cull," said Mr. Allen hoarsely. "I just paid $55 for bridgewoik on me jawr."

Mr. Morrissey grinned viciously and came in swinging like a gate. His mitts found Mr. Allen's valuable jaw and loosened that fifty-five dollar bridge. Mr. Allen slipped to the floor and began to take the count.

"I know I ain't hoit," said Mr. Allen, beginning to untie his gloves. "But I stand to loose $55 wort' of teet' and I only get $12 fur goin' on dis bout. Is dat business?"—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Good Openers.

George and his mother-in-law were not the best of friends. The old lady was suspicious of his occasional late hours and rarely had a word of commendation of any kind for him. One day, however, as she watched him unscrew the top of a can of preserves which had withstood her own and the young wife's efforts she said, rather grudgingly to her daughter, "Well, George certainly has very strong hands."

"Hasn't he, though?" cried the young wife admiringly. "Now I know what he meant when he spoke in his sleep last night about having such a beautiful pair of openers."

ALL DAY ELECTRIC SERVICE SOON

The crew of men who have been here for several weeks making the improvements in the Red River Power company's electric light and power plant have about completed their work. One or two pieces of machinery that are needed have not arrived and that has delayed the work somewhat. If these arrive in a day or two the new service will be started the first of the week.

The new generator was tested yesterday and was found to be in perfect running order. The town has been rewired and the plant has been improved in every way. Manager Brown, who was over from Grand Forks yesterday, says that when the new service is started Red Lake Falls will have one of the finest plants in the northwest.

WILL TEST SEED CORN

High School Students Will do It Free of Charge.

The students in the department of agriculture of the Red Lake Falls high school desire some practice in seed corn testing and for that reason that department of the public schools will make germination tests of seed corn for farmers free of charge. In securing the corn to be sent in, farmers should make sure that the samples are representative by taking kernels from all parts of the ear and from several ears. Two or three hundred kernels, if well selected, is enough to make a very satisfactory test and this amount may be mailed to the superintendent, L. V. Koos, or a few ears, well selected so as to be representative may be brought in and left at the superintendent's office. There is no doubt that the testing will be well done for the students will work under the direction of the instructor in agriculture. The students will be able to make only twenty tests so the first to end in the samples of corn will secure the benefits of the tests.

Snubbing a Grand Duke.

When the Russian Grand Duke Sergius, who was blown to pieces with a dynamite bomb, was governor of Warsaw he thought it would be a good idea if the people of that city would contribute to a fund with which to buy sunflower seeds to be given to the Russian soldiers, who are very fond of chewing them. Sergius announced that every one sending money would be given a receipt, but those sending 1,000 rubles ($510) or more would be thanked personally by himself. It is said that the response was excellent; but, though no one sent in 1,000 rubles and asked to be thanked personally by the grand duke, many sent in 999 rubles and asked for the receipt.

LAST SPECIAL CONTEST OFFER

The offer in the last issue of 20,000 votes on old subscriptions and 39,000 votes on new subscriptions is the last offer that will be made in the Gazette's big voting contest. There will be no more special offers or official ballots. It is now simply a matter of hustling and there is just thirty days in which to do the hustling. Hundreds of dollars can still be collected and there are many opportunities to get in the big vote on new subscriptions. How much can you do in a week? Not much. A month is little enough time to go over the ground and the contestant who keeps at it dilligently for the next thirty days is the one who will win the piano. The longer you wait the harder it will be, for others will have canvassed the field.

You may carry on this big vote-getting campaign for thirty days and hold as many votes as you wish until the last minute, even though the subscription money is paid in. Ballots are issued when subscription money is paid in and these ballots may be cast or held until later as the contestant may desire.

The vote is now so even that any of those a little behind can by hustling a few subscriptions get to a place among the leaders. No one has a cinch on the piano and just thirty days hustling is going to land it for one of the contestants.

Don't forget—

That from now until the contest closes 20000 votes will be given on old subscriptions.

That from now until the contest closes 39000 votes will be given on new subscriptions.

That from now until the contest closes coupon-ballots good for 6000 votes when ten merchants coupons are attached will be printed in each issue of the paper.

There will be no more offers, and from now until Jan. 16, the day the contest closes, every candidate should do some systematic work by not only hustling herselves but by having her friends on the job also.

Zelia Quesnelle was in the lead when the votes were counted Saturday night. Standings of contestants follow:

Zelia Quesnelle	700,365
Mayme Laurent	633,129
Lucie Crompe	422,922
Mildred Sortedahl	256,040
Agnes Anderson	132,193

The joy rider ten miles from town when he discovers that the gasoline tank is empty can sympathise with the Gazette force this week. He can appreciate the things we said, too. The little gasoline engine that furnishes the power for the typesetting maching has been on the sick list and, like the stranded bubble artist, we have been compelled to arrive "by hand."

Surmounting a Crisis.

Edward Everett Hale used to tell with a rueful smile a story of his boyhood, when, like other boys, he occasionally mislaid some of his belongings. His gloves in particular had a strange way of disappearing one at a time. At last his mother, by way of assisting his memory, sent him out one day with a red cotton glove on one hand and a white glove on the other. Even at this painful crisis, however, his wits helped him.

"I held one hand in front of me and one behind my back," said Dr. Hale, "and it seemed to me that people coming toward me would think I had on a pair of white gloves, while those behind would think I wore a pair of bright red ones."

PIERRE BOTTINEAU

Interesting Story About the Famous Guide and Scout

At the time of the death of the late Pierre Bottineau in this city, several years ago, there was published in the Chicago Record-Herald an interesting story of the experiences of the famous frontier character. The Gazette has been furnished with a copy of the paper and the story is given below because it will interest the hundreds of people who knew the late Pierre Bottineau.

There recently died at his home in Red Lake Falls a man who was so thoroughly identified with the early history of Minnesota that to relate it without mentioning his name would be like trying to make bricks without staw. This man was Pierre Bottineau, the offspring of a French father and an Indian mother, and he possessed all the characteristics of both races.

Mr. Bottineau was a native of what is now North Dakota, having been born 12 miles west of the place where Fargo, N. D., now stands. At the time of his birth Lord Selkirk formed a colony of Swedes and Scotchmen near Fort Garry, and when Bottineau was 10 years of age these people began an exodus for other points. Young as he was, Bottineau was an Subscription Swindlers.

Word comes to the Herald that subscription swindlers are using its name to defraud people in many parts of the territory in Minnesota in which this newspaper circulates.

These men are offering a combination of the Herald, Colliers' the Ladies' Home Journal and other periodicals at ridiculously low prices. All those who are swindled get out of it is a receipt which is worthless.

Saffron as a Perfume.

It seems strange to us today to read of saffron as a perfume. But such it undoubtedly was almost universally, and the element of "romance" about it lies in the story told by Hakluyt of a pilgrim smuggling, at the risk of his life, from the Levant a head of saffron in a hollow made in his staff, from which grew the plantation which gave its name to Saffron Walden.—London Spectator.

Reservation People Got Poor Hand in Thief River Falls Game

It seems that the appointments recently made to fill the offices in Pennington county are not only unsatisfactory to the farmers in a few instances, but to the fair minded people of Thief River Falls as well. The giving of the most of the offices, and the best ones at that, to Thief River Falls men was not a fair deal. With four commissioners out of five farmers it would have been but just to have given at least half the offices at their disposal to parties living outside the city. The Eleven Towns, representing more than two-fifths of the county's territory, got but one office and that we understand was second choice. The selection of Rev. E. A. Mostue for county superintendent was a good selection and his appointment will meet with universal approval throughout this territory but the office is considered unimportant and does not relieve the commissioners from the charge of unfairness.—Eleven Towns.

NOW VINDICATED

BY STRICTLY PARTY VOTE

Says Evidence Wholly Failed to Establish a Case—Glavis and Pinchot are Roundly Scored by This Committee.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 7.—Vindicating Secretary of the Interior Ballinger upon all the charges brought against him and condemning his accusers as having been inspired by a deep feeling of animosity built upon a supposed difference in policy respecting conservation, the majority of the congressional committee, which investigated the so-called Ballinger-Pinchot case, today submitted its report to congress.

After stating that the evidence presented related in the main to charges of various kinds against Ballinger and that these came chiefly from two sources, L. R. Glavis and Gifford Pinchot, the majority announced the following conclusion:

"The evidence has wholly failed to make out a case. Neither any fact proved nor all facts put together, exhibit Ballinger as being anything but a competent and honorable gentleman, who honestly and faithfully performed the duties of his high office with an eye singly to the public interest."

As to the conduct of Glavis, the report declares that he had sufficient time and abundant assistance to make the field examination which he had demanded. In this connection the committee says:

"If his demand was in good faith, Glavis was grossly remiss in his duty in not having the examination made then."

The Ballinger-Pinchot investigation committee concluded its work today. A report representing the views of the majority of the committee was presented to both houses of congress at the opening at noon. At the same time independent reports of the democratic members of the committee and of Representative Madison of Kansas also were submitted.

The conclusions of the republicans were submitted to the democrats at a meeting of the full committee held at 10 o'clock this morning. The republican members except Representative Madison had signed the report.

South Dakota, 583,888, an increase of 182,318, or 45.4 per cent over 401,670 in 1900. Increase from 1890 to 1900 was 72,762 or 22.1 per cent.

At the morning session addresses were made by representatives of the various chapters.

HANNA OPPOSES SCHEME

TO CLOSE NON-RESERVATION INDIAN SCHOOLS IN STATE.

Commissioner Valentine Says That These Schools Produce Very Small Results.

Washington, Dec. 6.—Pursuant to the administration policy to close all non-reservation schools, the Bismarck and Wahpeton Indian schools are in danger of being closed. These schools represent a total investment of more than $200,000, and according to Commissioner Valentine are a drug upon the country in so far as results are concerned.

The interior department has taken a strong stand in favor of reservation schools, and if they can muster sufficient votes in congress, every non-reservation school in the country is slated to go.

Representative Hanna, however, is making a determined fight for the continuation of the two North Dakota institutions and in the preliminary skirmish today succeeded in having $200,000 inserted in the Indian bill for each project. He admits that he will have an uphill fight to keep the items in the bill.

Secretary Ballinger today submitted to congress a schedule showing the number of acres of the public domain withdrawn from entry under the provision of the act of June 25, 1910, in North Dakota. A total of 1,782,818 acres of coal lands was withdrawn.

The treasury department estimates for the ensuing year call upon congress for $15,000 for support for the Fort Berthold Indians. Ten thousand dollars is asked to start the Devils Lake Indians on their way to self support. The money is to be used for the purchase of implements so the Indians may be taught industrial pursuits as well as farming.

Instead of the usual large appropriations for the Bismarck and Wahpeton schools, only $2,000 is asked for the care of the property in each case. The interior department would abandon the institutions. On the other hand, $7,600 of improvements are contemplated on the Red river in North Dakota.

MUST RETRACT.

Governor Elect Baldwin of Connecticut Still Hostile.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 6.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has written to Governor-elect Simeon E. Baldwin several times since the election of Nov. 8, but the letters have been returned. There has been no definite adjustment of the controversy which arose over Colonel Roosevelt's criticism of Judge Baldwin's speech on workingmen's compensation laws, but mutual friends are said to be trying to bring about a reconciliation.

Colonel Ullman, president of the New Haven chamber of commerce has been in correspondence with Roosevelt in order to pave the way for the acceptance by Judge Baldwin of an invitation to address the chamber at its banquet next Tuesday when Roosevelt will be a guest of honor. It is stated that Judge Baldwin insists that a public statement must come from Roosevelt touching upon the latter's speech at Concord, N. H., before a direct communication will be considered.

Pending the statement from Roosevelt there is no acceptance by Judge Baldwin of the invitation to the banquet as a guest and speaker.

Gets Six Years Imprisonment.

Cherbourg, France, Dec. 6.—Ernest H. Walker, fireman of the battleship Kansas, has been convicted by court-martial of having caused the death of Patrick J. Fitzsimmons, a water tender of the Louisiana, and sentenced to six years imprisonment.

The court found that the crime was not premeditated. Fitzsimmons was a participant in a fight between white and negro bluejackets from the second division of the United States Atlantic fleet on Nov. 16 and received wounds from which he died at the hospital on the following day.

Beach Depot Burned.

Beach, N. D., Dec. 6.—The N. P. station at Beach which has been an eye sore to the town for years went up in smoke. The fire started in a box car, which was attached to the freight depot and was used as a temporary express room.

The people of the town turned out and fought the blaze when it first started and thought they had it out, but about midnight it broke out again and the building was destroyed.

Davis, a prominent piano dealer of this city, aged 26, met instant death yesterday about 5 o'clock, when his automobile ran off an embankment half a mile west of Buttzville, N. D., and turned turtle. Mr. Davis was found about a half hour after the accident. The machine had crushed his chest. He had been to Sheldon and was returning home.

The unfortunate young man lived all his life at Lisbon and had a host of friends in the city and vicinity. He was single and is survived by his mother.

2,075,708 IN MINN.

GREATEST GAIN IN CITIES

SOME OTHER STATES.

Maryland, 1,294,450	106,405
Nebraska, 1,192,214	126,914
Illinois, 5,638,691	817,041
Oklahoma, 1,657,155	242,978
New York, 9,113,279	1,844,385
New Hampshire, 430,572	19,984
Alabama, 2,138,093	309,396
Florida, 761,139	222,697

Washington, D. C. — The population of the state of Minnesota is 2,075,708, according to the thirteenth federal census figures. This is an increase of 324,314, or 18.5 per cent, over 1,751,394 in 1900. The increase from 1890 to 1900 was 449,668.

The returns place the state of Minnesota in the two million class. The major part of the gain is credited to the three largest cities—Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth—but the rural communities show a growth that is more than merely healthy.

An increase of more than 100,000 is shown for the farms and the small towns of the state and this immense army of workers is increasing every day. While the population of the three large cities had prepared the average Minnesotan for a large state increase, it was not hoped by any but the most optimistic that it would be more than 300,000.

Older States Are Beaten.

Older and larger states that showed indications of great progress have been left behind in the struggle for supremacy in population and few states in the union show as large an increase, and still fewer showed a larger percentage gain.

The steady stream of sturdy farmers from the old countries, the equally steady stream of skilled workers and mechanics and the flow of wealth to Minnesota has been continuing for years. Its wealth, climate and promises of bounteous crops have brought new citizens to Minnesota from all over the world.

Nearly every county in the state shows gains and some of them have almost doubled since 1900. Those counties containing the cities show an especially large increase. In 1880, only 30 years ago, when the first federal census was taken in the state, Minnesota had a population of only 780,773, and has gained 1,294,935 in that period.

Texas and Oregan and Washington have a larger percentage increase, but the railroads of the country have spent millions of dollars in advertising and land has been offered free to thousands who would take it. The growth in Minnesota has been a steady, natural increase and there is no danger of losing any of the gain.

Population by Counties.

The details of the census of Minnesota by counties are as follows, showing the changes in it total and in each county by the 1910 returns, compared with 1900:

Reapportionment Now Possible.

Final action in the way of shaping a bill for the reapportionment of the state into legislative districts can now be taken by the next legislature. The census announcement was the only thing that held back plans of those favorable to the measure. It is 13 years since the present system of legislative representation was drawn up and the apportionment then made was based on the state census of 1895.

The inequality of the present apportionment is shown in the accompanying table. The state senator in Dodge county is elected by a constituency numbering only 12,094 while the Fifty-second legislative district has nearly 63,000 people.

The representation of the various districts with the 1910 population of each follows:

Present Representation.

Ramsey county includes districts 33 to 37. The population is 223,675 and the county is represented by five senators and 11 members of the house. This is 44,735 for each senator.

Hennepin county includes districts 38 to 47. The population is 333,480 and the county is represented by seven senators and 16 members of the house. This is 49,640 for each senator.

Other Districts.

Other districts in order follow:

St. Louis, Cook and Lake counties are divided into three districts with three senators and six representatives. The Forty-ninth, Fiftieth and part of the Fifty-first are included in St. Louis county with a population of 163,274. The remainder of the Fifty-first district is made up by Cook and Lake counties. The population of Cook is 1,336 and Lake 8,011. St. Louis county has a senator for each 65,000 people and five house members for each 32,655 people. The remaining districts follow:

RELIEF FUND TOTALS $88,000.

Contributions to Northern Minnesota Fire Sufferers About All In.

St. Paul. — The contributions to the fund for the permanent relief in the fire-swept districts of Northern Minnesota have reached a total of $88,000. The donations have been coming in slowly and in small sums of late, and Kenneth Clark, president of the Minnesota Red Cross society, said that he believed the above figures represented practically all that may be expected until the need becomes more urgent.

"Of this amount," said Mr. Clark, "only about $25,000 has been expended, which leaves a balance sufficient to carry out all relief pleas for probably two months to come. Before it is entirely exhausted I understand the state legislature will be asked to appropriate a sum sufficient to take care of the fire sufferers through the early spring and until their farms are again on a paying basis."

CHURCH CELEBRATION PLANNED.

Bishop Heffron to be Guest at Rochester for Christmas.

Winona.—Bishop Heffron has accepted an invitation to go to Rochester for Christmas and take part in the celebration by St. John's parish of the raising of its church debt. The bishop will preach Sunday and on Monday evening will speak at a program to be given at the Metropolitan theater. The mortgage will be burned and the church property formally presented to Bishop Heffron.

Contests Stevens' Election.

St. Paul. — John L. Gieske, defeated candidate on the Democratic ticket for Congress in the Fourth district, comprising Ramsey, Washington and Chisago counties, has served formal notice of a contest against declaration of the election of his Republican opponent, Frederick C. Stevens, who, on the face of the returns, defeated Mr. Gieske by more than 5,000 votes.

Minnesota Debaters Beaten.

Minneapolis. — The University of Illinois debating team defeated the University of Minnesota talkers in the first intercollegiate debate at Minnesota this year. The judges were unanimous in their decision. Minnesota also lost to Iowa at Iowa City.

HIBBING NOT IN DRY ZONE.

People Assert Line Runs Three Miles East of Village.

Duluth.—Hibbing people claim the government has made an error in putting that town in the dry list by enforcing the treaty of 1855. It is claimed that the village of Hibbing is three miles outside the boundaries, and that the eastern boundary runs between Carson and Kelley lakes, to the west of the village.

Want Waterworks System.

St. Peter.—In order to secure needed fire protection property owners in North Mankato will probably bond their village for $20,000 to construct a municipal waterworks system. At a mass meeting held recently seventy-five taxpayers signed a petition requesting the council to call a special election to submit the proposition to the people, and it will be held next month. An engineer who has been engaged estimates that the village can construct a reservoir, lay mains and erect a pumping plant for $20,000.

Elmquist Inspects Soo.

Thief River Falls.—Charles Elmquist, state railway and warehouse commissioner, arrived in this city, having completed an official inspection of the new Thief River Falls-Duluth branch of the Soo line. He was accompanied by the secretary of the commission and Superintendent Michaels of the Soo road. The commissioner found the line, in first-class condition, being better in equipment, solidity and construction than many large branch lines on the older roads.

River Congress Delegates Named.

St. Paul. — Governor A. O. Eberhart has appointed 24 delegates from Minnesota to attend the National Rivers and Harbors congress to be held at Washington on Dec. 7, 8 and 9. A party of army engineers under Major Shunk's direction last summer made a survey of the river valley from Big Stone lake to Mankato.

Fritz Succeeds Schaefer.

St. Paul.—Governor A. O. Eberhart, announces the appointment of Andrew Fritz of St. Cloud, as public examiner, when the term of Anton Schaefer expires early in the year. It had been expected that Fritz would be appointed, but other candidates did not give up the fight. Mr. Schaefer has himself been a candidate and several delegations have called on the governor in his behalf. Fritz has held county offices in St. Cloud and is said to have a general experience to fit him for the position.

WORK OF YEAR REVIEWED BY THE PRESIDENT

BUT LITTLE ABOUT TARIFF

WORK ON PANAMA CANAL

Need of Legislation Anticipating Completion of the Ditch Is Pointed Out—Change In Postal Rates—Parcels Post and Postal Savings—Economy Urged.

Washington, Dec. 6.—President Taft's annual message to congress contained [illegible] words, and is said to be the longest document of its kind ever written. In it he reviews the work of each of the administrative departments beginning with the state department. He devotes considerable space to the satisfactory settlement of the fisheries dispute with England through the medium of the Hague Tribunal and recounts both the history of the fisheries dispute and the establishment of the tribunal.

In connection with the state department he tells of the important political happenings of the past twelve months throughout the entire world, and the action of this country in connection with them.

Tariff Negotiations.

Referring to the negotiation of new tariff agreements President Taft says:

"The new tariff law, in Section 2, respecting the maximum and minimum tariffs of the United States, which provisions came into effect on April 1, 1910, imposed upon us responsibility of determining prior to that date whether any undue discrimination existed against the United States and its products in any country of the world with which we sustained commercial relations.

"In the case of several countries instances of apparent undue discrimination against American commerce were found to exist. These discriminations were removed by negotiation. Prior to April 1, 1910, when the maximum tariff was to come into operation with respect to importations from all those countries in whose favor no proclamation applying the minimum tariff should be issued by the president, one hundred and thirty-four such proclamations were issued.

"This series of proclamations embraced the entire commercial world and hence the minimum tariff of the United States has been given universal application, thus testifying to the satisfactory character of our trade relations with foreign countries.

"Marked advantages to the commerce of the United States were obtained through these tariff settlements.

"The policy of broader and closer trade relations with the Dominion of Canada which was initiated in the adjustment of the maximum and minimum provisions of the tariff act of August, 1909, has proved mutually beneficial. It justifies further efforts for the readjustment of the commercial relations of the two countries so that their commerce may follow the channels natural to contiguous countries and be commensurate with the steady expansion of trade and industry on both sides of the boundary line."

Ship Subsidy.

The president urges such action as he believes will increase American trade abroad, and says:

"Another instrumentality indispensable to the unhampered and natural development of American commerce is merchant marine. All maritime and commercial nations recognize the importance of this factor. The greatest commercial nations, our competitors, jealously foster their merchant marine. Perhaps nowhere is the need for rapid and direct mail, passenger and freight communication quite so urgent as between the United States and Latin America. We can secure in no other quarter of the world such immediate benefits in friendship and commerce as would flow from the establishment of direct lines of communication with the countries of Latin America adequate to meet the requirements of a rapidly increasing appreciation of the reciprocal dependence of the countries of the western hemisphere upon each other's products, sympathies and assistance.

"I alluded to this most important subject in my last annual message; it has often been before you and I need not recapitulate the reasons for its recommendation. Unless prompt action be taken the completion of the Panama canal will find this the only great commercial nation unable to avail in international maritime business of this great contribution to the means of the world's commercial intercourse."

Governmental Expense.

To no one subject does he devote more space than to the expense of conducting the various government departments and the urgent need for economy, and in this connection he says:

"Every effort has been made by each department chief to reduce the estimated cost of his department for the ensuing fiscal year ending June 30, 1912. I say this in order that congress may understand that these estimates thus made present the smallest sum which will maintain the departments, bureaus and offices of the government and meet its other obligations under existing law, and that a cut of these estimates would result in embarrassing the executive branch of the government in the performance of its duties. This remark does not apply to the river and harbor estimates, except to those for expenses of maintenance and the meeting of obligations under authorized contracts, nor does it apply to the public building bill nor to the navy building program. Of course, as to these congress could withhold any part or all of the estimates for them without interfering with the discharge of the ordinary obligations of these functions of its departments, bureaus and offices.

"The final estimates for the year ending June 30, 1912, as they have been sent to the treasury on November 29 of this year, for the ordinary expenses of the government, including those for public buildings, rivers and harbors, and the navy building program, amount to $630,494,013.12. This is $52,964,887.36 less than the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911. It is $16,883,153.44 less than the total estimates, including supplemental estimates submitted to congress by the treasury for the year 1911, and is $5,574,659.39 less than the original estimates submitted by the treasury for 1911.

"These figures do not include the appropriations for the Panama canal, the policy in respect to which ought to be, and is, to spend as much each year as can be economically and effectively expended in order to complete the canal as promptly as possible, and therefore, the ordinary motive for cutting down the expense of the government does not apply to appropriations for this purpose.

"Against the estimates of expenditures, $640,494,013.12, we have estimated receipts for next year $680,000,000, making a probable surplus of ordinary receipts over ordinary expenditures of about $50,000,000, or taking into account the estimates for the Panama canal, which are $56,920,847.69, and which will ultimately be paid in bonds, it will leave a deficit for the next year of about $7,000,000, if congress shall conclude to fortify the canal."

The Tariff.

The President devotes but little space to the subject of the tariff law, and of it he says:

"The schedules of the rates of duty in the Payne tariff act have been subjected to a great deal of criticism, some of it just, more of it unfounded, and to much misrepresentation. The act was adopted in pursuance of a declaration by the party which is responsible for it that customs bill should be a tariff for the protection of home industries, the measure of the protection to be the difference between the cost of producing the imported article abroad and the cost of producing it at home, together with such addition to that difference as might give a reasonable profit to the home producer. The basis for the criticism of this tariff is that in respect to a number of the schedules the declared measure was not followed, but a higher difference retained or inserted by way of undue discrimination in favor of certain industries and manufactures. Little, if any, of the criticism of the tariff has been directed against the protective principle above stated; but the main body of the criticism has been based on the attempt to conform to the measure of protection was not honestly and sincerely adhered to."

The Tariff Board.

The president refers to the appointment of a board of experts to investigate the cost of production of various articles included in the schedules of the tariff, and says:

"The tariff board thus appointed and authorized has been diligent in preparing itself for the necessary investigations. The hope of those who have advocated the use of this board for tariff purposes is that the question of the rate of a duty imposed shall become more of a business question and less of a political question, to be ascertained by experts of long training and accurate knowledge. The halt in business and the shock to business, due to the announcement that a new tariff bill is to be prepared and put in operation will be avoided by treating the schedules one by one as occasion shall arise for a change in the rates of each, and only after a report upon the schedule by the tariff board competent to make such report. It is not likely that the board will be able to make a report during the present session of congress on any of the schedules, because a proper examination involves an enormous amount of detail and a great deal of care; but I hope to be able at the opening of the new congress, or at least during the session of that congress, to bring to its attention the facts in regard to those schedules in the present tariff that may prove to need amendment."

Our Island Possessions.

"During the last summer, at my request, the secretary of war visited the Philippine islands and has described his trip in the report. He found the islands in a state of tranquility and growing prosperity, due largely to the change in the tariff laws, which has opened the markets of America to the products of the Philippines, and has opened the Philippine markets to American manufactures.

"The year has been one of prosperity and progress in Porto Rico.

Panama Canal.

"At the instance of Colonel Goethals, the army engineer officer in charge of the work on the Panama canal, I have just made a visit to the isthmus to inspect the work done and to consult with him on the ground as to certain problems which are likely to arise in the near future. The progress of the work is most satisfactory. If no unexpected obstacle presents itself, the canal will be completed well within the time fixed by Colonel Goethals, to-wit, January 1, 1915, and within the estimate of cost, $375,000,000.

"Among questions arising for present solution is the decision whether the canal shall be fortified. I have already stated to the congress that I strongly favor fortification and I now reiterate this opinion and ask your consideration of the subject in the light of the report already before you made by a competent board.

"Another question which arises for consideration and possible legislation is the question of tolls in the canal. This question is necessarily affected by the probable tonnage which will go through the canal.

"In determining what the tolls should be we certainly ought not to insist that for a good many years to come they should amount to enough to pay the interest on the investment of $400,000,000 which the United States has made in the construction of the canal. We ought not to do this, first, because the benefits to be derived by the United States from this expenditure is not to be measured solely by a return upon the investment. If it were then the construction might well have been left to private enterprise.

"My own impression is that the tolls ought not to exceed $1 per net ton, and I should recommend that within certain limits the president be authorized to fix the tolls of the canal and adjust them to what seems to be commercial necessity.

"I cannot close this reference to the canal without suggesting as a wise amendment to the interstate commerce law a provision prohibiting interstate commerce railroads from owning or controlling ships engaged in the trade through the Panama canal. I believe such a provision may be needed to save to the people of the United States the benefits of the competition in trade between the eastern and western seaboards which this canal was constructed to secure."

Department of Justice.

Discussing the affairs of the department of justice, the president says:

"I invite especial attention to the prosecutions under the federal law of the so-called 'bucket shops,' and of those schemes to defraud in which the use of the mail is an essential part of the fraudulent conspiracy, prosecutions which have saved ignorant and weak members of the public and are saving them hundreds of millions of dollars. The violations of the anti-trust law present perhaps the most important litigation before the department, and the number of cases filed shows the activity of the government in enforcing that statute.

"In a special message last year I brought to the attention of congress the propriety and wisdom of enacting a general law providing for the incorporation of industrial and other companies engaged in interstate commerce, and I renew my recommendation in that behalf."

The crying need in the United States of cheapening the cost of litigation by simplifying judicial procedure and expediting final judgment is pointed out and action looking to correction of these evils is urged.

Postal Savings Banks.

"At its last session congress made provision for the establishment of savings banks by the postoffice department of this government by which under general control of trustees, consisting of the postmaster general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney general, the system could be begun in a few cities and towns, and enlarged to cover within its operations as many cities and towns and as large a part of the country as seemed wise. The initiation and establishment of such a system has required a great deal of study on the part of the experts in the postoffice and treasury departments, but a system has now been devised which is believed to be more economical and simpler in its operation than any similar system abroad. Arrangements have been perfected so that savings banks will be opened in some cities and towns on the 1st of January, and there will be a gradual extension of the benefits of the plan to the rest of the country."

"It is gratifying," says the president, "that the reduction in the postal deficit has been accomplished without any curtailment of postal facilities. On the contrary, the service has been greatly extended during the year in all its branches."

Second-Class Mail.

"In my last annual message I invited the attention of congress to the inadequacy of the postal rate imposed upon second-class mail matter in so far as that includes magazines, and showed by figures prepared by experts of the postoffice department that the government was rendering a service to the magazines, costing many millions in excess of the compensation paid. An answer was attempted to this by the representatives of the magazines, and a reply was filed to this answer by the postoffice department. The utter inadequacy of the answer, considered in the light of the reply of the postoffice department, I think must must appeal to any fair-minded person. Whether the answer was all that could be said in behalf of the magazines is another question. I agree that the question is one of fact; but I insist that if the fact is as the experts of the postoffice department show, that we are furnishing to the owners of magazines a service worth millions more than they pay for it, then justice requires that the rate should be increased. The increase in the receipts of the department resulting from this change may be devoted to increasing the usefulness of the department in establishing a parcels post and in reducing the cost of first-class postage to one cent. It has been said by the postmaster general that a fair adjustment might be made under which the advertising part of the magazine should be charged for at a different and higher rate from that of the reading matter. This would relieve many useful magazines that are not circulated at a profit, and would not shut them out from the use of the mails by a prohibitory rate.

"With respect to the parcels post, I respectfully recommend its adoption on all rural delivery routes, and that 11 pounds—the international limit—be made the limit of carriage in such post."

Abolish Navy Yards.

The president calls attention to certain reforms urged by the secretary of the navy which he recommends for adoption, and continues:

"The estimates of the navy department are $5,000,000 less than the appropriations for the same purpose last year, and included in this is the building program of the same amount as that submitted for your consideration last year. It is merely carrying out the plan of building two battleships a year, with a few needed auxiliary vessels. I earnestly hope that this program will be adopted.

"The secretary of the navy has given personal examination to every navy yard, and has studied the uses of the navy yards with reference to the necessities of our fleet. With a fleet considerably less than half the size of that of the British navy, we have shipyards more than double the number, and there are several of these shipyards expensively equipped with modern machinery, which, after investigation the secretary of the navy believes to be entirely useless for naval purposes. He asks authority to abandon certain of them and to move their machinery to other places, where it can be made of use."

"The complete success of our country in arctic exploration should not remain unnoticed. The unparalleled achievement of Peary in reaching the north pole, April 6, 1909, approved by critical examination of the most expert scientists, has added to the distinction of our navy, to which he belongs, and reflects credit upon his country. I recommend fitting recognition by congress of the great achievement of Robert Edwin Peary."

Conservation.

"The subject of the conservation of the public domain has commanded the attention of the people within the last two or three years.

"There is no need for radical reform in the methods of disposing of what are really agricultural lands. The present laws have worked well. The enlarged homestead law has encouraged the successful farming of lands in the semi-arid regions.

"Nothing can be more important in the matter of conservation than the treatment of our forest lands. It was probably the ruthless destruction of forests in the older states that first called attention to the necessity for a halt in the waste of our resources.

"In the present forest reserves there are lands which are not properly forest, and which ought to be subject to homestead entry. This has caused some local irritation. We are carefully eliminating such lands from forest reserves or where their elimination is not practical listing them for entry under the forest homestead act.

"Congress ought to trust the executive to use the power of reservation only with respect to land most valuable for forest purposes. During the present administration, 62,250,000 acres of land largely non-timbered, have been excluded from forest reserves, and 3,500,000 acres of land principally valued for forest purposes have been included in forest reserves, making a reduction in forest reserves of non-timbered land amounting to 2,760,000 acres."

Coal Lands.

"The next subject, and one most important for your consideration, is the disposition of the coal lands in the United States and Alaska. At the beginning of this administration there were withdrawn from entry for purposes of classification 17,867,000 acres. Since that time there have been withdrawn by my order from entry for classification 78,977,746 acres, making a total withdrawal of 96,844,745 acres. Meantime of the acres thus withdrawn 1,061,889 have been classified and found not to contain coal and have been restored to agricultural entry, and 4,726,091 acres have been classified as coal lands; while 7,993,239 acres remain withdrawn from entry and await classification. In addition 337,000 acres have been classified as coal lands without prior withdrawal, thus increasing the classified coal lands to 10,429,372 acres.

"Under the laws providing for the disposal of coal lands in the United States, the minimum price at which lands are permitted to be sold is $10 an acre; but the secretary of the interior has the power to fix a maximum price and to sell at that price.

"As one-third of all the coal supply is held by the government, it seems wise that it should retain such control over the mining and the sale as the relation of lessor to lessee furnishes.

"The secretary of the interior thinks there are difficulties in the way of leasing public coal lands, which objections he has set forth in his report, the force of which I freely concede. I entirely approve his stating at length in his report of the objections in order that the whole subject may be presented to congress, but after a full consideration, for the reasons I have given above, I favor a leasing system and recommend it."

Water Power Sites.

"Prior to March 4, 1909, there had been, on the recommendation of the reclamation service, withdrawn from agricultural entry, because they were regarded as useful for power sites which ought not to be disposed of as agricultural lands, tracts amounting to about 4,000,000 acres. The withdrawals were hastily made and included a great deal of land that was not useful for power sites. They were intended to include the power sites on 29 rivers in 9 states. Since that time 3,475,442 acres have been restored for settlement of the original 4,000,000 because they do not contain power sites; and meantime, new withdrawals have been made which, with other restorations based upon field examination, result in withdrawals at present effective of 1,218,356 acres on vacant public land and 202,197 acres on entered public land, or a total of 1,420,553 acres. These withdrawals made from time to time cover all the power sites included in the first withdrawals and many more, on 151 rivers and in 12 states. The disposition of these power sites involves one of the most difficult questions presented in carrying out practical conservation.

"The subject is one that calls for new legislation. It has been thought that there was danger of combination to obtain possession of all the power sites and to unite them under one control. Whatever the evidence of this, or lack of it, at present we have had enough experience to know that combination would be profitable, and the control of a great number of power at will within certain sections.

"However this may be, it is the plain duty of the government to see to it that in the utilization and development of all this immense amount of water power, conditions shall be imposed that will prevent extortionate charges, which are the usual accompaniment of monopoly.

"The question of conservation is not a partisan one, and I sincerely hope that even in the short time of the present session consideration may be given to those questions which have now been much discussed, and that action may be taken upon them."

Alaska.

"With reference to the government of Alaska, I have nothing to add to the recommendations I made in my last message on the subject. I am convinced that the migratory character of the population, its unequal distribution, and its smallness of number, which the new census shows to be about 50,000, in relation to the enormous expanse of the territory, make it altogether impracticable to give to those people who are in Alaska today and may not be there a year hence, the power to elect a legislature to govern an immense territory to which they have relation so little permanent."

Pensions.

"The uniform policy of the government in the matter of granting pensions to those gallant and devoted men who fought to save the life of the nation in the perilous days of the great civil war, has always been of the most liberal character. Those men are now rapidly passing away. The best obtainable official statistics show that they are dying at the rate of something over three thousand a month, and, in view of their advancing years, this rate must inevitably in proportion, rapidly increase. To the man who risked everything on the field of battle to save the nation in the hour of its direst need we owe a debt which has not been and should not be computed in a begrudging or parsimonious spirit."

Bureau of Corporations.

Referring to the report of the commissioner of corporations, the president says:

"The commissioner finds a condition in the ownership of the standing timber of the United States other than the government timber that calls for serious attention. The direct investigation made by the commissioner covered an area which contains 80 per cent. of the privately-owned timber of the country.

"His report shows that one half of the timber in this area is owned by 200 individuals and corporations; that 14 per cent. is owned by these corporations, and that there is very extensive interownership of stock, as well as other circumstances, all pointing to friendly relations among those who own a majority of this timber, a relationship which might lead to a combination for the maintenance of a price that would be very detrimental to the public interest, and would create the necessity of removing all tariff obstacles to the free importations of lumber from other countries."

Bureau of Labor.

"The commissioner of labor has been actively engaged in composing the differences between employers and employees engaged in interstate transportation, under the Erdman act, jointly with the chairman of the interstate commerce commission.

"I cannot speak in too high terms of the success of the two officers in conciliation and settlement of controversies which, but for their interposition, would have resulted disastrously to all interests.

Civil Service Commission.

"The civil service commission has continued its useful duties during the year. The necessity for the maintenance of the provisions of the civil service law was never greater than today. Officers responsible for the policy of the administration, and their immediate personal assistants or deputies, should not be included within the classified service, but in my judgment, public opinion has advanced to the point where it would support a bill providing a secure tenure during efficiency for all purely administrative officials. I entertain the profound conviction that it would greatly aid the cause of efficient and economical government and of better politics if congress could enact a bill providing that the executive shall have the power to include in the classified service all local offices under the treasury department, the department of justice, the postoffice department, the interior department and the department of commerce and labor, appointments to which now require the confirmation of the senate, and that upon such classification the advice and consent of the senate shall cease to be required in such appointments. By their certainty of tenure, dependent on good service, and by their freedom from the necessity for political activity, these local officers would be induced to become more efficient public servants.

Economy and Efficiency.

"The increase in the activities and in the annual expenditures of the federal government has been so rapid and so great that the time has come to check the expansion of government activities in new directions until we have tested the economy and efficiency with which the government of today is being carried on. The responsibility rests upon the head of the administration. He is held accountable by the public, and properly so. Despite the unselfish and patriotic efforts of the heads of departments and others charged with responsibility of government, there has grown up in this country a conviction that the expenses of government are too great. The fundamental reason for the existence of undetected of waste, duplication, and bad management is the lack of prompt, accurate information.

"I have requested the head of each department to appoint committees on economy and efficiency in order to secure full co-operation in the movement by the employees of the government themselves.

"I urge the continuance of the appropriation of $100,000 requested for the fiscal year 1912.

"My experience leads me to believe that while government methods are much criticized, the bad results—if we do have bad results—are not due to a lack of zeal or willingness on the part of the civil servants."

Interstate Commerce.

"There has not been time to test the benefit and utility of the amendments to the interstate commerce law contained in the act approved June 18, 1910. The law as enacted did not contain all the features which I recommended. It did not specifically denounce as unlawful the purchase by one of two parallel and competing roads of the stock of the other. Nor did it subject to the restraining influence of the Interstate Commerce commission the power of corporations engaged in operating interstate railroads to issue new stock and bonds; nor did it authorize the making of temporary agreements between railroads limited to 30 days, fixing the same rates for traffic between the same places.

"I do not press the consideration of any of these objects upon congress at this session.

"The interstate commerce commission has recommended appropriations for the purpose of enabling it to enter upon a valuation of all railroads. This has always been within the jurisdiction of the commission, but the requisite funds have been wanting. Statistics to the value of each railroad would be valuable for many purposes, especially if we ultimately enact any limitations upon the power of the interstate railroads to issue stocks and bonds, as I hope we may.

"For the protection of our own people and the preservation of our credit in foreign trade, I urge upon congress the immediate enactment of a law under which one who, in good faith, advances money or credit upon a bill of lading issued by a common carrier upon an interstate or foreign shipment can hold the carrier liable for the value of the goods described in the bill at the valuation specified in the bill, at least to the extent of the advances made in reliance upon it.

"I further recommend that a punishment of fine and imprisonment be imposed upon railroad agents and shippers for fraud or misrepresentation in connection with the issue of bills of lading issued upon interstate and foreign shipments.

"Except as above, I do not recommend any amendment to the interstate commerce law as it stands. I do not now recommend any amendment to the anti-trust law. In other words, it seems to me that the existing legislation with reference to the regulation of corporations and the restraint of their business has reached a point where we can stop for a while and witness the effect of the vigorous execution of the laws of the statute books in restraining the abuses which certainly did exist and which roused the public to demand reform."

SYSTEM FULL OF URIC ACID---THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY CURED

Two years ago I was very sick and after being treated by several of the best physicians in Clinton, I did not seem to get any better. I was confined to my bed. Seeing your Swamp-Root advertised, I resolved to give it a trial. After using it for three weeks, I found I was gaining nicely, so I continued until I have taken a number of bottles. I am now restored to health and have continued my labors. My system was full of Uric acid, but Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root cured me entirely. I am sixty years old.

"An editor about to marry was asked by a friend:

"'What prompted you, old man, to propose to Miss Dash?'

"The editor, who was, like all editors, extremely observant and extremely frank, answered:

"'Well, to tell you the truth, I think Miss Dash prompted me more than anybody else.'"

Benny on Benevolence.

Benevolence is a great thing. When you have benevolence you cannot rest until you do something to make other people feel grateful to you. The other day my mamma went up into the attic to find a lot of old clothes to give to poor people who could not afford to buy any clothing for themselves. While she was hunting around she found a gold-headed cane worth $25 that grandpa had put up there 18 years ago, and forgot all about. Thus we see, dear friends, benevolence brings its own reward.—Benny.

The Way to Find Him.

"My wife and I are going to spend a few months with her people at Strong's Corners," said the meek little man, "and I want you to mail your paper to me—"

"Yes," said the clerk, "what's your name?"

"Well—er—to make sure, I guess you'd better address it: 'Mary Strong's Husband, Strong's Corners.'"

Good Humor and Cheerfulness From Right Food and Drink.

Anything that interferes with good health is apt to keep cheerfulness and good humor in the background. A Washington lady found that letting coffee alone made things bright for her. She writes:

"Four years ago I was practically given up by my doctor and was not expected to live long. My nervous system was in a bad condition.

"But I was young and did not want to die so I began to look about for the cause of my chronic trouble. I used to have nervous spells which would exhaust me and after each spell it would take me days before I could sit up in a chair.

"I became convinced my trouble was caused by coffee. I decided to stop it and bought some Postum.

"The first cup, which I made according to directions, had a soothing effect on my nerves and I liked the taste. For a time I nearly lived on Postum and ate little food besides. I am today a healthy woman.

"My family and relatives wonder if I am the same person I was four years ago, when I could do no work on account of nervousness. Now I am doing my own housework, take care of two babies—one twenty the other two months old, I am so busy that I hardly get time to write a letter, yet I do it all with the cheerfulness and good humor that comes from enjoying good health.

"I tell my friends it is to Postum I owe my life today."

It will be too late to do your Christmas shopping early if you don't watch out

"Pussyfoot" Johnson is taking in much territory and there is a prospect that he will close up most of North Dakota by putting the lid on the fifty or more saloons at East Grand Forks.

"The Northern Minnesota Development congress declared for reapportionment for the northern part of the state. The southern part of the state will go that one better and stand for reapportionment for the entire state," says the Albert Lea Tribune, and that is all right, too. It is expected that the legislators from the south will consent to take in more territory.

The two papers at Warroad have consolidated and one will be issued in the future. The wonder is that this has not happened before. It is impossible for two papers of any value to the town or the publishers to do business in a town the size of Warroad. The people of the town will now have a better paper, the business people will get advertising that will be worth something at less expense than to advertise in two papers of limited circulation and there is a chance for the publisher to profit something for his labors and investment.

TONNAGE TAX AND REAPPORTIONMENT.

Northern Minnesota has mapped out a program for the legislature at the coming session that is snappy and to the point. There is no ambiguity about it. Each demand stands out in bold relief and besides the governor threatens with a big stick, in the shape of a threat with an extra session, unless at least one of the demands—reapportionment—is granted.

But our friends in the north and the governor are not alone in that charitable fighting mood; the jobbers and wholesale merchants of the Twin Cities also seem to be disposed to do a little missionary work in behalf of a future large commercial field, which they expect to monopolize and for which they now prepare the ground.

The trouble with these calculations is that they sometimes miscarry. The program, outlined by the North Minnesota legislature at Brainerd, is too one sided to be acceptable to the people of the state at large. Reapportionment and good roads should be granted, provided the matter of taxation, especially an iron ore tonnage tax, is also conceded. The clearing of cut-over pine lands should be stricken off the program altogether. Nobody wants it but the land speculators and the politicians. Concerning the proposed iron ore tonnage tax the people outside of the iron ore range will never be content until that matter is settled and settled right.

At the last session an iron ore tonnage tax was passed by both houses, in accordance with the promises of both parties, providing for a tax of two to five cents a ton, according to grade. It was an insignificant amount in comparison with the 75 cents to $1.00 a ton royalty paid to Mr. Hill for the ore taken from his private holdings. Unfortunately this bill was vetoed. But that is no reason why such a bill, or a modified one to suit both local and state conditions, should not be passed again at the coming session. And it is here where the trouble comes in. The Steel Trust is opposed to such a tax and it practically controls the situation in northern Minnesota. There are a number of prosperous towns in the iron ore country completely dominated by that corporation. Its people will hardly admit it, nevertheless they are in no position to do anything but what is agreeable to that interest. And this explains in a measure the attitude of the Brainerd meeting. It is true the northern part of the state is entitled to a larger representation; but that is not the real object of the principals behind the move. What the latter are after more than anything else is to get more votes in order to prevent the passage of another iron ore tonnage tax. If it were otherwise it would be easy enough to pass both measures.

As to the attitude of the Twin Cities in this matter it is likely to come to pass that other business centers may take a hand in the game. With the cities it is always a matter of business expansion. They think they have the trade in southern Minnesota nailed to their mast and now they reach out for the prospective new trade in the North. They lose sight of the fact that the commercial interests in Southern Minnesota are in position to effectually resent undue discrimination and that the new trade in the North must be divided with the future business queen at the head of the lakes—Duluth.

It is easy enough to present ultimatums, but suppose the other side should come with a counter proposition and demand the passage of an iron ore tonnage tax law first as a condition to pass a reapportionment bill afterward? And in all probability that is just what is going to happen. And then the fun will begin and each side will show its true colors.—St. Peter Free Press.

The above article is interesting as indicating the excuses that will be offered in the effort to be made by certain senators who don't want to vote themselves out of office by providing for a just reapportionment of the state. The Free Press says that a tonnage tax bill should be passed at this winter's session of the legislature. Admitting that, what has reapportionment to do with that program? It is true that the mining district will have increased representation if there is proper reapportionment because they have the population entitling them to more representation. But even that has no bearing on the agitation for the passage of a tonnage tax bill at the coming session of the legislature. No territory will have increased representation until after the election 1910, so it cannot be said that reapportionment stands in the way of the tonnage tax program for this winter. The Gazette wonders if the Free Press and southern Minnesota senators would insist on a fifty per cent disfranchisement of the whole of northern Minnesota indefinitely if it is not possible to pass a tonnage tax bill this winter.

Reapportionment and anti-tonnage tax sentiment are not so closely related as those who are opposed to reapportion and looking for an excuse for opposition would have you believe. The tonnage tax bill passed by the last legislature was prepared by a man from the Ninth congressional district and northern Minnesota members, outside of those from the range districts, were about as evenly divided on the proposition as were members from other parts of the state.

The tonnage tax bill and all other important proposed legislation should have fair consideration, but that is no reason for standing in the way of giving to northern Minnesota, the range country included, the representation to which it is entitled in the legislative branch of the state government.

THE AWAKENING OF MINNESOTA.

The census informs us that Minnesota is a laggard among the states. Were the state without resources, that would be one thing; but when we compute the resources of this state and make note of the tremendous possibilities, we must wonder at our own lethargy.

There are several sides to the question, and to develop it from the respective sides, the state should undertake the following work at the approaching session of the legislature:

First, there should be a large appropriation for the Agricultural School and with that money the work should be carried out into the counties in a way that will, within the next two years, arouse the farmers to an effort all along the line.

Second, an appropriation of $25,000 should be made to establish and operate a state bureau to collect data of the lands, their products, prices and collateral information for each county. This bureau should be arranged after the plan of the Kansas bureau. We have lands to sell, but we know nothing of the facts as to their character. The inquirer can get no specific information at the State Capitol on these points. This bureau should carry a full statistical record of state lands as well.

Third, a moderate appropriation should be made for advertising the state. This department should be carefully organized, in order that money may be expended in a way that will count, and for the first two years the appropriation should be experimental.

Here are three principal heads that we believe are of the greatest importance. It is absurd that, outside of the cities, the state has shown a bare hundred thousand gain in ten years!

If the people agree to these general conditions, there is still work to do. The legislature must be impressed with the situation. The members must be made to appreciate that the people are interested. It is a rule of business that money must be expended if profit is to follow. The principle applies to state growth as well as to business. We have permitted ourselves to go to seed in this particular.

The Journal will have much to say on this subject of state development and it invites a hearing. Its suggestions will not be made in the spirit of having uttered the last word on the subject, but simply as expressing its individual idea of the best general course to follow.

Minnesota is essentially an agricultural state. But we are doing almost nothing for our agricultural development, as compared with what we should do, and can well afford to do.

Let us bring 400,000 people to Minnesota farm districts in the next ten years. If we do this, there must be thorough organization and everybody must lift. We have no doubt that the railroads will help Minnesota when they see that Minnesota is aroused to action. The railroads are the greatest "settlers" we have, and the work they have done in this regard has never been appreciated or understood. We are all getting the benefits of that work.

SAME OLD STORY

Another Minnesota newspaper has gone to the wall and suspended publication owing to the lack of patronage. The Anoka Free Press is the latest addition to the number that has passed beyond. Publishers are finding out more and more that it is a mighty poor business policy to continue a publication which is constantly losing money. They get no credit for the sacrifice and have nothing to show for their hard labors. The newspaper business is gradually envolving itself into the survival of the fittest. One good paper in a town the size of Anoka is better for the town and for all concerned. There is no use trying to defy Providence for the bill collecter and the sooner any town can give its individual support to one newspaper, the more profitable the business becomes for the newspaper and the town as well. More than 300 papers have gone out of commission in Minnesota alone during the past three years and about that many more could disappear without interfering with the proper distribution of the news to any extent.—Lake City Graphic Sentinel

In many of the early expeditions of the United States government Pierre was employed as a guide and scout, and was one of the principle members of the noted Sibley expedition, which crossed the plains in the early days. He was well acquainted with almost every foot of the Dakotas Minesota and Wisconsin, and at one time was the owner of vast tracts of valuable land, which he subsequently lost in one way or another. Mr. Bottineau was a warm friend of James J Hill, the railway magnate, having met him at St. Paul when that place was little more than a trading point and where Mr. Hill was employed as a freighter.

In 1851 Mr. Bottineau took up a claim on the spot where St. Paul now stands, but after having held it for a short time traded it for a horse and cow, which he drove away to his home in the wilderness, little thinking that the land he had almost given away would in a few years be the site of a great city. Later on Mr. Bottineau purchased for a small sum a large portion of what is now Minneapolis but lost the greater portion of it through the dishonesty of purchasers and the rest through his weakness for poker, a game which he thought he understood, but which others understood better than he did.

There is a story, which the elder residents of Minneapolis declare to be true, that Bottineau was once the sole owner of Nicollet island, lying in the Mississippi river, which divides Minneapolis into east and west Minneapolis, and which is now one of the most important business and residence districts in the city and valued at many millions of dollars, and that he lost it during a game of poker. A party of men met one evening at the home of one of them, so the story goes, to play their accustomed game. The stakes kept growing larger and larger until every jack pot contained a small fortune, even for that early day.

Ever since the game had begun Mr. Bottineau had been losing steadily, but at last he was dealt a hand upon which he hoped to regain all his losses and win something besides. He was given four Queens pat, and drawing one card, secured an ace, leaving only four Kings with which his hand could be beaten.

As he saw—or thought he did, which amounted to the same thing—one of the players discard a king, he considered his hand invincible and played it accordingly. His opponent also considered his hand a good one and promptly raised every bet made by Bottineau.

Soon all the players but Bottineau and his opponent dropped their hands and retired from the game, after which they sat and watched the conflict. The table was heaped with money and the personal belongings of the two men who were wishing they had more to wager upon their respective hands. At last all the men possessed lay on the table in front of them, and it was Bottineau's bet. Carefully looking over his cards, he thought a moment and then remarked that all he had left was Nicollet island, which was once the home of Father Hennepin, one of the earliest settlers of Minnesota, his log cabin having stood upon a little mound in the center of the island up to a few years ago, when it was pulled down to make room for the residence of Colonel King.

This island Bottineau was willing to bet against $200. The bet was called by the man on the opposite side of the table and Bottineau laid down his four queens with a smile of triumph on his face. With a shout his opponent laid on the table face up four kings and a tray. There was a dead silence for a moment. Then Bottineau called for writing materials, made out a deed to the island and left the place. Since that day he never touched a card or countenanced gambling in any form.

After drifting around the country for a time Bottineau came to Red Lake Falls, where he took up a claim and where he remained up to the time of his death, at the age of 84 years. He gradually acquired other property and left his heirs a valuable estate. With the death of Pierre Bottineau passes away the last of the old time Canadian voyagers and guides, such an important factor in the upbuilding of the northwest. He was father of 27 children, only a few survive him. The one best known is J. B. Bottineau, who spends much of his time in Washington as the attorney for the Turtle River Indians.—Chicago Times Herald.

Bull In the Dining room.

A bull belonging to ex-County commissioner Anderson of LaGrand, was being brought to town Saturday morning, blindfolded. Something frightened the animal when near the residence of George F. Whitcomb and he made a dash for liberty. Being blindfolded he could not select a clear track and ran directly toward the Whitcomb house. He struck a large window and landed in the sitting room, where Mrs. Whitcomb was sewing. The lady was considerably surprised at her unexpected caller, but escaped injury. The men who had the bull in charge secured the rope which was attached to a ring in his nose, and made it fast to a tree in the yard, thus preventing the animal from going any further. After making several lunges he escaped from the house by the window through which he had entered. Then followed a wild chase over lawns and hedges in the vicinity and in the melee his bullship collided with the stone foundation of the Congregational church. He finally succeeded in getting the bandage from his eyes and took a run down Main St. It was impossible to capture him alive, and the beast which had made such a flight for his liberty, was finally killed in the woods south of town, with a rifle.—Alexandria Citizen.

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S.S.S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

MRS. LUCY GOODING
Pollock, La.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

PROCLAMATION

Whereas, pursuant to Chapter Seven (7) Revised Laws of Minnesota, 1905, a petition was filed with the Secretary of State on the 12th day of May, 1909, praying for the creation of a new county out of the territory now lying in Red Lake County, Minnesota, the same to be known as Pennington County, and described as follows, to-wit:

They are not only more healthful and more palatable than other oranges, but they are actually cheaper, for they are nearly all meat and nourishment. Your dealer sells "Sunkist" Oranges. Ask for them. You will know them by the tissue paper wrapper in which each "Sunkist" Orange is packed. On the wrapper note the label, "Sunkist." Keep all the wrappers. They are worth money to you

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Shorthand Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All Fargo banks and 685 others employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers, stenographers or cashiers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement.

Our $50.00 Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk or bookkeeper. The new $85.00 course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court, Third Judicial District and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

The D. B. C. has built a magnificent new building (30,000 square feet) is seated with roll-top desks, has 60 typewriters, adding machines, billers, money changers, etc. Pupils deal with each other and with magnificently equipped offices, using aluminum money. The work is fascinating and practical. The Northwest has "no other school like the D. B. C." For catalogue and full information about any department, address

16 YEARS OF SKIN DISEASE

"For sixteen long years I have been suffering with a bad case of skin disease. While a child there broke out a red sore on the legs just in back of my knees. It waxed from bad to worse, and at last I saw I had a bad skin disease. I tried many widely known doctors in different cities but to no satisfactory result. The plague bothered me more in warm weather than in winter and being on my leg joints it made it impossible for me to walk, and I was forced to stay indoors in the warmest weather. My hopes of recovery were by this time spent. Sleepless nights and restless days made life an unbearable burden. At last I was advised to try the Cuticura remedies [Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills] and I did not need more than a trial to convince me that I was on the road of success this time. I bought two sets of the Cuticura Remedies and after these were gone I was a different man entirely. I am now the happiest man that there is at least one true cure for skin diseases. Leonard A. Hawtof, 11 Nostrand Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y., July 30 and Aug. 8, '09."

Putting in the Time.

A gentleman was engaging a general man and telling him what he wanted him to do. "You will have to clean the windows and the boots and the knives, and go messages, chop wood, cut short grass, mind the horse and pony, look after the garden and keep the house supplied with vegetables and do any odd job that is required and if suitable you will get ten shillings a week."

"Is there any clay in the garden?" asked the man.

"What makes you ask that?" asked the gentleman.

"I was thinking I could make bricks in my spare time," said the man.

MIX THIS FOR RHEUMATISM

Easily Prepared and Inexpensive and Really Does the Work, Says Noted Authority.

Thousands of men and women who have felt the sting and torture of that dread disease, Rheumatism, which is no respecter of age, persons, sex, color or rank, will be interested to know that it is one of the easiest afflictions of the human body to conquer. Medical science has proven it not a distinct disease in itself, but a symptom caused by inactive kidneys. Rheumatism is uric acid in the blood and other waste products of the system which should be filtered and strained out in the form of urine. The function of the kidneys is to sift these poisons and acids out and keep the blood clean and pure. The kidneys however, are of sponge-like substance, the holes or pores of which will sometimes, either from overwork, cold or exposure become clogged, and failing to their function of eliminating these poisons from the blood, they remain in the veins, decompose and settling about the joints and muscles, cause the untold suffering and pain of rheumatism and backache, often producing complications of bladder and urinary disease, and general weakness.

The following simple prescription is said to relieve the worst cases of rheumatism because of its direct action upon the blood and kidneys, relieving, too, the most severe forms of bladder and urinary troubles: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. The ingredients can be had from any prescription pharmacy, and are absolutely harmless and safe to use at any time.

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to take the deposition of the chief witness for the prosecution, John Gilmore, a millionaire. In the latter's house the lawyer is attracted by the picture of a girl whom Gilmore explains is his granddaughter, Alison West. He says her father is a rascal and a friend of the forger. Standing in line to buy a Pullman ticket Blakeley is requested by a lady to buy her one. He gives her lower eleven and retains lower ten. He finds a man in a drunken stupor in lower ten and retires in lower nine.

CHAPTER III.

Across the Aisle.

No solution offering itself, I went back to my berth. The snorer across had apparently strangled, or turned over, and so after a time I dropped asleep, to be awakened by the morning sunlight across my face.

I felt for my watch, yawning prodigiously. I reached under the pillow and failed to find it, but something scratched the back of my hand. I sat up irritably and nursed the wound, which was bleeding a little. Still drowsy, I felt more cautiously for what I supposed had been my scarf pin, but there was nothing there. Wide awake now, I reached for my traveling bag, on the chance that I had put my watch in there. I had drawn the satchel to me and had my hand on the lock before I realized that it was not my own!

Mine was of alligator hide. I had killed the beast in Florida, after the expenditure of enough money to have bought a house and enough energy to have built one. The bag I held in my hand was a black one, sealskin, I think. The staggering thought of what the loss of my bag meant to me put my finger on the bell and kept it there until the porter came.

"Did you ring, sir?" he asked, poking his head through the curtains obsequiously. McKnight objects that nobody can poke his head through a curtain and be obsequious. But Pullman porters can and do.

"No," I snapped. "It rang itself. What in thunder do you mean by exchanging my valise for this one? You'll have to find it if you waken the entire car to do it. There are important papers in that grip."

"Porter," called a feminine voice from an upper berth near by. "Porter, am I to dangle here all day?"

"Let her dangle," I said savagely. "You find that bag of mine."

The porter frowned. Then he looked at me with injured dignity. "I brought in your overcoat, sir. You carried your own valise."

The fellow was right! In an excess of caution I had refused to relinquish my alligator bag, and had turned over my other traps to the porter. It was clear enough then. I was simply a victim of the usual sleeping car robbery. I was in a lather of perspiration by that time: The lady down the car was still dangling and talking about it; still nearer a feminine voice was giving quick orders in French, presumably to a maid. The porter was on his knees, looking under the berth.

"Not there, sir," he said, dusting his knees. He was visibly more cheerful, having been absolved of responsibility. "Reckon it was taken while you was wonderin' around the car last night."

"I'll give you $50 if you find it," I said. "A hundred. Reach up my shoes and I'll—"

I stopped abruptly. My eyes were fixed in stupefied amazement on a coat that hung from a hook at the foot of my berth. From the coat they traveled, dazed, to the soft-bosomed shirt beside it, and from there to the collar and cravat in the net hammock across the windows.

"A hundred!" the porter repeated, showing his teeth. But I caught him by the arm and pointed to the foot of the berth.

"What—what color's that coat?" I asked unsteadily.

"And—the trousers?"

He reached over and held up one creased leg. "Gray, too," he grinned.

"Gray!" I could not believe even his corroboration of my own eyes. "But my clothes were blue!" The porter was amused; he dived under the curtains and brought up a pair of shoes. "Your shoes, sir," he said with a flourish. "Reckon you've been dreaming, sir."

Now, there are two things I always avoid in my dress—possibly an idiosyncrasy of my bachelor existence. These tabooed articles are red neckties and tan shoes. And not only were the shoes the porter lifted from the floor of a gorgeous shade of yellow, but the scarf which was run through the turned over collar was a gaudy red. It took a full minute for the real import of things to penetrate my dazed intelligence. Then I gave a vindictive kick at the offending ensemble.

"They're not mine, any of them," I snarled. "They are some other fellow's. I'll sit here until I take root before I put them on."

"They're nice lookin' clothes," the porter put in, eying the red tie with appreciation. "Ain't everybody would have left you anything."

"Call the conductor," I said shortly. Then a possible explanation occurred to me. "Oh, porter—what's the number of this berth?"

"Seven, sir. If you cain't wear those shoes—"

"Seven!" In my relief I almost shouted it. "Why, then, it's simple enough. I'm in the wrong berth, that's all. My berth is nine. Only—where the deuce is the man who belongs here?"

"Likely in nine, sir." The darky was enjoying himself. "You and the other gentleman just got mixed in the night. That's all, sir." It was clear that he thought I had been drinking.

I drew a long breath. Of course, that was the explanation. This was number seven's berth, that was his soft hat, this his umbrella, his coat, his bag. My rage turned to irritation at myself.

The porter went to the next berth and I could hear his softly insinuating voice. "Time to get up, sir. Are you awake? Time to get up."

There was no response from number nine. I guessed that he had opened the curtains and was looking in. Then he came back.

"Number nine's empty," he said.

"Empty! Do you mean my clothes aren't there?" I demanded. "My valise? Why don't you answer me?"

"You doan' give me time," he retorted. "There ain't nothin' there. But it's been slept in."

The disappointment was the greater for my few moments of hope. I sat up in a white fury and put on the clothes that had been left me. Then, still raging, I sat on the edge of the berth and put on the obnoxious tan shoes. The porter, called to his duties, made little excursions back to me, to offer assistance and to chuckle at my discomfiture. He stood by, outwardly decorous, but with little irritating grins of amusement around his mouth, when I finally emerged with the red tie in my hand.

"Bet the owner of those clothes did not become them any more than you do," he said, as he plied the ubiquitous whisk broom.

"When I get the owner of these clothes," I retorted grimly, "he will need a shroud. Where's the conductor?"

The conductor was coming, he assured me; also that there was no bag answering the description of mine on the car. I slammed my way to the dressing room, washed, choked my fifteen and a half neck into a fifteen collar, and was back again in less than five minutes. The car, as well as its occupants, was gradually taking on a daylight appearance. I hobbled in, for one of the shoes was abominably tight, and found myself facing a young woman in blue with an unforgetable face. ("Three women already." McKnight says: "That's going some, even if you don't count the Gilmore nurse.") She stood, half-turned toward me, one hand idly drooping, the other steadying her as she gazed out at the flying landscape. I had an instant impression that I had met her somewhere, under different circumstances, more cheerful ones, I thought, for the girl's dejection now was evident. Beside her, sitting down, a small dark woman, considerably older, was talking in a rapid undertone. The girl nodded indifferently now and then. I fancied, although I was not sure, that my appearance brought a startled look into the young woman's face. I sat down, and, hands thrust deep into the other man's pockets, stared ruefully at the other man's shoes.

The stage was set. In a moment the curtain was going up on the first act of the play. And for a while we would all say our little speeches and sing our little songs, and I, the villain, would hold center stage while the gallery hissed.

The porter was standing beside lower ten. He had reached in and was knocking valiantly. But his efforts met with no response. He winked at me over his shoulder; then he unfastened the curtains and bent forward. Behind him, I saw him stiffen, heard his muttered exclamation, saw the bluish pallor that spread over his face and neck. As he retreated a step the interior of lower ten lay open to the day.

The man in it was on his back, the early morning sun striking full on his upturned face. But the light did not disturb him. A small stain of red dyed the front of his night clothes and trailed across the sheet: his half-open eyes were fixed, without seeing, on the shining wood above.

I grasped the porter's shaking shoulders and stared down to where the train imparted to the body a grisly suggestion of motion. "Good Lord," I gasped, "the man's been murdered!"

CHAPTER IV.

Numbers Seven and Nine.

Afterward, when I tried to recall our discovery of the body in lower ten, I found that my most vivid impression was not that made by the revelation of the opened curtain. I had an instantaneous picture of a slender blue-gowned girl who seemed to sense my words rather than hear them, of two small hands that clutched desperately at the seat beside them. The girl in the aisle stood, bent toward us, perplexity and alarm fighting in her face.

With twitching hands the porter attempted to draw the curtains together. Then in a paralysis of shock, he collapsed on the edge of my berth and sat there swaying. In my excitement I shook him.

"For heaven's sake, keep your nerve, man," I said brusquely. "You'll have every woman in the car in hysterics. And if you do, you'll wish you could change places with the man in there." He rolled his eyes.

A man near, who had been reading last night's paper, dropped it quickly and tiptoed toward us. He peered between the partly open curtains, closed them quietly and went back, ostentatiously solemn, to his seat. The very crackle with which he opened his paper added to the bursting curiosity of the car. For the passengers knew that something was amiss: I was conscious of a sudden tension.

With the curtains closed the porter was more himself; he wiped his lips with a handkerchief and stood erect.

"It's my last trip in this car," he remarked heavily. "There's something wrong with that berth. Last trip the woman in it took an overdose of some sleeping stuff, and we found her, jes' like that, dead! And it ain't more'n three months now since there was twins born in that very spot. No sir, it ain't natural."

At that moment a thin man with prominent eyes and a spare grayish goatee creaked up the aisle and paused beside me.

"Porter sick?" he inquired, taking in with a professional eye the porter's horror-struck face, my own excitement and the slightly gaping curtains of lower ten. He reached for the darky's pulse and pulled out an old-fashioned gold watch.

"Hm! Only fifty! What's the matter? Had a shock?" he asked shrewdly.

"Yes," I answered for the porter. "We've both had one. If you are a doctor, I wish you would look at the man in the berth across, lower ten. I'm afraid it's too late, but I'm not experienced in such matters."

Together we opened the curtains, and the doctor, bending down, gave a comprehensive glance that took in the rolling head, the relaxed jaw, the ugly stain on the sheet. The examination needed only a moment. Death was written in the clear white of the nostrils, the colorless lips, the smoothing away of the sinister lines of the night before. With its new dignity the face was not unhandsome; the gray hair was still plentiful, the features strong and well cut.

The doctor straightened himself and turned to me. "Dead for some time," he said, running a professional finger over the stains. "These are dry and darkened, you see, and rigor mortis is well established. A friend of yours?"

"I don't know him at all," I replied. "Never saw him but once before."

"Then you don't know if he is traveling alone?"

"No, he was not—that is, I don't know anything about him," I corrected myself. It was my first blunder; the doctor glanced up at me quickly and then turned his attention again to the body. Like a flash there had come to me the vision of the woman with the bronze hair and the tragic face, whom I had surprised in the vestibule between the cars, somewhere in the small hours of the morning. I had acted on my first impulse—the masculine one of shielding a woman.

The doctor had unfastened the coat of the striped pajamas and exposed the dead man's chest. On the left side was a small punctured wound of insignificant size.

"Very neatly done," the doctor said with appreciation. "Couldn't have done it better myself. Right through the intercostal space; no time even to grunt."

"Isn't the heart around there somewhere?" I asked. The medical man turned toward me and smiled austerely.

"That's where it belongs, just under that puncture, when it isn't gadding around in a man's throat or his boots."

I had a new respect for the doctor, for any one indeed who could crack even a feeble joke under such circumstances, or who could run an impersonal finger over that wound and those stains. Odd how a healthy, normal man holds the medical profession in half contemptuous regard until he gets sick, or an emergency like this arises, and then turns meekly to the man who knows the ins and outs of his mortal tenement, takes his pills or his patronage, ties to him like a rudderless ship in a gale.

"Suicide, is it, doctor?" I asked.

He stood erect, after drawing the bed-clothing over the face, and, taking off his glasses, he wiped them slowly.

"No, it is not suicide," he announced decisively. "It is murder."

Of course, I had expected that, but the word itself brought a shiver. I was just a bit dizzy. Curious faces through the car were turned toward us, and I could hear the porter behind me breathing audibly. A stout woman in negligee came down the aisle and querulously confronted the porter. She wore a pink dressing-jacket and carried portions of her clothing.

"Porter," she began, in the voice of the lady who had "dangled," "is there a rule of this company that will allow a woman to occupy the dressing-room for one hour and curl her hair with an alcohol lamp while respectable people haven't a place where they can hook their—"

She stopped suddenly and stared into lower ten. Her shining pink cheeks grew pasty, her jaw fell. I remember trying to think of something to say, and of saying nothing at all. Then—she had hurled her eyes in the nondescript garments that hung from her arm and tottered back the way she had come. Slowly a little knot of men gathered around us, silent for the most part. The doctor was making a search of the berth when the conductor elbowed his way through, followed by the inquisitive man, who had evidently summoned him. I had lost sight, for a time, of the girl in blue.

"Do it himself?" the conductor queried after a business-like glance at the body.

"No, he didn't," the doctor asserted. "There's no weapon here, and the window is closed. He couldn't have thrown it out, and he didn't swallow it. What on earth are you looking for, man?"

NEAT SCHEME OF REVENGE

Will Made by Maiden Lady Will Cause Her to Be Long If Not Gratefully Remembered.

An extraordinary will has been left by an elderly unmarried lady who recently died in Vienna. Her property, amounting to about $250,000, is appointed to be divided between her three nephews, now aged 24, 27 and 29, and her three nieces, aged 19, 21 and 22, in equal parts on the following conditions:

The six nephews and nieces must all live in the house formerly inhabited by their aunt, with the executor, a lawyer, whose business it will be to see that the conditions of the will are strictly observed. None of the nephews is to marry before reaching his fortieth year, nor the nieces before their thirtieth, under the penalty that the share of the one so marrying will be divided among the others.

Further, the six legatees are admonished never to quarrel among themselves. If one should do so persistently the executor is empowered to turn him or her out of the house and divide the share as in the case of marriage.

The executor is himself forbidden to marry or to reside elsewhere than in the house with the legatees as long as he holds his office, to which a handsome remuneration is attached.

The old maid is said to have made this peculiar will because her nephews and nieces continually worried her during her life by asking her to give them money to enable them to marry—requests she always refused.

Teetotaler Had Last Word.

On the shore at one of the narrowest parts of that dangerous waterway known as "The Inside Route" to Alaska there rests the hull of a wrecked ship. It is an object that immediately attracts the eyes of all who voyage that way. A whisky manufacturer decided that there was an excellent opportunity to advertise his bottled goods. So he had painted in huge letters on the side of the wrecked ship:

USE REDNOSE WHISKY.

And it was here that a teetotaler saw his opportunity for a short but vivid sermon. A few weeks later the side of the wrecked ship blossomed forth with these two additional words in equally big letters:

I DID.

NEW ERA IN FINANCE

ACCURACY AND PUBLICITY PROVES TO BE A POPULAR MOTTO.

Prompt Response to Bold Move of President Vail—"Accuracy" Reduced Western Union's Surplus $13,000,000—"Publicity" Restored Confidence and Its Stock Went Up.

Are the great financiers of the country beginning to see a new light? Time was, until recently in fact, when the men at the head of the big corporations "kept their business to themselves," as far as the law would allow. Capable men at the head of the big concerns, long realized the weakness of their position, but what was needed obviously, as in all great reforms, was an unmistakable occasion and a courageous man. The occasion arose in the purchase of the Western Union Telegraph company by the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and the man appeared in Theodore N. Vail, President of the purchasing corporation.

It was last December when public announcement was made that the Gould holdings of Western Union had been taken over by the Telephone company.

On account of the high esteem in which the management of the telephone company is so generally held, great things were predicted as a result of the absorption of Western Union. By the press of the country the "deal" was most favorably commented on, it being widely pointed out that under the direction of such men as Theodore N. Vail and his associates, the telegraph company was bound soon to work itself into a position where it could offer the public far more efficient service than it had ever before been able to offer.

But a very few months had elapsed when it became apparent to the new management that a modern and up-to-date appraisal of the company's assets would make possible a far greater degree of efficiency of operation. "Here," they said to themselves, "we've bought control of this property and we know it's immensely valuable, but we don't know just how valuable. These appraisals of real estate and securities owned were made a long time ago. If we have a complete inventory made of every thing we've got we can announce the facts to the public, start a new set of books, and begin our responsibility to stockholders right there."

How Inventory Was Taken.

The most expert accountants and appraisers to be had were put at the task. Their labors lasted over eight months. Their report and its publication by the company marks an epoch in finance.

It began by recommending an adjustment of the difference between the appraised and book values by a charge of $5,595,089 against surplus. Book values of securities held were reduced to market values, had and doubtful accounts were "charged off," an allowance of $2,000,000 was made for "depreciation," another of $500,000 for "reserve," and so on, until the old surplus of $18,867,000 came down to $5,136,000.

It required courage, the publication of this statement to stockholders, saying in effect: "The property of your company has been revalued: the surplus isn't nineteen millions, as you have been led to believe, but five millions," but it was the truth, and President Vail did not flinch. "Accuracy and publicity," he declared, was essential. "The stockholder has a right to know. The shares of this company are scattered from one end of the Union to the other. This is more than a private corporation. It is a great national enterprise. The public is entitled to the facts."

The report was ordered published forthwith. Financiers of the old school and speculators generally were aghast. What would happen? Would the bottom drop out of Western Union when the shareholders realized that their property was worth $13,000,000 less than they had supposed? But the amazing thing happened. The stock went up and stayed up. The public had responded to this remarkable display of frankness and confidence: to the new motto, "Accuracy and Publicity."

The full significance of the action of the new board is stated concisely by Harper's Weekly in these words:

"Is this policy of publicity and of open-handed dealing with shareholders and public the forerunner of a similar movement on the part of other big corporations? Certainly it is to be hoped that it is. In the case of these big companies, dependent upon public patronage and doing business under public franchise, can there be any question of the right of the people to know?

"That right is being recognized. It is recognized now in this epochal act on the part of the telephone and telegraph interests. It is the dawn of a new era in corporation finance."

Timeliness.

All measures of reformation are effective in exact proportion to their timeliness; partial decay may be cut away and cleansed; incipient error corrected; but there is a point at which corruption can no more be stayed, nor wandering recalled. It has been the manner of modern philanthropy to remain passive until that precise period, and to leave the sick to perish, and the foolish to stray, while it spent itself in frantic exertions to raise the dead, and reform the dust.—Ruskin.

Rider and Ridden.

I never could believe that Providence had sent a few men into the world ready booted and spurred to ride, and millions ready saddled and bridled to be ridden.—Richard Rumbold.

Longevity in Birds.

Wild geese have been known to live to the age of 100, and the raven commonly lives 50 years. A record is said to be extant showing that a cockatoo once attained the ripe old age of 81 years.

DO IT NOW.

If you have the slightest symptom of kidney trouble, begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at once. Delay may lead to dropsy, diabetes, or fatal Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills began curing sick kidneys 75 years ago. They have been curing kidney trouble ever since.

Mrs. William McGregor, 714 Lilleth St., Pendleton, Ore., says: "All my life my kidneys had troubled me. I bloated terribly, could not control the kidney secretions and suffered intense backache. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured completely. I had previously doctored without relief."

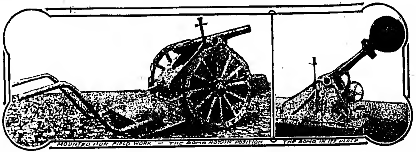
NEW AND TERRIBLE WEAPON OF WARFARE



Krupps, the famous German gun-makers, have just invented a remarkable weapon known as the bomb-gun. This fires a large, very brittle bomb containing 160 pounds of explosives. Each bomb, as it bursts, fills the air with poisonous gases, which, it is said, no human being can withstand. The effective range is not more than 400 yards.

HEALING BY MUSIC

Dyspeptic Eats to Tune of "Old Oaken Bucket."

Another Sufferer in Hospital Relieved of Pain by Strain "Last Rose of Summer" in Musical Tests on Sick.

Philadelphia.—The newest science, which is also one of the oldest, is the science of healing by music. Tests are being made in the Samaritan hospital under the supervision of the Rev. Dr. Russell Conwell, its president, famous for his eloquence on the lecture platform.

Nurses who aided in making observations unite in testifying to the beneficial effect of certain musical airs upon the temperature and pulsations of patients and the evil and depressing influence of other tunes.

They found that "I Know My Redeemer Liveth" brought patients out of trances of anaesthesia with none of the nausea and feverish symptoms that usually attend an awakening.

They found that fever was abated and restlessness reduced by "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton;" that "Dixie" calmed a patient who had delirium, and that "Juanita" and "The Last Rose of Summer" sent pain-racked invalids into soothing healing sleep.

The following is a partial list of well known hymns and musical selections reported to have been found helpful to sick and well persons alike: "The Old Oaken Bucket," "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton," "Listen to the Mocking Bird," "Dixie," "Juanita," "The Last Rose of Summer," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Folks at Home," "My Maryland," "Yankee Doodle," "America," "Auld Lang Syne," "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," "Rock of Ages," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Shall We Gather at the River," "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth."

The following were found to be injurious: "Dead March" from "Saul," "Home Sweet Home," "Do They Think of Me at Home?" "Old Cabin Home," "Old Black Joe," "Star Spangled Banner," "Abide With Me," "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone?" "Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken," "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me," and "Stand Up for Jesus."

The hymn, "The Hour of Trial," was found to be one of the most depressing in the list.

In one experiment, nineteen patients were brought into one ward suffering from all kinds of diseases. Several were under the effects of morphine or other anaesthetics. A soloist sang, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth." The effect on the patients was soothing and pleasant, although no special note was made of the effect on the heart action. Those patients under the influence of morphine began to awaken, without fear or wandering of the mind.

One patient, a dyspeptic unable to take food, was found to be so far influenced by the playing of "The Old Oaken Bucket" that she was able to eat.

Another, partly insane, became calm and reasonable while the organ played "Dixie."

METHOD OF TICKLING TURTLE

Boston Man Will Use Newspaper Editorial to Prove He Was Not Cruel to Animals.

Boston.—Maximilien Fischer, proprietor of a grill in Federal street, proudly exhibited a 100-pound turtle in the window of his restaurant two months ago. Max was immediately haled into court and was fined $25 for cruelty to animals in keeping one Florida turtle on his back.

Max protested vehemently that the only way to keep a turtle in safety and know where he is when you want him is to keep him on his back. He maintained that the turtle wasn't hurt in person or dignity and didn't care a snap whether he was on his head or his heels. Max's plea was in vain. He appealed the $25 fine.

Now the Florida Times in a lengthy editorial says that Max was perfectly humane in placing the turtle on his back and that the animal itself was rather pleased over such treatment than hurt.

Fischer has sent for a copy of the Times, and will submit the editorial when his case comes up on appeal as "Exhibit B." "Exhibit A" has gone the way of all good turtles.

MONKEY MADE LOVE TO GIRL

Paris.—As 20 work girls came out of a dressmaker's shop in the Rue Boileau at midday an arm encircled the waist of one of them.

The girl protested indignantly. The too-gallant intruder was well dressed in a frock coat, gray trousers, top hat, patent leather boots and wore smart grey suede gloves. But he was a hideous little person.

The girls began making fun of him, when suddenly he caught hold of one and put his face close to hers. She boxed his ears, and he dropped on all fours and bit her leg.

There was a panic. The girls rushed off shrieking, and two policemen arrested the aggressor. The creature was a chimpanzee—the pet of an explorer living near at hand. He was captured after a struggle, and carried off by his master's cook, who went to fetch him at the police station, where he had spent the night.

An amusing item of the story is that the police magistrate got very angry with the monkey when he was first brought in because he refused to answer any questions and turned his back on the official table.

CITY TO CLEANSE CHILDREN

Another Duty Is Assumed by London County Council—To Wash Pupil's Dirty Faces.

London.—The London county council is preparing to increase the multitude of motherly duties already assumed. To this end it is making arrangements for the municipal washing of all children who go to school with dirty faces and necks. As it cannot undertake all this laundering process itself, its members are arranging terms with most of the London borough councils to clean the children and send them back to school purified, and, in case of such necessity, in clothes that have been baked or boiled.

The borough of Kensington, as a result, is preparing to spend several thousands of pounds on more public baths. In Camberwell, however, the new idea has been in practise for some time and the council of that borough has just sent in a bill to the London county council for laundering and brushing up 3,906 little Camberwellians.

Atom May Be Electricity.

He advanced the theory that because matter has never been freed from electricity, the atom may be an electrical structure and nothing more.

In other words, matter and electricity in the last analysis may be the same.

SQUIRRELS HURT THE CROPS

Maine Farmers Turn Upon Little Pets of Law and Want "Pesky Things" Exterminated.

Lewiston, Me.—The State of Maine is overrun with gray squirrels, according to reports received at the office of the Commissioners of Inland Fisheries and Game. Thousands of dollars worth of damage has been done to the crops and in some places whole cornfields have been completely destroyed. Farmers are flooding the office of Chairman Brackett of the Fish and Game Commission with petitions asking for protection.

Two years ago a state law was passed making it illegal to hunt and kill gray squirrels. As a result the squirrels have multiplied rapidly and have become tame and destructive. Until the special law was passed gray squirrels were classed as "game animals" and each fall were hunted by the gunners. The farmers who two years ago petitioned the legislature to pass a law to protect the "little pets" now have their dander up and declare they want every one of the "pesky things" killed off. In some instances the farmers have defied the law and with loaded guns have watched their cornfields from early day until late at night.

The Commissioners of Inland Fisheries and Game have promised to do everything in their power to have the law repealed at the next session of the legislature.

ANATOMY OF WOMAN AWRY

Miss Moses, a Nurse, Has Every Internal Organ on Side Opposite to Usual Location.

Philadelphia.—The mixed anatomy of Alexander Jorden, whose heart, spleen, liver and stomach are reversed, according to the standard set in the construction, is paralleled in the case of Miss Anna A. Moses, a trained nurse of Osterburg, Bedford county, Pa. Miss Moses not only possesses all of the transpositions boasted by Jordan, but was treated for appendicitis six years ago by applications on the left side of her abdomen.

She presents a complete case of "situs inversus," every organ of her body being on the side opposite to where it is usually found.

Miss Moses writes with her right hand, but says in learning to do so in childhood, before her mixed anatomy was known, she seemed to be conquering a protesting tendency to lefthandedness which would be the effect of an inherited righthandedness from both of her parents.

She discovered that her heart was on the right side, or rather the wrong side, while studying to be a trained nurse, in 1898, but did not suspect that the reversal was complete, and, as she suffered not even the slightest illness, was not examined by a physician until 1904.

Then she began to feel pains in the lower part of her abdomen on the left side, and visited Dr. Mervyn R. Taylor, at 1706 Race street. Miss Moses laughed gayly when the physician became perplexed in sounding her heart with his stethoscope. An examination convinced Dr. Taylor that all of her organs were reversed.

FIND LOVE AT FIRST TOUCH

New York.—The same hands that guided his own over raised letters in a Brooklyn library will soon be the hand of William Gooshaw's wife, it was said the other day apropos of the romance of two sightless lovers.

Miss Beryl Clarke, with big brown eyes that don't in the least betray blindness, admits the truth of the statement, and that it was love from the first meeting. Miss Clarke is in charge of the school for the blind at the Pacific branch of the Brooklyn circulating library, and she will wed William N. Gooshaw Thanksgiving day.

While the pupil pored over books with raised letters the teacher sat at his elbow, and Dan Cupid succeeded in clasping the hands of the two. "I was attracted to Mr. Gooshaw," she said, "by his personality, his character and intellect. These are far more important than looks."

SHARK IS SOLD AS SALMON

Colored With Aniline Dyes It Serves as Excellent Substitute—Authorities Aroused.

New York.—Health authorities in the east, and more particularly in New York, are on the watch lest sharks' flesh, "doped" with aniline dyes and sold as smoked salmon, be imported from the Pacific coast, where it has been discovered in city markets.

The manufacturer of the "salmon" has been traced to Seattle. How long the practise of doctoring up cheap whitefish with the brown coloring stuff and how long the market has been supplied with this delicacy is a problem which San Francisco is now grappling.

The unearthing of the fraud was not more startling than the manner of discovery was curious. How would you like to be the chemist of the department of health, charged with the duty of seeing that your fellow-citizens had pure food to eat, and find yourself munching shark's flesh when you thought you were eating the best of salmon?

That is what happened to Assistant City Chemist Fred West in Frisco.

West was eating his noonday luncheon the other day in the upstairs laboratory of the department. Biting into a tasty-looking salmon sandwich, prepared by his wife at home, the chemist met disappointment. West began to investigate. The "salmon" turned out to be a cheap whitefish colored. He secured some more at home and a fresh supply from a local market, where the first had been purchased.

Analysis showed that brown aniline dyes had been used to give the flesh a spurious color, the product smoked and then shipped from the north as salmon.

Extra Quality Needed.

CHICAGO HAD A BIG SCARE

For Two Hours Driverless Horse Dragged Load of Nitro-Glycerine Through Streets.

Chicago.—For two hours the other night an express wagon with dynamite and nitro-glycerine rumbled driverless through the West side streets and boulevards, being finally halted at Van Buren and Jefferson streets. William Walts, the driver, was in the Fort Wayne freight station shortly after six o'clock.

Calling to a policeman on his return, Walts gasped that he had "lost enough dynamite to blow up the West side," and started on a run west in the roadway. Alleys and dimly-lighted streets were covered in a few minutes and a short time later he was joined in the search by many detectives who swarmed through the district. The conveyance is owned by a teaming company and the explosives were to be forwarded to some out-of-town point.

"And so your father refuses to consent to our union?"

"He does Rodolphus."

The sad youth swallowed a sob.

"Is there nothing left for us, then, but an elopement?" said he.

"Nothing."

"Do you think, Clementine, that you could abandon this luxurious home, forget all the enjoyments of great wealth, banish yourself forever from your devoted parents' hearts, and go west with a poor young man to enter a home of lifelong poverty and self-denial?"

"I could, Rodolphus."

The sad youth rose wearily and reached for his hat.

"Then," said he, "you are far from being the practical girl I have all along taken you to be."

And with one last look around on the sumptuousness that some day he had hoped to share, he sobbed and said farewell.—Browning's Magazine.

People Who Work Indoors With Their Hands

Seamstresses, watch-makers, artists, draughtsmen, and many others, cannot properly handle their tools with cold, stiff hands. Many a lost hour or two on cold winter mornings results from the delayed heat of furnace or stove.

The Perfection Oil Heater in a few minutes gives the temperature that assures the worker warm hands and pliable muscles. The quickly gives heat, and with one filling of the font burns steadily for nine hours, without smoke or smell. Has automatic-locking flame spreader which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so the wick can be quickly cleaned.

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER
Absolutely smokeless and odorless

It has a damper top and a cool handle. Indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap does not need to be screwed down; it is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain, and cannot get lost.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection is finished in japan or nickel, is strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

800 Bushels from 20 acres of wheat was the thresher's return from a Lloydminster farm in the season of 1910. Many fields in that as well as other districts yielded from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. Other grains in proportion.

This excellent showing causes prices to advance. Land values should double in two years' time. Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts; 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest; wood, water and building material plentiful.

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to Canadian Government Agent.

PENNINGTON COUNTY IS ONLY A NAME

Right of Proposed New County to Existence is Questioned.

There is every reason to believe that the much talked about, much scrapped about so-called Pennington county will make a little interesting local history and will then quit doing business.

Notice of contest of the election on the proposition to divide Red Lake county was served on the board of county commissioners Saturday afternoon by contestant Ed L. Healy.

There are fifty-six counts in the contestant's notice covering the following ground: That there was not legal notice given prior to the election that the proposition would be voted upon; that there was illegal voting in nineteen precincts, and a recount is asked in each of them; that the assessed valuation of the taxable property in both counties would be too low to be self supporting, and that since the passage of the law under which the creation of Pennington county is set up the legislature has passed various drainage laws under which Red Lake county has constructed ditches and sold drainage bonds to an extent of [illegible], the greater part of said ditches being in the proposed Pennington county; that the law makes no provision for the collection of the liens on the lands in Pennington county should it be established and that there are now under construction within the territory of the proposed Pennington county ditches, contracts for which amount to $108,793.33 and [illegible] partially within the new county, and that no means have been provided for the payment of these contracts, and that no bonds have been or can be issued, if Pennington county is established, to meet the contracts.

Reports sent out from Thief River Falls state that those who have stated the contest do not expect to secure the dissolution of the new county, but that delay only is sought. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Nothing can be accomplished by a fight for delay. This is a contest instituted for the exact purpose stated in the formal notice. The case is a strong one and the people of Red Lake county interested in this contest do not only hope to win but they expect to win.

WILL LIMIT THE "INDIAN TERRITORY"

Executive Order Will Limit the Operations of the Ballinger Order.

Dispatches from Washington in this morning's papers state that President Taft will issue an order restricting the operations of the Ballinger order to a limited territory. This is understood to mean that the sale of liquor is to be prohibited on Indian reservations and territory surrounding that will be defined. The president believes that there should be no unnecessary interference with the state's police power, but that liquor must be kept from the Indians at all hazards. By the exercise of the police power state and local authorities will be compelled to see to it that Indians do not get liquor outside of the limited and defined territory. Failure in that will result in enlarging the "dry" territory. The fairness of the president's position cannot be doubted and the proper solution of the "Indian business" has probably been reached.

Musseys Start Paper.

H. E. Mussey of Thief River Falls and his son, Homer Mussey, foreman of the Gazette, expect to start the publication of a paper at Federal Dam, the new Soo line town. They are now negotiating for the plant and subscription list of the Cass Lake Voice and if they acquire that property they will move the plant to the new town and continue the publication of the paper as the Federal Dam Voice. That is some kind of a name for a newspaper and the Voice ought to be able to do some strong talking for the new town. The senior member of the firm will take charge of the paper and later in the winter Homer will be on the job. Both are experienced newspaper men and they will publish a good paper if the town is worth a—if the town becomes the important point it gives promise of becoming.

Bamboo Cooking Utensils.

The Dyaks of Borneo boil their food in bamboo cut into lengths of about two or three feet. These are placed over the fire in such a position that the joint of the bamboo does not come in contact with the fire, but rests upon the ground beyond. The fire is placed under the green and harder part of the cane, which, by its silicious coating, resists the action of the flame until the provisions are sufficiently prepared. A bundle of leaves placed in the mouth of the bamboo serves the purpose of the lid of an ordinary cooking vessel.

IMPORTANT POINT

Section 3553 of the Revised Laws of Minnesota for 1905 contains the following provision: "During the pendency of any action or proceeding, to test the validity of the organization of a new county, all instruments effecting real estate within such county may be recorded in the original county with the same effect as if recorded in such new county."

From the above provision it is clear that the only guaranty of safety in the recording of instruments is to have them recorded in Red Lake Falls while the contest is being carried on. If the contest does not defeat the division of the county the recording of the instruments will be just as effective as if made at Thief River Falls. However, if the contest is successful and Pennington county is compelled to quit business records made at Thief River Falls will be of no value. That is clear from the fact that the condition will then be as if Pennington county never existed.

KILLED FOUR COWS.

Freight Ran Into Herd Belonging to Illdage Baril.

Four cows belonging to Illdage Baril were killed by Friday morning's Great Northern freight. A boy was driving Mr. Baril's herd of dairy cows across the track when the freight ran into the herd killing four cows. The loss is quite a heavy one, for the cows were valuable, but it has not yet been determined whether the financial loss is Mr. Baril's or the railroad company's.

ABOUT THAT NEW SOO LINE TALK

The Proposed Railroad Connection Between Plummer and Grand Forks.

The activity of a party of Soo surveyors in Red Lake and Polk counties has caused considerable comment though probably less here than in many places, though the line talked about if constructed will pass through this city. Rumor says that a survey is being made for a line from Plummer to Grand Forks and that the line will pass through Red Lake Falls and Crookston.

Red Lake Falls people have expected that this line will be built. That is probably why they did not get very much excited over the "rumor." When it will be built they don't know nor does anybody else who builds railroads out of homespun, but they expect to be here when some big Irishman hits the last spike a mighty swat.

WINKJER COMMISSIONER.

Will be Head of the State Dairy and Food Department.

Governor A. O. Eberhart has tendered the appointment of state dairy and food commissioner to Joel G. Winkjer. Mr. Winkjer will accept. He is now federal dairy inspector with headquarters at Crookston. Governor Eberhart has asked the federal authorities for his release and the request will probably be granted. The appointment will please the dairymen. Mr. Winkjer is popular with them because of his good work in the past. There is no doubt that the work of his department will be handled very efficiently.

Where to Get Them.

The Wrong Place.

A man was apprehended by Chief of Police Boyce in the basement of the Enterprise building at noon Sunday having broken in through the cellar doors while the proprietor was in the building. He was evidently the worse for liquor, and gave as a reason for entering the building that he wanted to find a place to sleep. Undoubtedly he told the truth, and we opine that any man who breaks into a country printing office expecting to find rest or cash is certainly not in full possession of his faculties.—Glencoe Enterprise.

There will be a Christmas tree and Christmas program at the Presbyterian church Saturday evening. At 7:30 o'clock the Sunday school children will give a Christmas program. Later in the evening Santa Claus will arrive. In spite of his flowing beard and great age, Santa Claus is an up-to-date young man and he will come to town in an aeroplane. Found Dead in Hotel

Arthur W. Pederson was found dead in his room in the St. Paul hotel at Fargo Monday morning. Mr. Pederson suffered a fatal hemorrhage during the night, no doubt due to tuberculosis from which he has been a sufferer for some time.

Easily Pleased.

A young Lithuanian called at the marriage license office in Chicago with his bride recently, but a license was refused on account of the bride's tender years, she being only fifteen. The lover was crestfallen for a few moments; then his face cleared, and he left with the remark that he would return shortly.

The clerk supposed that he would show up with the bride's parents. In an hour he again presented himself at the counter—with another girl.—Metropolitan Magazine.

In an Awful Hurry.

"Uncle Chet" Thomas was driving a particularly fine-looking horse down the street one day. It was a deep bay, had lots of action, carried a high head and was an all around "good looker." A friend watched the horse for quite awhile and when Uncle Chet got close enough to hear him said: "That's a mighty nice looking horse you got there, Uncle Chet. Want to sell him?" "Well," said Uncle Chet, "I hain't huntin' a buyer, but I would take two-fifty fer him." "How fast can he trot?" was asked. "Well, he can trot a mile in three minutes without any trouble," said Uncle Chet. So the fellow bought him.

The next morning the new owner came back to Uncle Chet and told him that he had tried the horse out thoroughly, had taken him out to the fair grounds, had warmed him up and cooled him down a half dozen times, and the best he could get out of him was a mile in four minutes. Uncle Chet thought for a moment and then said, "Well, you must be in an awful hurry if you can't wait a minute."—Kansas City Journal.

STIRS UP LIVELY ROW

SENATOR CUMMINS MAKES ATTACK ON PRESENT TARIFF.

Contends That Congress Should Rule, Allowing the Change of Schedules at Any Time.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Contending that the present tariff imposes excessive duties and that the country at large demands its amendment, Senator Cummins of Iowa today delivered a speech in the senate in advocacy of his resolution limiting the power of the amendment of bills dealing with separate schedules of the law.

The speech was the first attack of the session on the Payne-Aldrich law and it received careful attention. The Iowa senator disavowed any intention of opening up a general tariff discussion. Still he found it difficult to avoid a general expression on tariff questions.

"It is well known," he said, "that I consider excessive and inexcusable many of the duties levied by the law of 1909. I know also that many people believe that law should be amended.

"During the recent political struggle I did not hear a single utterance by a republican that did not admit that the law contains duties that ought to be changed and that it is the duty of congress to act speedily."

Declaring then that under the existing parliamentary usage in the house and senate changing the tariff law is out of the question. He contended that the first step to be taken was the modification of the rules so as to render it possible to amend an individual provision of the tariff law without taking the entire tariff question.

"The real issue," he said, "is whether we shall so amend our rules as to permit the amendment of the law schedule by schedule."

Cummins had not proceeded far until he was compelled to submit to interruptions. Senators Aldrich, Hale, Lodge and Carter participating in the debate.

SALOONS BY INJUNCTIONS.

Bemidji Saloonkeepers' New Method of Continuing Business.

Bemidji, Minn., Dec. 13.—Indications are that Bemidji's so-called "injunction saloons" will continue to be operated without hindrance for several months and perhaps permanently. While neither E. E. McDonald, attorney for the twelve saloon men, nor Judge Spooner, associated with him in the injunction movement, will give out anything directly bearing on the cases now pending, it is intimated that mandamus proceedings will be instituted for the purpose of restraining the government from preventing the shipment of liquors into this city to replenish the supply of dealers, which is fast being depleted.

It is also believed that Special Officer Brents received from Secretary Ballinger specific instructions not to disturb the twelve Bemidji "injunction saloons" pending a determination of the relative rights of the department and saloonkeepers under the proceedings.

Brents, it is said, will not retire from this section at present. It is stated that one deputy special officer will be stationed at each of the following places to keep a close scrutiny on closed saloons and to intercept if possible all shipments of wet goods: Duluth, at or near Grand Rapids, Bemidji, Big Falls, Brainerd, Akeley, Bagley and Mahnomen.

It will be the duty of these officers to hunt down and prosecute bootleggers or blind piggers, and they will co-operate with officers in all places.

Clubman Shot by Wife.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 13.—Although he is still in a serious condition at the hospital, physicians say that Herbert Mason Clapp, clubman and grandson of Mason, the "shoeblacking king," will probably recover from a bullet wound he received yesterday.

Mrs. Mary Clapp, his wife, who was arrested by the police after a statement made by the wounded husband that she shot him, was released on $2,500 bail last night. Mrs. Clapp spent the night at her father's home and today returned to her apartments where the shooting occurred.

She maintains the shooting was accidental. Mrs. Clapp admitted that she and her husband were struggling for the possession of the revolver at the time he was shot.

Asks Death Sentence.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 13.—When 18-year-old George Bloohas convicted of the murder of Eftimas Stergloelas, here last summer was sentenced yesterday to life imprisonment in Marquette prison, he begged the officers to hang him.

He said he would rather die than face the prospect of spending the rest of his days behind prison bars. Bloohas confessed he dropped a boulder on the head of his victim while the latter was asleep.

Twenty-Six Entombed.

Norton, Va., Dec. 14.—Twenty-six men were entombed by an explosion in the Grenno mine, of the Bond Coal Co., near Tacoma, at 9 o'clock this morning. The latest reports indicate that twenty-two of the entombed miners are dead. The explosion was caused by a quantity of gas becoming ignited in the workings of the mine.

1910 Accidents on Great Lakes.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 13.—There were fewer disasters on the great lakes during the season just closed than during the season of 1909. Last year there were 128 lives lost, a much higher toll than for 1910.

The worst disaster of this year was the sinking of car ferry No. 18 of the Pere Marquette railroad of Ludington, Mich., with the loss of more than a score of lives. The greatest monetary loss of the 1910 season was incurred when the steamer W. C. Moreland was stranded on Eagle reef, Lake Superior. The loss was $240,000 and the cargo $40,000.

Police Think Suicide Pact.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—John Christie whose home is in Duluth, Minn., lies in a hospital here today in a critical state from the effects of poison which he swallowed last night in an apartment in a fashionable north side district.

A police investigation developed that a woman acquaintance of Christie was also a sufferer from poison apparently taken at the same time. The woman was not seriously injured.

According to the police, there is ground for the theory that the poison was taken in a suicide agreement.

BURN OLD BONDS

CEREMONY AT CAPITAL

Papers Were Liens of $1,659,000.—Major Portion Stands for Loss in Wild-Cat Rail Schemes.

St. Paul.—With all the impressive ceremonies that usually attend the burning of a church mortgage, old time state bonds, valued once at $1,659,000, but which were redeemed during the last year, were fed to the flames in the furnace at the capitol engine house. Present at the service were Governor Eberhart, Attorney General Simpson, Secretary of State Schmahl, State Treasurer Pettijohn, State Auditor Iverson and several newspaper men. The documents consisted of $1,450,000 in state capitol certificates and $188,000 in Minnesota refunding bonds.

The destruction of the latter marks the disappearance of the last of the old railroad bonds of 1858, and closes one of the most interesting and exciting of the financial controversies in the state's history. On March 9, 1858, the first legislature elected under the constitution passed an act proposing an amendment, authorizing a loan of $5,000,000 to four railroads. The eagerness of the people in those days to encourage railway companies with large grants and subsidies resulted in the passing of the amendment by a large vote.

The bonds were issued and the companies proceeded to build their roads, but none was ever completed. The work was abandoned after bonds amounting to $2,275,000 had been issued. The state became the purchaser of these bonds at a foreclosure sale in October, 1860. In November, 1860, the people adopted an amendment which, in substance, repudiated the railway bonds by providing that no law levying a tax for the payment of these bonds would be valid until it should be ratified by a majority of the voters. It further provided that there should be no further issue of bonds under the act of 1858, and the law was stricken from the constitution.

For twenty years the bonds were not recognized as a valid state obligation. There was, however, a growing sentiment that a moral obligation rested upon the state to pay the debt. As a result the legislature, in 1881, provided for a compromise by which the holders of the bonds were to accept 15 per cent of the face value. The adjustment bonds, amounting to $4,253,000, were issued as substitutes for the old railroad issue.

Debt Now Wiped Out.

In 1891 the legislature authorized a refundment of the bonds of 1881 and after deducting the proceeds from the sale of internal improvement lands only $1,764,000 remained unpaid. Portions of these bonds were paid each year from a 2-10 mill levy. The last bond was paid recently, wiping out the entire obligation.

The payment of $1,450,000 capitol commission certificates, which also were destroyed, leaves $2,100,000 to be paid. This money is raised by a 2-10 mill levy. There will be enough money on hand on Feb. 1 to reduce the indebtedness to $1,850,000.

If the plans of State Auditor Iverson materialize the surplus of $850,000 in the state treasury will be used to pay off part of the certificates, reducing the debt to $1,000,000.

DENY NEW LINE IS TO BE BUILT.

Milwaukee Road Gives Little Hope to Farmers Around Willmar.

Willmar.—In reply to an inquiry by large delegations of farmers through the Willmar Commercial Club as to the probability of the Milwaukee company building the line of road projected from Hutchinson to Fargo in the near future a letter has been received from Vice-President E. W. McKenna containing the following statement:

"In respect to building a line upon a survey between Hutchinson and Fargo, which was made by this company last summer, the company has absolutely no plans in that direction, as it must be patent to an observer of events that the construction of any additional mileage of railway under existing conditions is entirely out of the question."

There is little doubt, however, that this line will eventually be built, and that a concerted action will be made by people interested in this and adjoining counties to convince the company that a route via Willmar, Sunburg and Starbuck would tap a country of far greater possibilities than that reached by the first survey.

STILLWATER MILL IS BURNED.

Tozer Company's Plant Destroyed—Loss Placed at $50,000.

Stillwater. — Fire broke out at South Stillwater, causing a loss estimated at from $60,000 to $60,000. The planing mill of the David Tozer company was totally destroyed. The plant was insured for about $40,000. The company intends to rebuild the plant at once. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is thought it started in the boiler room.

H. A. TUTTLE IS HONORED.

Minneapolitan Chosen Vice-President of National Rivers Congress.

Washington, D. C. — H. A. Tuttle, of Minneapolis, was elected vice-president of the national rivers and harbors congress, which is in session here. Capt. McDougal, of Duluth, and Grant Van Sant, of St. Paul, were selected members of the nominating committee, and John Rich, of Red Wing, a member of the resolutions committee.

PROGRESSIVES RALLY TO CALL.

Sidney Anderson Sends Acceptance of Invitation.

St. Paul.—The mass meeting of Progressive Republicans to be held in the Twin Cities, Jan. 4, will be largely attended and a success from every standpoint if the results bear out the indications. Frank B. Lamson, secretary of the Progressive Republican league, says that acceptance of invitations to attend the meeting are far in excess of their expectations and that many of the best known leaders in the Republican party will identify themselves with the movement at the mass meeting. The acceptance of Congressman-Elect Anderson from the First District was received.

The idea that a third party was to be the outcome of the meeting was declared by Mr. Lamson to be absurd and to have arisen from a newspaper editorial that had no foundation in fact. The sentiment of the meeting will include opinions on ten questions. The first two must be answered favorably by all delegates before allowed a seat in the convention.

The questions follow:

1. Adoption of the initiative, referendum and recall.
2. Extension of primary election law to all elective public officials, United States senators and delegates to national convention.
3. Nomination of all judges by nonpartisan petition.
4. Establishment of bureau of legislative research.
5. County option.
6. Amendment to corrupt practices act to prevent expenditures of large amounts of money in primary and general elections.
7. Federal income tax.
8. Placing all public employees under civil service.
9. Adoption of Wisconsin and Iowa ad valorem system of railway taxation.
10. Adoption of home rule charters by a majority vote.

A paper prepared in simple English showing the working of the initiative and referendum in states where it has become a law, is issued by the league and a brief explanation of what the two terms mean is also given.

PLEADS GUILTY TO ARSON.

Several More to Face Trial in Connection With the Same Offense.

Glenwood. — Richard Rogers of St. Paul, charged with the burning of a store in Westport, last June, had his hearing in justice court and was bound over to the district court. He pleaded guilty before Judge Flaherty to arson in the third degree, and was sentenced to four and one-half years at hard labor in the prison at Stillwater.

When asked whether he had anything to say, Rogers said he had been hired to do the work. He received a letter stating that there was $100 for him for doing a certain job. He met the man who had written the letter and asked him what he was to do. On arriving at Glenwood a team was hired in the evening, and when the men arrived at Westport he was ordered to set fire to the store. He did not know until he reached Westport what he was to do. Rogers is 40 years old. He has no trade, he says, but makes his money by gambling.

The case of the state against William Jones was then taken up. Jones was indicted last June by the grand jury in connection with the same fire. The state is represented by County Attorney J. O. Grove and State Senator C. J. Gunderson. Jones is defended by H. T. Ronning.

Indictments have also been found against James Adair of St. Paul, who owned the stock, and Harry Weller, who was in charge of the store for Adair.

SHERIFF LOSES JOB.

St. Paul.—James McDevitt, sheriff of Dakota county, was ordered removed from office for neglect of duty in not stopping the steer killing contest, which took place at Premo park, West St. Paul, September 18. The removal is effective at once, and the county board will have the election of a successor. McDevitt's term would have expired January 1, as he was defeated for re-nomination at the primaries held two days after the famous contest.

The charges against McDevitt were made by officers of the Humane society, who contended the sheriff failed to do his duty in not stopping the contest, which was declared to be a brutal affair and not a proper exhibition to which to admit the public.

New Bridge at Fort Ripley.

Fort Ripley.—Crow Wing and Morrison counties will join in building a $1,500 bridge at Fort Ripley. The county commissioners of Crow Wing county authorized the auditor to advertise for bids for the 60-foot steel bridge across the Nokay Selhle river at Deggett Brook, deeming a new bridge better than the continual repairing of the old wooden structure.

ARRIVE IN NEW YORK SOON.

Body of Dr. Hutchinson Probably Will Be Buried in Faribault.

St. Paul.—John Hutchinson, brother of Dr. Hutchinson, who died at Algiers, Africa, secured definite information that Mrs. Hutchinson would arrive in New York about December 14. It is probable she has the body of her husband with her, although Mr. Hutchinson could not be certain of this. The funeral will be held at Faribault, the old home of Dr. Hutchinson.

CROOKSTON HALL DESTROYED.

Firemen Barely Save New Opera House and Hotel From Flames.

Crookston. — The Crookston Odd Fellows' hall, erected in 1881 and originally used as the court house, was burned to the ground. The new opera house and Crookston hotel were both in danger, but through the heroic efforts of the fire department the fire was confined to the hall building. The loss is estimated at $15,000, with about 50 per cent insurance.

MILLIONS ASKED FOR RIVER.

Treasury Estimates Include High Dam For Twin Cities.

Washington, D. C. — If the estimates of the treasury department sent to congress are adopted in making appropriations for this year $250,000 will be expended in continuing the construction of the high dam and locks in the Mississippi river at Minneapolis.

The total of the estimates for improving the Mississippi from the Ohio river to Minneapolis for the next year will be $2,500,000 as compared with $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 11, 1911. Of this amount $1,250,000 is needed for the work on the river between the mouth of the Missouri and Minneapolis. There also is an estimate that the work on the Mississippi river from the head of navigation to the mouth of the Ohio, river, including the expenses of the Mississippi river commission, will amount to $3,000,000 as compared with $2,000,000 of last year.

An appropriation of $3,600 for the maintenance of the St. Croix river is asked; for the maintenance of Agate Bay harbor, $2,000; for the maintenance of the Red River of the North, $5,500.

Among other appropriations for Minnesota and the Northwest are $2,500 for the improvement of the Wind Cave in the National park, South Dakota; $4,500 for the Duluth fish culture station, and $8,700 for the Homer, Minn., station.

For public buildings at Faribault, Minn., $20,000; Lead, S. D., $20,000; Sioux Falls, S. D., $12,000; Duluth, $95,000 for additional lands.

Duluth Man is Given State Post by Governor.

St. Paul. — Governor A. O. Eberhart has announced the appointment of Guy A. Eaton, of Duluth, as state oil inspector, to succeed E. J. Lynch, whose term expires Jan. 1. The appointment comes as a surprise, as the Duluth man had not been mentioned for the position. Mr. Eaton was postmaster of Duluth for several years. He is at the head of the Minnesota naval reserve and was chairman of the St. Louis Republican county committee during the recent campaign. The other candidates for the office were Walter Lemon and Charles R. Parker, of St. Paul, and A. D. Brown, of Madison.

Governor Eberhart also announced the reappointment of Samuel Lord, of Kasson, member of the state tax commission. Mr. Lord was a Johnson appointee.

It was reported at the capitol that E. J. Lien, of St. Vincent, assistant librarian, was slated for state librarian. He has the unanimous indorsement of the supreme court. The other candidate is Asa Wallace, of Fairfax.

GAS PLANT WORK STOPPED.

Waseca Mayor Refuses to Approve of City Franchise.

Waseca.—The Waseca Gas Company's franchise, which has been the issue in two general and two special elections, has been brought before the district court for determination as to its validity, by the filing of a petition for an injunction restraining the gas company from further work on their mains and plant. This franchise was granted in a special election about two years ago, but the council at that time refused to allow the company to build the plant, and a special election was called by the council for the purpose of voting bonds for a municipal gas plant. Municipal ownership was voted down and in the next general election a council favorable to the gas franchise was elected. The franchise was granted, but the mayor refused to approve it. Notwithstanding this the company commenced work and has proceeded with the building of the plant until the restraining order was issued. The stockholders of the company are all residents of this city.

PHYSICIAN INDICTED FOR ARSON

Accused of Setting Fire to Auto to Collect $800 Insurance.

St. Cloud.—A sensation was sprung in the district court when the grand jury of Stearns county returned an indictment for arson in the second degree against Dr. J. C. Boehm, a prominent physician of this city. It is alleged in the indictment that Dr. Boehm set fire to an automobile belonging to him in order to collect $800 insurance on the machine.

A bench warrant was sworn out and the prisoner was arraigned before Judge M. D. Taylor. Bail was fixed at $1,000, which was furnished.

Dr. Boehm is one of the most prominent physicians here and the action of the grand jury came as a complete surprise. He has lived here twenty years and always has borne a good reputation, having served at times as an alderman, member of the board of education, secretary of the Stearns-Benton county medical association and at present he is a member of the government medical pension examiners.

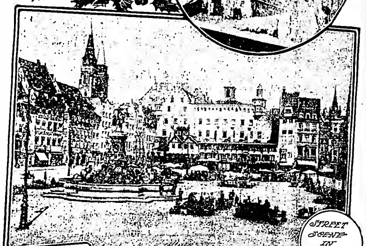
Minnesotan Dies in Turkey.

Washington, D. C. — Edmund H. Ozmun, of Minnesota, United States consul at Constantinople, is dead. It is stated that Mr. Ozmun had been suffering from grippe for some time, but the immediate cause of his death was disorders incident to a knotted intestine. Mr. Ozmun was one of the veterans of the consular service. He was, at one time, under consideration as ambassador at Constantinople, but it was decided to let him serve as consul at that point before advancing him to the diplomatic service.

Seians For Ramsey Statue.

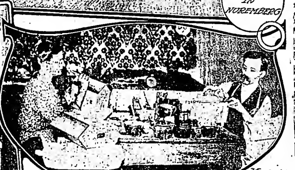
St. Paul.—The committee, appointed some time ago by the Junior Pioneers to start a movement to have a statue of Minnesota's first governor, Alexander Ramsay, placed in front of the state capitol, will take the matter up as soon as the legislature meets. W. J. Basille, a member of the committee, said the committee had talked the matter over with several members of the Ramsey county delegation to the next house and they had expressed a desire to further the project and have it brought before the legislature.

The Village of Always Christmas



FROM the rush and hustle of busy American city streets, alive at this season of the year with Christmas shoppers, back to old Nuremberg, in Germany, where the Christmas spirit lasts the year around, where Santa Claus spends his working months for the joy of the world's children—surely the step is not too great for the imagination nor its goal uninteresting as a study. Come out of your crowded streets, your people-packed stores, leave off for the time being your breathless chase after that troublesome "last present," and [illegible] into the quiet winding streets, the irregular [illegible] dovetailed by houses older than anything in the oldest parts of the United States. [illegible] above house full of a history as romantic as the proudest mansion of our city streets, and yet marked by a simplicity and single-heartedness seldom present in things modern. It is here that the toys are made which you buy in your home across the sea. Here in the quietness of the unmodern, the playthings are invented and perfected for your restless, buoyant children. You read "Made in Germany" with a skeptical tilt of the eyebrow, but the fact remains that by far the greater number of all the toys manufactured come from Nuremberg.

PUTTING HAIR ON DOLLS' HEADS



MAKING NOAH'S ARK

SCENE IN TOY WORKSHOP

The ancient feudal city, around which cluster the grim traditions of the Inquisition and the thrilling epic of the times of Charles V., has for four hundred years or more been the center of the children's fairyland. It has been and is the nucleus of Christmas happiness for the youth of every place in the Occident, and its charm is the perpetual one of joyous creation which delights in planning the amusement of little people.

In the factories they will tell you that 72,000,000 marks ($18,000,000) worth of pleasure is sent out from Nuremberg every year, and that $5,[illegible] of this export is for the benefit of Young America. Only a few years ago all of the necessary labor for this immense production was done by hand, and much of the finishing and fine last touches are performed by special artists. Even now in the factories the old spirit of an almost consecrated enthusiasm lives and is evident in the interest of the village artisans for their craft. Not merely the reason of bread and butter goes toward the making of those marvelous walking dolls, those phenomenal speaking picture books, those thousand and one games that have called for all the imaginative as well as practical genius of these honest German peasant folk. Rather has their unique industry called for and developed in them a romance, a sensitiveness of perception which is remarkable.

Follow the lurching, worn curves of the Albrecht Durerstrasse, and you come to one of the many homes of this Nuremberg spirit. In a miniature red-roofed house, wedged in among a hundred squat brown huts, live two old men—brothers, of sixty-five and seventy—whose white heads are constantly bent over small circles of wood—shaping, paring, carving, painting.

All day they sit there, sometimes all night, toiling over the delicately ornamented dolls' dishes which perhaps you have bought, as a small insignificant thing, just this afternoon for your small daughter's tree.

You looked at them carelessly; they were not especially original or attractive, and you shoved them into your bag with a half-hesitating acceptance, thinking that maybe they would please capricious Dorothy. How could you know that back in the village of Always Christmas old hands had fashioned those trivial plates and pitchers, old eyes had strained with loving anxiety over those fine traceries of columbine, and old hearts had warmed over those completed trifles with the same thrill of the master painter over his best?

But this was true. Indeed, nearly all of the simple wooden toys are constructed by hand, in some humble volkshause which goes to make up the aggregate creative force of Santa Claus' workshop. Take the tiny sets of soldiers, the doll's chairs and tables, the painted wooden animals whose realism is a delight to all children, actual or grown up. These are fashioned in homes, sometimes by the efforts of whole families, but most often by children themselves.

Sixteen is the age limit for child labor in the factories, but no young person is prohibited from assisting his parents at home, provided he spends the required period of time at school. So that many of those playthings which give most happiness to the children of America have been made by the children of Nuremberg. And if babies must work, what work could one find for them more appropriate or more pleasurable than this business of toy-making. They grow up in the midst of it, all their hereditary ideas are colored by it, the history of the city speaks of it.

Inside of half a dozen blocks you have trains, up-to-date hotels, electricity, motor cars, Parisian frocks, primitive carts drawn by huge mastiffs, funny tucked-away inns near the market place full of peasant women in wide black silk aprons and snowy white caps—crumbly fountains and a castle with a secret passage. All the elements of the fascinating past and the strangely progressive present within a stone's throw of each other. The realization of all that Nuremberg has been and has undergone comes to one most vividly as one stands looking down into the Schloss well 650 feet deep, where prisoners used to come to fetch water. Underground their passage led from the dungeons to this unlit circular pool, for state prisoners were never permitted to see the light, and the hollow splash of the water which the attendant drops into the well seems to re-echo, after an interminable half-minute, the hopeless pilgrimage of those countless victims of medieval fanaticism. Such is the potency of the ended. While the vitality of the occurring emphasizes itself far off, in one of the dozens of toy factories, whose very machinery whirs modernity, men, women and children—that is, children over sixteen—are massed into this building, all intent on the one idea, the creation of better and newer and more wonderful toys for everyone's children, in everyone's country.

It is seldom the industrial planet can boast of a broader ambition than this of the craftsmen of Nuremberg. To bring the greatest possible amount of pleasure, legitimate and often educative pleasure, to growing, active minds is surely an aim worthy of the finest art in the world. It even seems as though the thought back of the toys should surround them with a deeper meaning as gifts this Christmastide, since the added gift—the biggest gift—lies in the patient interested invention and accomplishment of which they are the exponent.

As for the inventors, strictly speaking, their reward seems infinitesimal according to our standards. The "boss" controls ideas as well as materials of output, and it is chiefly to his profit that new inventions in toyland redound. The man or woman who first thinks of or improves upon some plaything gets a very small per cent. of the income from it. To our new world standards of commerce it seems strange that the originator should receive such scant recognition and that without grumbling.

Very, very few Nuremberg toymakers have ever grown rich over their ingeniousness. It is true that ideas as well as toys in Germany sell for double what they sold for eight years ago, even! On the other hand the price of living has gone up appreciably, and what would have seemed a large purchase price then is only moderate now.

The staff of artists employed by the Nuremberg factory boss is in itself a not inconsiderable expense, and many a quiet charity is undertaken by these men who at home would be absorbed in getting rich. In the shop of Fritz Muller are various small kitchen gardens, carved and painted by a poor man and his sister after their regular working hours, and bought by Mr. Muller at high rates as his pet philanthropy. In this shop, now 100 years old, are seen all of the most novel of the toy-village playthings. The store was crowded with more children over thirty than under thirteen, and absorbed for hours over the clever and quaint attractions.

The doll's house of Nuremberg leaves nothing to be desired. Not only the usual rooms of a conventional menage are found in it, but conservatories with miniature orchids, fountains and watering cans; school rooms with tiny desks, a schoolmaster, very stern, with goggles and ruler, and children in aprons and carrying slates, the latter a sixteenth of an inch big; fields of flowers for the back yard and a swing for the smallest doll.

In all German art, of which toy making is by no means an insignificant department, perfection of detail has always been the salient feature. Every phase of home life is reproduced in microscopic form in German toyland, even down to the wee pairs of hand-knitted stockings and sweaters, the hob-nailed shoes and blue blouses which make up the wardrobe of the volks boy and girl.

The tourist season is a second Christmas for Nuremberg people, and they sell as many playthings in the one period as the other. An interesting point brought to light by this fact is the early differentiation of the American and European individuality, which shows itself in choice of games and pastimes. They say in the shops that an American child is invariably fascinated over the mechanical and complicated, that he finds intense interest in mastering the technicalities even of playing, while the European child likes a simpler but brilliantly colored toy, cherishing often a curious sentiment for traditional objects such as typify old world conservatism.

They are blessed with imagination, these village people, and they are not ashamed of showing their simplicity of spirit. Their souls are bound up in the heritage of centuries. The tragedies of their city's history wind about the toys they make, breathing into the wood a characteristic vitality—the vitality that comes of centuries of striving, of centuries of patient achievement.

As you sit in a swirl of red ribbon and foamy paper, "doing up" your Christmas presents, remember that many of them have come from this quaint little Village of Always Christmas. It may add to your holiday happiness to know that no pleasure which the toys may bring can be greater than the pleasure of those who made them, and that no good will of yours can outdo the quiet sincerity of purpose with which the simple people of Nuremberg have given their part toward this season of the universal gift.

STUDY OF CRIMINALS

Munich Prosecutor Finds Less Than 500 Youthful Offenses in One Year Among More Than 600,000 People.

New York.—States Attorney Rupprecht of Munich, Bavaria, has written an article for the Munchener Medizinische Wochenschrift on juvenile courts and the study of the juvenile delinquent as the result of his experiences as a practitioner in the children's court in Munich, concerning which the Medical Record says:

"One result of the establishment of children's courts should be a more intelligent study of the juvenile delinquent. The boy criminal differs radically from the girl offender. Youthful offenders differ from adults. The children also differ, as to the relative frequency of offenses, according as they dwell in agricultural, manufacturing or commercial communities.

"In that city (Munich) the children's court takes cognizance of all offenders between the ages of thirteen and eighteen, inclusive. The lad or girl of healthy stock must at this period be regarded as potentially a criminal, because character and will are undeveloped, and experience has not yet had its innings. Such must not be confounded with defectives.

"Munich has but a small contingent of youthful criminals. In a population of nearly 600,000 there are less than five hundred serious offenses a year committed by juveniles. Petty offenses multiply this five fold, but with these we are not concerned.

"Theft is the great offense of youth. It overshadows all others so far that the latter appear almost freakish. The boy steals in an unpremeditated fashion, while the girl has a plan. Boys tend to steal 'junk'—not to sell, but for making playthings. Girls tend to appropriate cosmetic articles.

"We have heard much as to moving picture shows tempting boys to pattern after burglars and highwaymen. This theoretical position may be quite offset by the actual knowledge that in Munich boys steal to be able to visit these entertainments, which, for all we know, may be highly moral. The temptation is so strong that even a 'good' boy may pilfer the price of the entertainment. He will do as much to get hold of a Nick Carter or Sherlock Holmes story.

"The boys in Munich also steal in connection with deep laid plans for visiting the frontier and fighting savages. But the Bavarian youth must be much more long headed than the Anglo-Saxon in this respect, for he usually steals a horse and firearms before sallying forth. He robs the family strong box for the sinews of war.

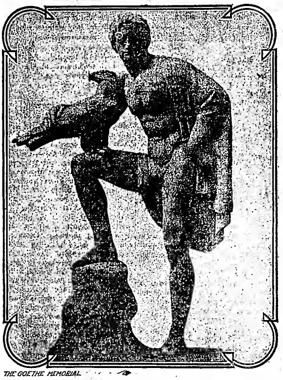
"Girls sometimes steal to make a present to a favorite school teacher. One took the flowers off a grave for this purpose.

"When caught in the act of a theft a boy usually confesses, repents and refuses to betray his associates. A girl lies until the last minute, and then endeavors to throw the blame on some one else. Boys almost always rob in bands; girls usually act alone.

"A boy seldom robs his employer, but some outsider; the reverse is the case with girls, who, since they pilfer cosmetics, adornments, etc., must almost necessarily rob their mistresses.

"The chief value of Rupprecht's study is that it deals with normal subjects, the policies advisable in dealing with whom have hitherto received comparatively little attention."

CHICAGO'S MONUMENT TO GOETHE



THE GOETHE MEMORIAL

CHICAGO.—Preparations for the erection of the memorial to the poet Goethe in this city are progressing, and art lovers are congratulating themselves on the fact that Chicago is to have a monument that is at once unique and artistic in design. The model selected was the work of Prof. Hermann Hahn of Munich. It is surmounted by an ideal figure of Youth, and bears a portrait of the poet in relief.

IGNORANCE OF LAWS

Much Money Lost Through Carelessness in Using Coins.

Jewelers Guilty Every Day of Committing Criminal Offense in Filing One Side of Coin Smooth—Other Offenses.

Chicago.—Thousands of dollars are lost yearly by big firms through ignorance or carelessness in observing the federal laws governing abuse of coins.

Just lately in Chicago a piano company came to grief in this way. Had they asked the proper authorities (the information would have been furnished gratis) or had they looked up the law they would have found in Section 165, public act No. 350, these words:

"Whoever fraudulently, by any art, way or means shall deface, mutilate, impair, diminish, falsify or lighten . . . the gold or silver coins which have been or which may hereafter be coined in the mint of the United States . . . shall be fined not more than $2,000 and imprisonment of not more than five years."

Much trouble and expense would have been saved the firm and the government had the law only been read. It all happened in this way: Some clever advertiser conceived the idea of an "ad" of metal just the size of a dime, with the wording and printing placed in such a way that at first glance it would appear as a dime. The idea was cleverly executed. A fair imitation of the head of Liberty was on one side and the advertisement on the other. The number was placed where the date on a dime is and the first glance certainly impressed one as the real coin. The other side had a sheaf of wheat and in the center the words "On Time."

The firm had no desire to defraud the public. But unscrupulous people who had access to them did. Several waiters at a summer park lost money by accepting the advertisement for real money, chewing gum machines were filled with them and at last the secret service learned how matters were and began an investigation.

There were 150,000 of the metals confiscated. Some stray ones, however, were in circulation and it took almost a year to "hunt them down."

Jewelers are guilty every day of committing a criminal offense. Every day some one of them lays himself liable to the law. According to the ordinance quoted above, to mutilate money is an offense in the eyes of the law. Jewelers file one side of a coin smooth and monogram it. The other side is perfectly good. Pins, bracelets, lockets and numerous other things are made. The owner never means to use the article for money. But some one gets hold of the pin or locket. He thinks the money would be more useful and so passes the coin with the pin or ring pulled off and the good side up.

To "change the complexion" of a coin also is an offense. That means to dip silver in gold. Only a few days ago a "lot" of shirt sets were confiscated and sent to Washington. The sets were made of Penang halfpennies gilded. Carelessness of the law again.

The only kind of coin that can be worn is that so completely mutilated that there can be no chance at all of passing it; for example, the filigreed dimes that the Mexicans make.

INSTITUTE TO STUDY RADIUM

Vienna Laboratories Will Be Devoted to Pure Science—To Examine Waters.

Vienna.—The new institute for the investigation of radium has been opened in Vienna by Archduke Rainer. Prof. Franz Exner, who has been chosen as the director of the new institute, explained in an opening speech that it is to be devoted entirely to research into the physical and chemical properties of radium, and not to the instruction of students, nor to studying the medical uses of the element.

The first tasks to which Prof. Exner and his assistants will address themselves will be the establishment of a standard for the content of radium in radio-active substances, an exact calculation of the atomic weight of radium, and the examination of mineral waters and rocks believed to contain radium.

CHINESE SAILORS FEED FISH

Boston.—So that their drowned brother might not feel the pangs of hunger while on the spiritual highroad to the other world, 23 Chinese sailors, comprising the crew of the British steamer Chatham, which reached Boston the other day from the west coast of South America, threw rice and other foodstuffs into the sea all the way from off the coast of Brazil to Boston lightship. Li Chow was the late lamented. Chow fell overboard while engaged in boat drill when the steamer was off the coast of Brazil. The Chatham was stopped and lifeboats launched; but before the speediest of them got within twenty feet of Chow he disappeared beneath the waves. Almost immediately after the steamer resumed her way the rest of the Chinese on board began stinting themselves and casting overboard what they saved from their own fare so that Chow might not go hungry.

That the Chatham encountered severe weather in her 10,000-mile journey was amply testified to by damaged deck fittings and smashed deck houses. The steamer was very hard hit when passing through the Straits of Michigan, sustaining most of the damage at that period. She was caught in a blizzard that kicked up waves, which in washing over her decks tore up steampipes and washed all movable objects overboard. The steamer's hospital was smashed in by one comber and several of the crew had to cling with all their might lest they be carried overboard by the receding water. Throughout most of the passage from Chile to Montevideo the steamer was covered with ice and snow, winter weather prevailing.

The Chatham started from Junin, Chile, on August 22, and called at five ports while en route. At Antofagasta she took on 3,010 tons of silver ore, valued at $500,000, and thus her cargo was one of the most valuable ever brought to Boston from South America.

Walks 800 Miles to Wed.

MONKEYS ON WILD RAMPAGE

Six Mischievous Little Animals Break From Cage and Take Refuge in Warehouse.

London.—Half a dozen trained monkeys gave a free exhibition to several hundred Clerkenwell children.

Escaping from a cage in a stable near Rosebery avenue, the monkeys soon overran the neighborhood. Scampering across roofs and running up rainwater pipes, they entered a warehouse by a broken window at which they chattered and grinned until their keeper recaptured them several hours later. The crowd was chiefly amused by the antics of the smallest, which bit and otherwise irritated his companions until they turned and by a combined attack punished him.

The owner of the monkeys, a music hall showman, was chiefly concerned lest the delicate animals should catch cold in the nipping east wind.

NEW FRENCH THEATER PLAN

Perambulating House Seating 1,500 Will Travel by Aid of Automobile Train.

Paris.—A perambulating theater fitted with the latest scenic appliances and seating 1,500 persons will take the road in France next April. As in the days of Moliere, performances will be given where there is a favored spot, but instead of the chariots and horses there will be a train of eight automobiles, drawing 21 cars.

The idea originated with Firmin Gemier, a well-known Parisian theater director, and it became public through the fine arts report of Deputy Paul Goncourt. The following details of the scheme were given by M. Gemier:

"Local and provincial theaters usually are insufficient for fine dramatic productions. Moreover, many communities have no theaters. The whole idea is based on decentralization and the wish to carry culture to the provinces. I intend to give the classics and the best modern plays. When I arrive at a town I shall erect a tent with a stage, boxes, orchestra seats, drops, wing, scenery—everything complete, including a central lighting and heating plant. Thanks to a new system the lighting will be as good as in the best theaters.

"Special new scenery will be prepared for every play. There will be 20 actors, directed by myself, and I shall employ 40 machinists. We will sell seats from 20 to 60 cents apiece and will spare no pains to make the productions perfect in every way. We shall remain on the road until November. We cannot travel fast—perhaps only six miles an hour—but we shall at least travel surely. We expect a great success."

"Do you believe the scheme would be practicable in America?" asked the correspondent.

"I am afraid not," answered M. Gemier, hesitatingly. "Your roads are too bad."

He is the same Roosevelt still—very still for Roosevelt.

And by this time have you read all of President Taft's message?

Governor Eberhart acted wisely in tendering the appointment of state dairy and food commissioner to Joel G. Winkjer.

The Gazette will bet a 1910 straw hat against a Pennington county warrant—and that's offering big odds—that Pennington county never was.

Regarding that proposed division of Red Lake county and creation of the so called Pennington county—why, we haven't begun to fight yet!

Cook got back first, and that is about the only information the public has of the accomplishments of the late expiditions in the direction of the north pole.

Doesn't that picture of Dr. Cook with a laurel wreath about his neck haunt you still? And as you now remember it, was it not a sickly smile that distorted his countenance?

In his confession Dr. Cook says that he was so unnerved by the trials of the expidition to the Acrtic region that the sight of his shadow and many other silly things frightened him. But even that did not prevent him from having nerve enough as soon as he was back where the sun shines to put over the best fake story that has thrilled the world for a long time.

As a last suggestion, if you did not do your Christmas shopping early,—remember that this is the season of good cheer and it's your duty to smile when the fat lady steps on your toes

Newspaper scareheads say that "Roosevelt is Standing Pat." Why give such prominence to that statement? Everybody ought to know that Roosevelt never stood any other way.

In an editorial on the "Electric Light Trust," the Grand Forks Herald said in part, "The Herald is a firm believer in the general theory of the municipal ownership of public utilities. It realizes, however, that the wisdom of applying the theory depends very largely on the conditions which exist in the particular community. Generally one of two causes leads to a demand for municipal ownership. One of them is inability to enlist private capital to finance enterprises. This often occurs in small communities, and the other solution is that of municipal ownership. The other cause is an abuse of privilege by private corporations, or inability or unwillingness to provide adequate service at reasonable cost. When that condition exists there is almost invariably agitation for municipal ownership. We believe that if public service corporations had as a rule been managed with the same degree of enterprise, and with the same evidence of a desire to actually serve the people as has been evidenced by the company that now operates the light and power plant in Grand Forks, there would have been few cases in which municipal ownership would have even been thought of. If private capital is interested in preventing the growth of the municipal ownership idea it can accomplish its ends in no more effective way than by abandoning many of the conceptions of the past, and taking a firm stand in the modern idea that a public service corporation is in reality a public servant and that its interests are inextricably bound up in the prosperity of the community which it serves."

The property at Grand Forks and the power and light plant in this city were acquired by the H. M. Byllesby company last June and since that time many improvements in the local system have been planned and the work of improvement has been carried on vigorously. The apparent purpose of the company to give patrons the best of service is appreciated quite as much in Red Lake Falls as in Grand Forks.

COADJUTORS' REMARKS

Whats' an Indian reservation, dad?

An Indian Reservation, my son, is a large tract of land entirely surrounded by "firewater."—Cass Lake Times.

The St. Peter Free Press agrees that there ought to be a reapportionment bill passed at the coming session—provided of course, that "the matter of taxation, especially an iron ore tonnage tax, is conceded." There is too much of this kind of spirit rampant, at present. There is no reason why a just and meritorious bill should not be passed. There is, or has been, too much of this "you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours," in matters pertaining to legislation.—Browns Valley Tribune.

The Eleven Towns, Swanson, et al, are kicking because the farmers were not heard of when the Pennington county officers were appointed. The farmers got just what we told them they would get before election—they got it in the neck. Do you remember the five stars? Thief River Falls has three and the farmers two. You were a fine fellow when you was turning the grind stone for them to grind their ax but now you belong to the ignorant producing class. Good for you! It serves you right, and we are sure that they will hold you down so close that an eleven town farmer could not even get the position of official spitoon cleaner. Put in another kick. That's all the good it will do you.—Sunbeam.

Emil Brink was brought over from East Grand Forks on Monday and placed in St. Vincent's hospital for an attack of appendicitis. Mr. Brink was a former St. Hilaire boy who was at one time engaged in business in this city, and has a lot of friends here and in Red Lake county who will hope for his speedy recovery.—Crookston Times.

The J. B. Arpin Dredging company of Grand Rapids, Wis., was awarded a large contract last week in securing the work of digging Judicial Ditch No. 19 which will include parts of Roseau and Marshall counties. The work of building camps and getting the machinery on the ground will be commenced this winter, and active operations will be started as soon as frost goes out of the ground in the spring.—The Thief River News.

A young man by the name of Nelson residing north of Ada met with a serious accident in a peculiar manner last week. He had placed a .32 caliber cartridge on a fence post and used this as a target to test his marksmanship. He shot at it with a 22 rifle and struck the cartridge. This exploded and the force of the explosion shot the shell backwards, striking Nelson in the eye. He was taken to a physician, who found it necessary to remove the entire eye.

A story comes from Vita, a station on the Canadian Northern between Warroad and Emarson, to the effect that a big black bear was killed there by Mrs. Hyrenck and her daughter, who live on a claim three miles south of the station. During their absence from the house a bear wandered inside. There was a dog in the house and a fight ensued which brought the women in armed with an axe and a pitchfork, with which they attacked and killed the bear. The dog, however, was so badly used up that he died.—Plummer Pioneer.

One of the biggest real estate deals ever made in Norman county was placed on record last week. The property conveyed was what has for years been known as the Lockhart farm, owned by H. C. Suttle, who transferred it to C. C. Samson and H. J. Tremain for a consideration of $201,220. The Lockhart farm includes all of sections 7, 19, 20, and 29, and about half each of sections 17, 27 and 28, all in Lockhart township. The number of acres is 3,371 making the purchase price about $60 an acre. There are nice buildings on the place and most of the land is under cultivation. Mr. Suttle takes considerable St. Paul property in exchange towards the purchase price.—Ada Index

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres; and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S.S.S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S.S.S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

The MAN in LOWER TEN

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the Bronson case to take the deposition of the chief witness for the prosecution, John Gilmore, a millionaire. In the latter's house the lawyer is attracted by the picture of a girl whom Gilmore explains is his granddaughter, Alison West. He says her father is a rascal and a friend of the forger. Standing in line to buy a Pullman ticket Blakeley is requested by a lady to buy her one. He gives her lower eleven and retains lower ten. He finds a man in a drunken stupor in lower ten and retires in lower seven. He awakens in lower seven and finds his bag and clothing missing. The man in lower ten is found murdered.

Some one was on the floor at our feet, face down, head peering under the berth. Now he got up without apology, revealing the man who had summoned the conductor. He was dusty, alert, cheerful, and he dragged up with him the dead man's suit-case. The sight of it brought back to me at once my own predicament.

"I don't know whether there's any connection or not, conductor," I said, "but I am a victim, too, in less degree; I've been robbed of everything I possess, except a red and yellow bathrobe. I happened to be wearing the bathrobe, which was probably the reason the thief overlooked it."

There was a fresh murmur in the crowd. Somebody laughed nervously. The conductor was irritated.

"I can't bother with that now," he snarled. "The railroad company is responsible for transportation, not for clothes, jewelry and morals. If people want to be stabbed and robbed in the company's cars, it's their affair. Why didn't you sleep in your clothes? I do."

I took an angry step forward. Then somebody touched my arm, and I unclenched my fist. I could understand the conductor's position, and beside, in the law, I had been guilty myself of contributory negligence.

"I'm not trying to make you responsible," I protested, as amiably as I could, "and I believe the clothes the thief left are as good as my own. They are certainly newer. But my valise contained valuable papers, and it is to your interest as well as mine to find the man who stole it."

"Why, of course," the doctor said shrewdly. "Find the man who skipped out with this gentleman's clothes, and you've probably got the murderer."

"I went to bed in lower nine," I said, my mind full again of my lost papers, "and I wakened in number seven. I was up in the night prowling around, as I was unable to sleep, and I must have gone back to the wrong berth. Anyhow, until the porter wakened me this morning I knew nothing of my mistake. In the interval the thief—murderer, too, perhaps—must have come back, discovered my error, and taken advantage of it to further his escape."

"Did anyone on the train suspect you of having valuable papers?" he inquired. The crowd was listening intently.

"No one," I answered promptly and positively.

The doctor was investigating the murdered man's effects. The pockets of his trousers contained the usual miscellany of keys and small change, while in his hip pocket was found a small pearl-handled revolver of the type women usually keep around. A gold watch with a Masonic charm had slid down between the mattress and the window, while a showy diamond stud was still fastened in the bosom of his shirt. Taken as a whole, the personal belongings were those of a man of some means, but without any particular degree of breeding. The doctor heaped them together.

"Either robbery was not the motive," he reflected, "or the thief overlooked these things in his hurry."

The latter hypothesis seemed the more tenable, when, after a thorough search, we found no pocketbook and less than a dollar in small change.

The suit-case gave no clew. It contained one empty leather-covered flask and a pint bottle, also empty, a change of linen and some collars with the laundry mark, S. H. In the leather tag on the handle was a card with the name Simon Harrington, Pittsburg.

The conductor sat down on my unmade berth, across, and made an entry of the name and address. Then, on an old envelope, he wrote a few words and gave it to the porter, who disappeared.

"I guess that's all I can do," he said. "I've had enough trouble this trip to last for a year. They don't need a conductor on these trains any more; what they ought to have is a sheriff and a posse."

The porter from the next car came in and whispered to him. The conductor rose unhappily.

"Next car's caught the disease," he grumbled. "Doctor, a woman back there has got mumps or bubonic plague, or something. Will you come back?"

The strange porter stood aside.

CHAPTER V.

The Woman in the Next Car.

With the departure of the conductor and the doctor, the group around lower ten broke up, to re-form in smaller knots through the car. The porter remained on guard. With something of relief I sank into a seat. I wanted to think, to try to remember the details of the previous night. But my inquisitive acquaintance had other intentions. He came up and sat down beside me. Like the conductor, he had taken notes of the dead man's belongings, his name, address, clothing and the general circumstances of the crime. Now with his little notebook open before him, he prepared to enjoy the minor sensation of the robbery.

"And now for the second victim," he began cheerfully. "What is your name and address, please?"

I eyed him with suspicion.

"I have lost everything but my name and address," I parried. "What do you want them for? Publication?"

"Oh, no; dear, no!" he said, shocked at my misapprehension. "Merely for my own enlightenment. I like to gather data of this kind and draw my own conclusions. Most interesting and engrossing. Once or twice I have forestalled the results of police investigation—but entirely for my own amusement."

I nodded tolerantly. Most of us have hobbies; I knew a man once who carried his handkerchief up his sleeve and had a mania for old colored prints cut out of Godey's Lady Book.

"I use that inductive method originated by Poe and followed since with such success by Conan Doyle. Have you ever read Gaboriau? Ah, you have missed a treat, indeed. And now, to get down to business, what is the name of our escaped thief and probable murderer?"

"How on earth do I know?" I demanded impatiently. "He didn't write it in blood anywhere, did he?"

The little man looked hurt and disappointed.

"Do you mean to say," he asked, "that the pockets of those clothes are entirely empty?"

The pockets! In the excitement I had forgotten entirely the sealskin grip which the porter now sat at my feet, and I had not investigated the pockets at all. With the inquisitive man's pencil taking note of everything that I found, I emptied them on the opposite seat.

Upper left-hand waist-coat, two lead pencils and a fountain pen; lower right waist-coat, matchbox and a small stamp book; right-hand pocket coat, pair of gray suede gloves, new, size seven and a half; left-hand pocket, gun-metal cigarette case studded with pearls, half-full of Egyptian cigarettes. The trousers pockets contained a gold penknife, a small amount of money in bills and change, and a handkerchief with the initial "S" on it.

Further search through the coat discovered a card-case with cards bearing the name Henry Pinckney Sullivan, and a leather flask with gold mountings, filled with what seemed to be very fair whisky, and monogrammed H. P. S.

"His name evidently is Henry Pinckney Sullivan," said the cheerful follower of Poe, as he wrote it down. "Address as yet unknown. Blonde, probably. Have you noticed that it is almost always the blonde men who affect a very light gray, with a touch of red in the scarf? Fact, I assure you. I kept a record once of the summer attire of men, and 90 per cent. followed my rule. Dark men like you affect navy blue, or brown."

"Yes; the suit he took was dark—a blue," I said.

He rubbed his hands and smiled at me delightedly.

"Then you wore black shoes, not tan," he said, with a glance at the aggressive yellow ones I wore.

"Right again," I acknowledged. "Black low shoes and black embroidered hose. If you keep on you'll have a motive for the crime, and the murderer's present place of hiding. And if you come back to the smoker with me, I'll give you an opportunity to judge if he knew good whisky from bad."

I put the articles from the pockets back again and got up. "I wonder if there is a diner on?" I said. "I need something sustaining after all this."

I was conscious then of some one at my elbow. I turned to see the young woman whose face was so vaguely familiar. In the very act of speaking she drew back suddenly and colored.

"Oh—I beg your pardon," she said hurriedly, "I—thought you were—some one else." She was looking in a puzzled fashion at my coat. I felt all the cringing guilt of a man who has accidentally picked up the wrong umbrella; my borrowed caller sat tight on my neck.

"I'm sorry," I said idiotically. "I'm sorry, but—I'm not." I have learned since that she has bright brown hair, with a loose wave in it that drops over her ears, and dark blue eyes with black lashes and—but what does it matter? One enjoys a picture as a whole; not as the sum of its parts.

She saw the flask then, and her errand came back to her. "One of the ladies at the end of the car has fainted," she explained. "I thought perhaps a stimulant—"

I picked up the flask at once and followed my guide down the aisle. Two or three women were working over the woman who had fainted. They had opened her collar and taken out her hair pins, whatever good that might do. The stout woman was vigorously rubbing her wrists, with the idea, no doubt, of working up her pulse! The unconscious woman was the one for whom I had secured lower II at the station.

I poured a little liquor in a bungling masculine fashion between her lips as she leaned back, with closed eyes. She choked, coughed and rallied somewhat.

"Poor thing," said the stout lady. "As she lies back that way I almost think it was my mother; she used to faint so much."

"It would make anybody faint," chimed in another. "Murder and robbery in one night and on one car. I'm thankful I always wear my rings in a bag around my neck—even if they do get under me and keep me awake."

The girl in blue was looking at us with wide, startled eyes. I saw her pale a little, saw the quick, apprehensive glance which she threw at her traveling companion, the small woman I had noticed before. There was an exchange—almost a clash—of glances. The small woman frowned. That was all. I turned my attention again to my patient.

She had revived somewhat, and now she asked to have the window opened. The train had stopped again and the car was oppressively hot. People around were looking at their watches and grumbling over the delay. The doctor bustled in with a remark about its being his busy day. The amateur detective and the porter together mounted guard over lower ten. Outside the heat rose in shimmering waves from the tracks; the very wood of the car was hot to touch. A Camberwell Beauty darted through the open door and made its way, in erratic plunges, great wings waving, down the sunny aisle. All around lay the peace of harvested fields, the quiet of the country.

CHAPTER VI.

The Girl in Blue.

I was growing more and more irritable. The thought of what the loss of the notes meant was fast crowding the murder to the back of my mind. The forced inaction was intolerable. The porter had reported no bag answering the description of mine on the train, but I was disposed to make my own investigation. I made a tour of the cars, scrutinizing every variety of hand luggage, ranging from luxurious English bags with gold mountings to the wicker nondescript of the day coach at the rear. I was not alone in my quest, for the girl in blue was just ahead of me. Car by car she preceded me through the train, unconscious that I was behind her, looking at each passenger as she passed. I fancied the proceeding was distasteful, but that she had determined on a course and was carrying it through. We reached the end of the train almost together—empty-handed, both of us.

The girl went out to the platform. When she saw me she moved aside, and I stepped out beside her. Behind us the track curved sharply; the early sunshine threw the train, in long black shadow, over the hot earth. Forward somewhere they were hammering. The girl said nothing, but her profile was strained and anxious.

"I—if you have lost anything," I began, "I wish you would let me try to help. Not that my own success is anything to boast of."

She hardly glanced at me. It was not flattering.

"I have not been robbed, if that is what you mean," she replied quietly. "I am—perplexed. That is all."

There was nothing to say to that. I lifted my hat—the other fellow's hat—and turned to go back to my car. Two or three members of the train crew, including the conductor, were standing in the shadow talking. And at that moment, from a farmhouse near came the swift clang of the breakfast bell, calling in the hands from barn and pasture. I turned back to the girl.

"We may be here for an hour," I said, "and there is no buffet car on. If I remember my youth, that bell means ham and eggs and country butter and coffee. If you care to run the risk—"

"I am not hungry," she said, "but perhaps a cup of coffee—dear me, I believe I am hungry," she finished. "Only—" She glanced back of her.

"I can bring your companion," I suggested, without enthusiasm. But the young woman shook her head.

"She is not hungry," she objected, "and she is very—well, I know she wouldn't come. Do you suppose we could make it if we run?"

"I haven't any idea," I said cheerfully. "Any old train would be better than this one, if it does leave us behind."

"Yes. Any train would be better than this one," she repeated gravely. I found myself watching her changing expression. I had spoken two dozen words to her and already I felt that I knew the lights and shades in her voice—I, who had always known how a woman rode to hounds, and who never could have told the color of her hair.

I stepped down on the ties and turned to assist her, and together we walked back to where the conductor and the porter from our car were in close conversation. Instinctively my hand went to my cigarette pocket and came out empty. She saw the gesture.

"If you want to smoke, you may," she said. "I have a big cousin who smokes all the time. He says I am 'kippered.'"

I drew out the gun-metal cigarette case and opened it. But this most commonplace action had an extraordinary result: The girl beside me stopped dead still and stood staring at it with fascinated eyes.

"Is—where did you get that?" she demanded, with a catch in her voice; her gaze still fixed on the cigarette case.

Art in Commerce.

There must be a considerable touch of the artist in the modern grocer. Groceries at first blush would seem to be colorless, unromantic things, but any such impression is a wrong one. Very little imagination is sufficient to reveal the real romance there is in groceries, and as to the artistic capabilities they possess in capable hands there is ocular demonstration in our many big, fine grocery stores that they are considerable. The grocer of to-day recognizes the great value of attractiveness. A man may strongly desire something, but when it is put up in a way which attracts and pleases his eye he more than wants it; he finds he cannot do without it. Manufacturers in Yankeedom send their goods into the world in dainty, often really beautiful, forms. And the retailer for his part ably seconds the manufacturer by arranging the goods he sells with all the taste and care of an artist.

Fowl Fare.

Drama.—O, it was a case of fowl is fair and fare is foul.

OLDEST "QUAKER CITY" HOUSE

Philadelphia.—Although Philadelphia is known as the "City of Homes" and contains many public buildings of historic renown, the number of residences of the seventeenth century now standing are comparatively few. One of the reasons for the disappearance of the old landmarks is the fact that many of the old residential sections of the city have been transformed into business localities and the old structures have given place to modern office buildings and business houses. It is a curious fact that the oldest house in Philadelphia, and the only residence of size in the city with gable ends facing on the street, stands at American and Ionic streets, in the very heart of the business and wholesale section bounded by Chestnut and Walnut, and Second and Third streets.

Philadelphia's Oldest House.

While this house is generally recognized as the oldest dwelling in the city, the exact date of its construction is not known. There are two bricks in the walls which are scratched with dates. One of them is inscribed "1701," while the other indistinctly bears figures "1692." It is upon the last figures that the claim of antiquity is based and the various historical societies of the city are convinced that the belief is correct.

Although no effort has been made by the various historical societies or the city to preserve it, the old building is in good condition, and from present indications, it looks as though it could withstand the buffetings of another century. The walls bear no cracks, and the plaster which holds the bricks together hardly shows its two centuries of wear. The joists of the two floors are solid and must have been of exceptionally well seasoned timber originally. In only two rooms has the flooring been renewed, and this was done when they were combined to make more room for the present tenant.

From all that can be learned the house has been in constant use since its construction, and its various tenants have from time to time brought the interior of the house up to modern ideas excludes the possibility of divulging any idea of the interior decorations of the colonial days. Very little is known of its former tenants, except that it was once the residence of Samuel Mickel, in 1736. He was the man who talked so discouragingly to Benjamin Franklin when he advanced the project of setting up a printing office in the city.

FAMOUS WAR ARTIST IS DEAD

Melton Prior Represented the Illustrated London News in 24 Campaigns and Revolutions.

London, Eng.—Melton Prior, who died recently, held the remarkable record of having served his paper, the Illustrated London News, as correspondent and artist in 24 campaigns and revolutions. There was no part of the world, civilized or savage, that was not familiar to him. He was acquainted with the prairies of the west, the pampas of South America, the jungles of Africa, the steppes of Russia, the rugged sternness of Central Asian plateau, and he knew Corea and Japan as well as the country of Kent or Devonshire. He began his experiences as a war artist and correspondent in the Ashante campaign of 1873. He was in the Russo-Turkish war, the desperate struggle between Russia and Japan and the Boer fight for freedom in South Africa. He was an artist of ability and faithful in his delineation of characters and scenes.

A Few Fad Warnings.

Chicago.—Drink Water and get typhoid fever. Drink milk and get tuberculosis. Drink whisky and get jimjams. Eat meat and encourage cancer, apoplexy and appendicitis. Eat oysters and absorb typhoid gastric poison germs. Eat vegetables and give the system Asiatic thin-blooded weakness. Eat dessert and die with paresis or something else. Smoke cigarettes and die too soon. Drink coffee and fall into insomnia and nervous prostration. Drink tea and get weak heart. Drink wine and so drink gout.

Blame it all, if you want to keep well, quit eating and drinking, smoking and loving, and before breathing or touching anything see that the air and everything is perfectly sterilized. Some scientific cranks or madmen think every man should so live, while another set of cranks think all modern science is nonsense. There is a scientific moderation in living that almost surely insures long life, no matter what the different kinds of cranks say.

COLT DISTEMPER

Can be handled very easily. The sick are cured, and all others in same stable, no matter how "exposed," kept from having the disease, by using SPOHN'S LIQUID DISTEMPER CURE. Give on the tongue, or in feed. Acts on the blood and expels germs of all forms of distemper. Best remedy ever known for mares in foal. Does Your Cat Cough?

Poor pussy! As if the immemorial charges against her of keeping us awake o' nights and of eating canary birds whenever she gets the chance were not enough, the doctors have just discovered that for years she has been responsible for the spread of diphtheria. Dr. G. J. Awburn of Manchester, England, having traced an epidemic of this disease in a suburb of that city to a pet cat belonging to one of his patients, has found, after much clever investigation, that all cats are peculiarly susceptible to diphtheritic affections of the throat. He has therefore recently been warning all families who own cats: to watch them carefully, and, if they develop coughs, to forbid their being hugged and petted. Dr. Awburn further recommends that if the cough persists and the cat begins to grow thin to have the animal destroyed at once. The only really safe way, he says, is to let the first wheeze be pussy's death warrant.

Tribute to Painter's Skill.

One of the still life paintings by Jan van Huysen in the museum at The Hague was recently injured, but it is believed the perpetrator was neither vandal nor thief.

The picture represents a basket of fruit on which a number of insects have gathered. On a pale yellow apple, which is the centerpiece in the cluster of fruit, is a large fly, painted so true to nature, so say the officials of the gallery, that the canvas was injured by some one who endeavored to "shoo" it and brought his cane or hand too close to the canvas. "A tribute to the painter's genius," says the letter recording the fact, "for which the work had to suffer."

What World Lost?

"It was the worst calamity that ever happened to me," sighed the pale, intellectual high browed young woman. "I had written a modern society novel, complete to the last chapter, and a careless servant girl gathered the sheets of the manuscript from the floor, where the wind had blown them, and used them to start a fire in the grate."

"What a burning shame that was!" commented Miss Tartan.

Sense of Taste.

From a series of experiments recently made at the University of Kansas it is evident that the average person can taste the bitter of quinine when one part is dissolved in 52,000 parts of water. Salt was detected in water when one part to 640 of the liquid was used. Sugar could be tasted in 228 parts of water and common soda in 48. In nearly all cases women could detect a smaller quantity than men.

Why Kick?

Louis Wisne, the Newark artist, wore a gloomy look on his usually cheerful face.

"It has just struck me," he said to Charles Stasse, "that my shoes don't cost me as much as my youngster's."

"Then what are you complaining about?" asked Stasse.

Asking Too Much.

"The count has promised that he will never beat or kick me if I will marry him," said the beautiful heiress.

"But has he promised to work for you?" her father asked.

"Oh, papa, don't be unreasonable."

Health Regained by Right Food.

The average healthy man or woman is usually eager to be busy at some useful task or employment.

But let dyspepsia or indigestion get hold of one, and all endeavor becomes a burden.

"A year ago, after recovering from an operation," writes a Michigan lady, "my stomach and nerves began to give me much trouble.

"At times my appetite was voracious, but when indulged, indigestion followed. Other times I had no appetite whatever. The food I took did not nourish me and I grew weaker than ever.

"I lost interest in everything and wanted to be alone. I had always had good nerves, but now the merest trifle would upset me and bring on a violent headache. Walking across the room was an effort and prescribed exercise was out of the question.

"I had seen Grape-Nuts advertised, but did not believe what I read at the time. At last when it seemed as if I was literally starving, I began to eat Grape-Nuts.

"I had not been able to work for a year, but now after two months on Grape-Nuts I am eager to be at work again. My stomach gives me no trouble now, my nerves are steady as ever, and interest in life and ambition have come back with the return to health."

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

TWO WORLD FAMED GRANNIES

One of These Talented Women Is Sarah Bernhardt and the Other Ellen Terry.

Two famous grandmothers are distinguished visitors of this country. Referring to these talented ladies The Rochester Post Express says: "One of the grandmothers is Mme. Sarah Bernhardt; the other is Ellen Terry. Both actresses have reached an age when it is permissible to retire from active life, but the French actress is said to be as energetic as a woman half her age, while Ellen Terry is declared to be as young as ever she was in the palmy days when she and Henry Irving ruled the theatrical world of England. Miss Terry has retired from the stage so far as acting is concerned, and has taken to lecturing on Shakespeare's heroines. And who could do better than she who has played so many of the womanly women of the great dramatist? Readers of her breezy biography know what she thinks of Portia, Beatrice, Viola, Rosalind and other famous women of the tragedies and comedies, but no printed page could charm as does the wonderfully expressive features and the velvet voice of the greatest living English-speaking actress."

Why Do They.

Why women like the baldheaded man it is somewhat difficult to define. It may be because he appears to be:

Thoughtful and kind.

Trustworthy and confiding. Whimsical. Past the follies and frivolities of youth.

Usually successful.

A man of property.

He is not silly like young men.

He accepts refusals of marriage so nicely that one is sorry one did not accept him.

The bald patch looks so clean and nice. One would like to kiss it.

A doctor welcomes baldness when it comes to him, as it is a sign of sedateness and dignified learning, which invariably increases his practise.

Literary Accuracy.

"You write of your hero as stealing home in the darkness," said the editor.

"Yes," replied the author.

"Well, you ought to know better than that. He couldn't steal home in the dark. If it was dark enough to be worth noticing the game would have been called."

Which Is the Star?

"It might be a good idea."

"But there are factions. We can't decide whether to feature the minister or the soprano of the choir.

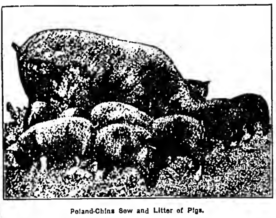
NECESSITY FOR PROVIDING PIGS COMFORTABLE QUARTERS

Many Things of Vital Importance in Making Hog Business Entirely Profitable—Must Have Proper Shelter With Exercise.



Poland-China Sow and Litter of Pigs.

(By W. H. UNDERWOOD.)

In raising pigs there are several things, very essential, which are difficult to secure in the right degree in the winter time, and which sometimes make the winter litter rather costly.

Hogs are great lovers of warmth and they must have it for their economical growth. This has been fully demonstrated by the experiment stations in the different fattening trials. The cost of the grain in several instances was almost double with outside feeding as compared with a warm shelter, all other things being as nearly equal as was possible.

Warmth is even more of a necessity to the suckling pig, and to obtain that warmth and give the little fellow sufficient amount of exercise is where the difficulty comes in.

It is an easy matter to make the bed warm enough, but as soon as the pig leaves the nest for exercise out in the open, it becomes chilly and soon returns to the warm bed. Not taking exercise sufficient to keep it from becoming too fat, thumps follow and death ensues. An abundance of exercise is necessary to avoid the thumps in young pigs when they are getting all the milk and other foods they can eat.

In raising winter pigs there are six really very important things to be taken into consideration: Warmth, exercise, good feed, ventilated quarters, sunshine and good blood.

In order to have these a warm and quite roomy building, which will make ventilation easier and allow the pigs to play without going out in the open is necessary. When the weather is sufficiently warm they should be out of doors as much as possible, especially when the sun shines. Plenty of sunshine is the greatest disinfectant and invigorator known.

Some years ago I had a couple of litters come early in the winter. The weather was very cold and for want of a better place to keep them than the one in which they were farrowed, I penned up a little corner of the cow stable in which were kept at night 30 head of cattle. The building was 35 by 50 feet, and when closed at night with the cattle in it was quite comfortable. This proved to be almost an ideal place for the pigs.

They were given fresh bedding every night and a fresh supply of bedding put in every day. Those pigs grew exceedingly fast.

Under ordinary farm conditions it is a doubtful proposition to attempt to raise many winter pigs with good results, but under special conditions a few litters may be made profitable. The greatest obstacle is to provide enough warm space for the pigs to run about freely without becoming chilled for lack of sufficient sunshine.

Scours and thumps often cause very serious losses among young pigs. The former is caused usually by over-feeding, by providing badly spoiled feed, by an abrupt change of ration or by a change in feed that affects the milk of the dam. The latter is generally brought about by over-feeding and lack of exercise.

RAISING FUEL FOR HOUSEHOLD

Systematic Planting and Cultivation of Forest Trees Is Branch of Agriculture Yet in Infancy.

(By R. B. BUCKHAM, Salem, Mass.)

A very small acreage of woodland, if properly handled, can be made to yield the necessary fuel for the household, from year to year, and yet maintain an average growth, or even increase in value.

The tree growth of the woodlot should be encouraged in every possible way. All dead wood should be conscientiously removed and added to the woodpile. It will serve well as excellent kindling, at least, and does away with one of the chief sources of disease among growing wood. It has been proven that a very large percentage of all the ailments of forest trees arises from the decaying deadwood lying about them.

Thinning correctly is a second requisite to making the woodlot most profitable. Where the standing growth is too close, all are compelled to suffer for the lack of air and light. Hence some can well be removed, to the benefit of the remainder.

Where an area of any dimensions has been laid bare, it should be reseeded immediately, if the second growth does not start satisfactorily. It is as poor economy to allow parts of the woodlot to lie idle, as any other portion of the farm.

The increase of the more valuable trees should be encouraged, such as the oak, pine, hickory and ash. Some trees are of no value, save as stove wood, and are poor, even at that. Yet, strange enough, at the start they are the most vigorous, and always succeed at making the most rapid growth at the start; thus holding their own at the expense of their competitors. There are weeds among trees, as well as among plants.

Forest tracts are indispensable to the welfare and best interests of the community. We cannot well do without them, because of their salubrious influence upon the climate, their conservation of the supply of moisture, and their value for purifying the atmosphere, to say nothing of their commercial value.

We must look to the farmer for the presence of the necessary amount of forest trees. Upon them will fall the burden of bearing this responsibility.

But that they will profit largely therefrom is well illustrated by the fact that the artificial timber tracts which already exist in what was formerly the great, bare, wind-swept western plains, are already of incalculable value.

Systematic planting and cultivation of forest trees is a branch of agriculture yet in its infancy, but one which will prove exceedingly important before the history of this country shall have been written.

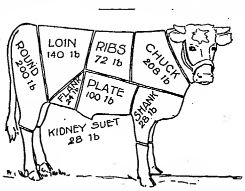
Benefit Land and Renter.

The renting of land on short leases, according to W. J. Spillman, agriculturist in charge of farm management, bureau of plant industry, Washington, for the purpose of growing grain for market, is one of the surest means of reducing the productive power of the soil; but the domestic animal, with well-managed pastures and rational systems of crop rotation, is preeminently adapted to the development of permanent systems of profitable farming. Landowners must take steps to improve renting methods by stocking farms with a full complement of domestic animals, and by giving longer leases, whereby the renter may reap the reward of intelligent management.

Sheep Raising.

The sheep business shows more stability in the face of low mutton prices and a dull wool trade than it ever did before. A lot of people have found out that sheep are good to stick to.

STEER OF PROFITABLE FORM



This steer weighed 1,300 pounds alive and 800 pounds dressed. This makes his dressing percentage 62. He is an example of the most profitable steer to feed, says Farm and Home. Note the broad head, straight, level back and deep flank.

BENEATH BIG BEECH

Liberty Church Neighborhood Not Only Marriage Center, but Its People Consider It a Youthful Misfortune to Die Under Seventy.

Gosport, Ind.—There has been discovered a remedy for the divorce evil. It is a simple but sure cure. Let the Rev. Josiah Burton, a rural dominie, living four miles east of Gosport, tie the matrimonial knot beneath the boughs of "Cupid's Beech." Then, if his record holds, all divorce laws may be eliminated from the statutes and no one need go singing: "I'm On My Way to Reno." It is the Rev. Josiah Burton's proud boast that no divorce court has ever severed a tie he bound.

The Rev. Josiah Burton has three altars of matrimony—his little church across the fields, his home and—most romantic of all—a grand old beech tree that has been popularly christened "Cupid's Beech" because of the marriage ceremonies performed beneath its boughs. The tree stands at the corner of the fence that surrounds the old minister's home and no marriage ever solemnized in its shade has ever been shattered by a divorce court.

The Rev. Josiah Burton is an interesting man in an interesting locality. Not only do his matrimonial knots stay tied, but there seems to be some good angel hovering over the hills in which he dwells whose mission is to grant happy old age to all who find a home there. To die under 80 in the vicinity of "Cupid's Beech" is looked upon as passing away in infancy.

In the early part of the last century there moved into the hills of Owen and Monroe counties many men and women of a sturdy type from Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee and the Carolinas. Among those who came was John Burton, the father of Josiah. In the year 1818 he settled on a tract of ground four miles east of Gosport in a section now known as Liberty Church neighborhood. The country was then sparsely settled and there were only mere bridle paths leading to the few settlements.

Cupid's Beech.

By 1830 the country had become a little more populous and there was talk of establishing a church. There were many denominations in the neighborhood, and it was finally decided to build a church that should be non-denominational, but with leanings toward the Methodist Protestant creed. John Burton gave enough ground for the building of a church, and another member of the new organization donated ground for a cemetery adjoining the church.

On the morning of September 23, 1331, a company of neighbors gathered at the spot given by John Burton as a church site. Each carried a broadax. The men were divided into two squads. They then went into the forest in search of yellow poplar trees. The giants of the wilderness began to fall and soon the brethren were hewing the trees with that expert swing known only to the pioneers.

When dinner time came the church builders sat down to a meal such as only old-fashioned cooks could cook. All of the food and the dishes were carried to the place by a 10-year-old boy. That boy was Josiah Burton, and the church was started on his tenth birthday.

Liberty Church is an interesting type of the old-fashioned meeting house. It is a plain room with plain, old-fashioned pews. The pulpit was made by a local carpenter and the choir and organ have a slightly elevated platform to the left of the minister.

If there is one thing that makes the aged minister who presides at Liberty Church happy it is a wedding. He doesn't know how many couples he has united in marriage, but he has yet to hear of one of them being broken by a divorce decree. Uncle Josiah takes supreme delight in having some couple drive up to the door and call him out to tie the nuptial knot. It is then that he dons his Prince Albert and white cravat and puts on his most responsible air. In recent years he has had numerous calls for weddings in the shade of "Cupid's Beech." "Providence seems to favor all who are married beneath that tree," says the minister. "So come ye!"

Guillotine for China.

Paris.—China has received from France its first guillotine. It will be set up inside the new prison, as, according to recent regulations, executions will no longer be public. The penalty of death, as laid down in the old code, had six degrees—death by torture, immediate decapitation and exhibition of the head, immediate decapitation without exhibition of the head, decapitation after some months, immediate hanging and hanging after some months. According to the new code, the death penalty is four degrees—immediate decapitation, deferred decapitation, immediate hanging and deferred hanging.

THRESHING RETURNS FROM WESTERN CANADA.

They Reveal Larger Averages of Wheat and Oats Than Anticipated.

The returns from the grain fields of Western Canada as revealed by the work of the Threshers, show much larger yields than were expected as the crop was ripening. It is a little early yet to give an estimate of the crop as a whole, but individual yields selected from various points throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta show that the farmers there as a rule have had reason to be thankful over the results. Excellent yields are reported from many portions of Manitoba and a large district of Saskatchewan has turned out well, while the central portion of Alberta is splendid. There will be shown at the land exposition at St. Louis a sample of the Marque's wheat—a new variety and one that appears to be well adapted to the soil and climate of Western Canada—that yielded 53 bushels to the acre. The exhibit and statement will be supported by affidavits from the growers. This wheat weighs well, and being a hard variety will find a ready market at the highest prices obtainable for a first-class article. It is interesting to point out that a field of one hundred acres of this wheat would give its producers 5,300 bushels. Sold at 85 cents a bushel would give him $45 an acre. Counting all the cost of interest on land at $20 an acre, getting the land ready for crop. Seed sowing, harvesting and marketing, the entire cost of production would not exceed $8 an acre, leaving the handsome net profit of $37 an acre. Is there any crop that would yield a better return than this, with the same labor and initial expense? Cotton fields will not do it, apple orchards with their great expense of cultivation and the risk to run from the various enemies of the fruit cannot begin to do it. While what is considered an exceptional case just now is presented, there is no doubt that this man's experience may be duplicated by others who care to follow his example. As has been said the growing of this wheat is but in its infancy, and wheat growing is still largely confined to other older varieties that do not yield as abundantly. Even with these we have records before us of farmers who have grown 40 bushels to the acre, others 35, some 30, and others again 25 bushels. Taking even 20 bushels, and some farmers report that amount, it is found that the returns from such a yield would be $17 an acre. This wheat will cost to get to market, including all expenses, about $8 an acre, and the farmers will still have a net profit of about $9 an acre. Certainly the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are progressing, settlement is increasing and there is a general contentment all over the country. The social conditions are splendid, the climate is excellent, and there is every condition to make the settler satisfied. At the farming congress, held at Spokane in October, wheat shown by the Alberta Government, took the silver cup, awarded by the Governor of the State. It completely outclassed all other specimens on exhibition, and it was but an ordinary selection, hundreds of fields in Alberta and Saskatchewan being able to duplicate it. There are still available thousands of homesteads, as well as large areas of first-class land—that is being offered for sale at low prices. The agent of the Canadian Government from whom the above facts have been learned expects that the rush to Canada will next year largely exceed the numbers who have gone this year.

Russia's Growing Population.

This year's census of the Russian empire adds another five millions to the population as enumerated in 1908. The czar's subjects now number 160,000,000 and increase every year by 2,500,000 despite wars, epidemics and internal disturbances. As there is no lack of cultivated soil in Russia there seems no reason why this big annual increase should not continue.

SAVED OLD LADY'S HAIR

"My mother used to have a very bad humor on her head which the doctors called an eczema, and for it I had two different doctors. Her head was very sore and her hair nearly all fell out in spite of what they both did. One day her niece came in and they were speaking of how her hair was falling out and the doctors did it no good. She says, 'Aunt, why don't you try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment?' Mother did and they helped her. In six months' time the itching, burning and scalding of her head was over and her hair began growing. Today she feels much in debt to Cuticura Soap and Ointment for the fine head of hair she has for an old lady of seventy-four.

"My own case was an eczema in my feet. As soon as the cold weather came my feet would itch and burn and then they would crack open and bleed. Then I thought I would flee to my mother's friends, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I did for four or five winters, and now my feet are as smooth as any one's. Ellsworth Dunham, Hiram, Me., Sept. 30, 1909."

TERREBONNE STAR ROUTE DISCONTINUED

Change in Delivery Service is General—Rural Carrier Will Take Pouch.

A year ago the fiscal records of the postal service disclosed a deficit of seventeen and a half million dollars, the largest in the history of the country. In the space of twelve months a reduction of eleven and a half millions has been made in this deficit.

The cut in the deficit is remarkable as being several times larger than any reduction accomplished in a previous year. The policy of the present postmaster-general has been to reduce as far as possible the rate of expenditure by cutting out wasteful processes. One of the heavy losses to the department is that made by excessive cost caused by the rural delivery. Because of the fact that this expenditure is made in the interests of a vast population the advantages of rural deliveries are such as to warrant its further extention even at a considerable loss to the government.

An effort to reduce the cost of rural delivery has been made the past year by consolidating the star routes and rural delivery systems. These two systems have provided practically the same kind of mail delivery and duplication of services the star route service has been discontinued.

Pursuant to orders issued Dec. 22 by the postmaster-general the star route running between Terrebonne and Red Lake Falls will be discontinued from Dec. 31, 1910. Commencing Jan. 1st rural carrier No. 1 will leave Red Lake Falls at 11 a.m. carrying a closed pouch to and from the Terrebone post-office and return at 6:30 p. m. Rural route No. 1 has been changed as per the following description:

Effective January 1, 1911.

Beginning at the Post Office on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, the carrier will go thence south to center of section 27, 1 mile, west to east line section 28 ½ mile, south to southeast corner section 9, 3½ miles, east to southeast corner section 11, 2 miles, south to southeast corner section 14, 1 mile, east to southeast corner section 17 3 miles, north to southeast corner section 8, 1 mile, east to southeast corner section 10, 2 miles, north to southeast corner section 3, 1 mile, east ¼ and north ¼ to Terrebonne, 1 mile, south, retrace ¼ miles, west to southeast corner section 4, 1¼ miles, north to southeast corner section 33, 1 mile, west to southeast corner section 32, 1 mile, south to southeast corner section 5, 1 mile, west to southeast corner section 1, 2 miles, north to southeast corner section 36, 1 mile, west to center south line section 35, 1½ miles, north to center south line section 26, 1 mile, west ½ north ½ and west ½, 1½ miles, north to Red Lake Falls post office, 1 mile.

Length of route, 29 miles.

Effective January 1, 1911.

Beginning at the Post Office on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, the carrier will go thence, north crossing river and east to west line of section 24, 2 miles, south to southeast corner section 23, ½ mile, east to center south line section 23, 5½ miles, south passing Terrebonne to south line of section 2, 3¼ miles, west to southeast corner of section 4, 1¼, north to southeast corner of section 33, 1 mile, west to southeast corner section 32, 1 mile, south to southeast corner section 17, 3 miles, west to southeast corner section 14, 3 miles, north to southeast corner section 11, 1 mile, east to southeast corner section 12, 1 mile, north to southeast corner section 36, 2 miles, west to center south line section 35, 1½ miles, north to center south line section 26, 1 mile, west ½, north ½ and west ½, 1½ miles, north to Red Lake Falls post office, 1 mile.

Length of route, 29½.

It will be necessary for the patrons to relocate their boxes, and additional boxes, which conform to requirements of the department, may be erected at any point along the route. Rural route No. 1 is maintained at a cost of $900 a year and has never been self sustaining. The star route to and from Terrebonne has cost the department $850 a year. By consolidating the two the expenditure will be reduced $580 and service will be given to an equal number of people.

PIANO AT SUNSHINE

Grand Prize in the Gazette's Big Voting Contest is on Display.

The piano, the grand prize offered in the Gazette voting contest, is now on display at the Sunshine Store, one door south of the post office. The contestants or any of their friends are invited to call at the store and look at the piano and play on it if they desire to do so. Mr. Christensen, proprietor of the Sunshine, will have possession of the piano until the announcement of the winner of the prize is made.

CREATED QUITE A COMMOTION

St. Paul, Dec. 26.—The governor may well be pardoned for being surprised when he saw, on his return to St. Paul the other day, the mountain of rumors and conjecture into which the molehill of a few casual words let drop at Washington had grown. Exactly what the governor had said he might readily have forgotten, but even the faint suggestion that he was charmed with Washington and enjoyed his visit there appears to have been ground enough to set the tongues of the gossips wagging. They at once jumped to the conclusion that he had cast a covetous eye at General Clapp's seat in the United States senate. On this word reaching St. Paul the fat was in the fire for fair.

That there are those in this state, as at Washington, who would welcome Senator Clapp's retirement and would be only too ready to aid in it can readily be understood. It is no news to anyone that there are two factions among the political leaders struggling for the control of the organization of the Republican party. Indeed it goes deeper than that and has its origin in separate schools of political thought. Progressive Republicanism is in reality liberalism tinged with radicalism. The standpatters or reactionaries, as they are variously called by their opponents, are really conservatives who believe in maintaining an existing order of things under which the United States has made unexampled progress. It may readily be admitted that in connection with this old order of things subjects of criticism have arisen, and that there are arguments which should be given weight in favor of the reforms which progressive Republicans advocate. At all events they have impressed Senator Clapp and he has become one of the leaders of the new propaganda, with the natural result that his retirement would be welcomed by politicians of the older school, among whom the majority of the leaders in both houses of congress and their followers throughout the nation are numbered. In this state many representative Republicans have cast their lot with them.

✣ ✣ ✣

It is, therefore, not surprising, notwithstanding Senator Clapp's unanimous endorsement by the Republican state convention and notwithstanding that many of the members of the state legislature, both Republican and Democratic, are pledged to his support, that there are those who would welcome any candidacy which would give promise of an active campaign against him and are eager to take part in it. Immediately, therefore, on the rumor reaching here that Governor Eberhart had senatorial ambitions they hauled themselves in magnifying them. The hotel lobbies and the state capitol fairly buzzed with conjectures. The names of other men supposed to be in line for the senatorial succession were in everyone's mouth. It was at once apparent that some of these had long had their ears to the ground and were already in waiting for some such opening as the governor's supposed candidacy offered. Prominent among those who had their finger upon the public pulse were Frank Kellogg's friends. His name was at once brought up. Other senatorial timber was dragged out. The names of Senator Stephens, of Congressman Tawney, of Lieutenant Governor Smith, of Charles A. Congdon of Duluth and others were canvassed pro and con and conjecture was rife with the possible shape the campaign might take and with the anticipated action of the legislature in the event of a real contest. It was for a day or two a very pretty tempest in a teapot, and a time for the blowing of a lot of quite attractive political soap bubbles.

✣ ✣ ✣

The governor's real mission to Washington is believed to have been in connection with "the lid" in Northern Minnesota. As nearly as can be learned his contention is that it should be applied only in territory immediately adjacent to Indian settlements or reservations. This is in line with the decision of Judge Amidon of the circuit court of the United States, rendered subsequent to the governor's visit, who holds that the treaty is not operative in districts like Browns Valley. There are no Indians there, he contends, with whom traffic in intoxicating drinks can be carried on and therefore the whole basis of federal authority over commerce in intoxicating liquors is wanting.

The good roads convention held here a few days ago brought to the city many who were interested in this reform. It afforded an unusual opportunity for those who had made good roads a study to get together to consult as to the best methods of improving the state highways. In this connection it will perhaps be interesting to outline the principal provisions of the bill which R. C. Dunn will take an early opportunity to introduce in the house. His scheme for good roads involves the appointment of experienced road builders or engineers by the state, whose salaries are to be paid out of the state treasury. For road purposes he proposes to divide the state into districts, the districts to comprise generally two counties, though when the county is large one engineer will be assigned it. Thus Steele and Dodge counties might comprise one district, and Mower and Olmsted another, while a county like St. Louis or Beltrami would be a district by itself.

✣ ✣ ✣

For each of these districts a road engineer would be appointed. The modus operandi would be something like this: Suppose the county commissioners of any county designed to improve a piece of road or lay out a new one, they might send for the engineer, lay their plans before him or ask his aid in preparing them. They would have the benefit of his experience and advice only. It would not be for him to dictate. They would be the final judges in the matter. Suppose them to have reached a decision as to the details of the work they wanted to do, the contract would then be let. The engineer would exercise a general supervision over the work, report the matter to the commissioners if it was not being done properly or according to contract and they might order such changes made as they thought proper. Finally when the work was completed the engineer would certify to the fact and on his certificate the contractor would be paid. The services of the government engineer would be equally at the disposal of the township board or of the village authorities as of the county commissioners. Civil service rules would apply to the appointment of road engineers. Only men of proved capacity could be appointed and they would be removable only for cause.

It is Mr. Dunn's opinion that the services of a sufficient corps of road

A Mystery Play of the Nativity

It was early morning of the sixteenth of December, in the year of our Lord 1473. There was a sprightly freshness in the air, yet a touch of ardor, too, for France, even in its northern parts, as in the neighborhood of Rouen, where this scene is laid, is favored with sunshine and pleasant warm breezes until the early months of the new year. Shops were closed, the tools of the mason and the shoemaker and the carpenter lay where they had fallen from the hand of the owner or where they had been put the night before. But every square of Rouen all the way from the massive portal of the cathedral to the cloisters of St. Maclou was thronged, and every window threatened to burst outward from the press of heads and shoulders seeking a point of vantage. In the streets the royal archers had difficulty in keeping a little way clear, and were forced often to threaten and sometimes to prod into order the crowding masses. Something of unusual nature was evidently toward.

Promptly at eight o'clock a herald stepped from the arch of the cathedral and sounded long and loudly on his trumpet. For some moments he remained standing there, as though waiting for a signal from behind. Then he began slowly to pace forward. With a grotesque caper another figure sprang into life from the darkness of the archway. On its head were horns, in its hand it carried a horrid spear, in the girdle at its waist hung smoking firebrands, and sharp implements like the tools of a tinsmith, while its entire body was covered with long hair, and hideous talons armed its long black fingers. No doubt of its identity could be left: it was Lucifer. Rapidly others of his band emerged and surrounded him, merry devils playing pranks, raging devils with forked tongues, serene devils disguised as vintagers, as artisans, as magistrates, yet all displaying in some fashion the cloven hoof or spiked tail. Close pressing on the heels of this boisterous crew came a long bearded patriarch, mounted on an ass. From time to time a celestial figure clothed in white, bearing a shining long sword, stepped from beside him and blocked the way. The chronicles of the time fail to mention whether the ass spoke or not, but the spectacle made it plain beyond peradventure to every onlooker that this was Balaam who was riding in review before them.

After Balaam came other of the prophets, David, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel and the Sibyl. These were they who had foretold the coming of the Messiah. Shepherds followed them, playing upon bagpipes and singing lustily:

> "Doune from heaven, from heaven so hie,
> Of angels there came a great companie,
> With mirthe and joy and great solemnitye
> They sange terly, terlow:
> So merell the sheppards ther pipes can > blow."

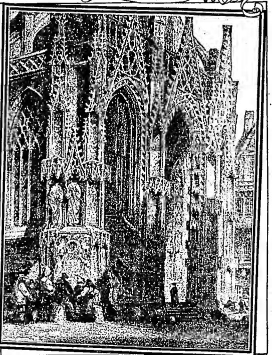
Queerest of all was the manner in which these various personages were accoutered. Balaam wore a flowing gown of richest silk, borrowed from the bishop. On his feet were long pointed-toed shoes of doeskin, turned up and fastened to the knees with fine chains. His neck was encircled with a piece of costly lace, and to give a touch of the Oriental, a turban was wound about his fifteenth-century hat; and about the turban was festooned a necklace borrowed for the occasion from the goodwife.



PORTAL OF ROUEN CATHEDRAL

AN ENTR'ACTE FOR DINNER DURING THE TWO DAYS PLAY

The shepherds were attired quite as sumptuously. They wore slashed doublets and gorgeous colored trunks, and the pipes upon which they played were of the latest fashion in French instrumentation. But the magi, who journeyed in the shepherds' company, far outshone their pastoral companions. Beneath their gowns they gleamed resplendent in bright armor. From top to toe were they encased in mail, and, since they could find no camels in Rouen, they rode on donkeys, that groaned beneath the burden. Each magus was accompanied by a page.

And so the procession wound on and on out of the portal of the cathedral of Rouen. Joseph and Mary, the surly innkeeper bearing a lantern, to designate that his part was played in the night, King Herod, the Roman emperor, and lastly God the Father, God the Son and a numerous band of angels, who distributed amongst themselves the costliest of the albs, stoles, dalmaticas and copes loaned for the occasion by the clergy of the cathedral and the cloister of St. Maclou. Seventy-eight of these principal actors there were in this procession, and their attendant squires and the lesser figures in the drama numbered a hundred and fifty more. By the time they had passed from out the cathedral and arrived at the cloister it was well on the way toward noon of this sixteenth of December, 1473.

At intervals during the course of the parade the crier who headed it stopped and blew a prolonged blast. The procession halted, and from its midst emerged a long-visaged man in the dress of a university doctor. In his hand he held a fat scroll. Waving this aloft, he made proclamation:

> "Silete! silete! Silentium habeatis, > Et per Dei filium, pacem faciatis."

And when he had finished his peroration in Latin he announced in the vernacular the purport of the celebration. It was to be a great mystery play in honor of the nativity of the Savior, "Incarnacion et nativite de nostre saulveur et redempteur Jesuchrist." The sheriffs of the town, the clergy of the cathedral and St. Maclou, many of the rich burghers and the bishop himself had given of their time and money without stint, in order that the dear townspeople might refresh their souls with a spectacle of holy events. And he, the doctor, had composed a mystery play of some 10,000 verses, and had rehearsed the actors in their parts, so that all was in readiness. On the morning of the twenty-fourth the play would begin, in the market place of the city, and by the grace of God it would be finished by evening of the day following. Let all attend! The crier then made proclamation for the mayor that all shops save those of the victualers should be closed on those two days. Citizens need have no fear of leaving their houses unguarded, for special troops of the archers would patrol the city, and furthermore the gates of the town would be closed against either ingress or egress. Let all attend!

Now let us turn our attention to the market place. It is a large square in the center of Rouen, into which the principal thoroughfares of the city debouch. On all of its four sides is confusion. Along one entire dimension is being erected a row of private boxes for the mayor and other dignitaries of the town, and for such of the clergy as are not impersonating parts in the mystery. The two abutting sides are given over to the victualers, whose booths will feed the hungry throngs during the entr'actes of the play. And the fourth side, that facing the private boxes, is allotted for the stage. In all, this structure compasses some 10,000 square feet; but this small space for the time represents two countries, Palestine and Italy—to say nothing of two realms not to be located with so much geographical certainty—paradise and hell.

On its extreme left is Nazareth, and the house of Joseph and Mary. In fact, the house is all there is to the town, except a sign board inscribed with the name of the place. Next is Bethlehem, typified by an inn and a stable, and just beyond Bethlehem lies a "mansion," or curtained-off square. At the appropriate moment the screen here will be withdrawn, disclosing to the eyes of the onlookers the band of shepherds, watching their flocks by night, and incidentally making the welkin ring with the sound of song and shrilling of the pipes. The field of the shepherds lies betwixt Bethlehem and Jerusalem, that is to say, betwixt the inn and stable and the house of Herod, which stands for the holy city. The next few feet leap oceans, for at the side of Herod's house stands the temple of Apollo in Rome, the chamber of the Roman emperor and the capitol, besides the haunt of the Sibyl, that strange figure of medieval church lore, who, pagan though she was, ranked with the Hebrew prophets, and was celebrated in the greatest of church songs, the "Dies Irae," along with David:

> "Dies Irae, dies illa,
> Teste David cum Sibylla."

Adjoining the house of the Sibyl is limbo. So close are they that during the course of the play their inmates can reach across the intervening space and exchange the courtesy of a sip of wine from the flask. Limbo is merely a square tower, with a front strongly grated. It serves to hold the materialized souls of such of the worthy departed as dwelt on earth during the old dispensation. Here will reside, during the two days of the representation, the prophets, the patriarchs and a select few of the pagans. Their lot is not an unhappy one—they live only in unsatisfied hope. They may well be content with their fate when they look upon their neighbors to the right, at the end of the row of spectacles. For here is hell-mouth. Of all the grotesque and impressive spectacles of the mystery play, hell-mouth took precedence. The most skillful carpenters and mechanicians were employed in its fabrication, and the art of the most expensive painter was none too good for its adornment. When completed, hell-mouth stood 12 or 15 feet high, and as many broad, grinning like the head of St. George's dragon. Its jaws opened cavernously when proper levers were put in operation at the back, and from its eyes and throat issued flames and gusts of smoke, from braziers filled with pitch and blown upon with bellows. Through this smoke sallied out the devil and his aides, to drag in the souls of the lost; and the agonized screams of the damned, punctuated by the roar of cannon, the crashing of stones in the thunder barrel and the shrieking of pipes, was calculated to instill into the most obdurate heart a wholesome fear of what the hereafter might have in store for the unrepentent.

The final spectacle of the stage the carpenters were erecting was paradise. High placed above everything else, it dominated all the scene. Its occupants, God the Father, God the Son and the blessed angels, were hoisted up into it by mechanical lifts, and when the angels wished to descend, as for instance on the night of the nativity, over the fields near Bethlehem, they did so suspended on ropes. It was hard being God or an angel, for there was little chance to get down and stretch one's legs. With these heavenly characters abode four others—Peace, Mercy, Justice and Truth, in imitation of Aristotle's four cardinal virtues.

Such were, in the main, the "mansions" and the characters for which the carpenters had to provide, and the eight days succeeding the "monstre" or grand parade were especially busy ones for these artisans.

Early on the morning of December 24 the long-awaited representation began. The vast market place was thronged. Every box was filled with the gentry; the roped-in space in front, out to within some yards of the stage front, had been covered thickly with straw, and here on the ground sat thousands, while the open stretch immediately in front of and rather below the level of the stage was filled with crowds standing back and forth. Altogether it was a glorious and eager gathering.

The learned doctor whose midnight toil had prepared the doggerel, and whose weeks of labor had rehearsed the players in their parts, appeared first in a short prologue. After exhorting his listeners to silence, he described for them briefly the substance of what was about to be presented on the stage, and admonished them to take to heart the lessons of the mystery. As he retired to a convenient angle of the wall of Herod's house, whence he might advantageously be in position for prompting the actors, a deep lamentation broke out within hell. It was Adam grieving over the sad and fallen state of man.

Thus the play goes on for two days, passing now to limbo, whence the prophets issue to foretell to mankind the coming salvation, to Nazareth, to Bethlehem and throughout the whole cycle of the nativity. When Christ is born in Bethlehem, hell redoubles its efforts, and Lucifer rolls about the stage in a mighty orgy of blind fury. The images of the idols in the temple at Rome fall crashing from their pedestals, and, high above all, the angels in paradise, or hovering on their ropes above the fields of Palestine, chant majestically the praises of the Creator and proclaim the "Pax in terris."

Curious is the final scene. It is placed in Rome, in the chamber of Augustus. The emperor, dressed like a French duke, is seated on a fancy chair loaned by the mayor of Rouen. Evidently he is ill at ease. He is reading a scroll of the Sibylline writings, wherein he finds a distinct prophecy to the effect that a Messiah is to be born in Palestine, in Bethlehem of Judea. More and more disturbed he becomes, and as he paces the floor of his chamber he recites his woes in doggerel French, accompanied by a wealth of gesticulations. The sun is already down beyond the gables to the west of the market place ere the monologue comes to an end. With a sudden inspiration, he falls to his knees and worships a figure of the virgin that miraculously appears on the wall. Satan and his crew give a final salvo, and the crowd rises stiffly to its feet and wends its way back to the homes and taverns of the city, much moved by the spectacle it has been a witness of for two whole days.

Some Stories About Misers

The other day an old woman in Plaistow, England, died of starvation. She had $750 in gold and notes in the house at the time, and was possessed of freehold property besides.

John Elwes, who lived—we can hardly say flourished—in the eighteenth century, was a typical instance of the miser, who prefers the means to the end. When he, possessed of a million of money, walked the streets of London, philanthropic people would sometimes thrust a penny into his hand, so beggarly and poverty-stricken was his appearance.

He would even eat food that was in the last stage of putrefaction sooner than throw it away.

One of the anecdotes told of him is rather pleasing. By an accident in the street he received an injury to both his legs and a doctor was called in. Elwes protested that the expense was quite unnecessary and that he was not much hurt. So he made an arrangement with the doctor. The doctor was to take one leg and treat it as he liked. Elwes would take the other and do nothing to it. And he would bet the doctor the amount of his bill that the untended leg got well first. He used to boast afterward that he beat the doctor by a fortnight. The curious old miser had a good deal of the gambler in him as well, and in one night he lost three thousand pounds at cards.

Hume tells of a miser who, on his deathbed, summoned the magistrates and said he would leave them one hundred pounds for charitable purposes. No sooner had they gone than he had them recalled to know if they would take five pounds off for ready money. Another miser meant to disappoint his natural heirs and leave his money to a hospital. But the hospital had to pay for the drawing-up of the will, as he would have died intestate sooner than face the expense himself.

GAS AND DYNAMITE EXPLODE IN POWER HOUSE—THIRTEEN KNOWN DEAD.

MANY PERSONS MISSING

Shock Wrecks Fire Station and Delayed Prompt Help—Trolley Car Filled With Students Blown From Track.

New York, Dec. 19.—At 3:20 this afternoon it was ascertained that thirteen persons lost their lives, fifty were injured and 1,000 people badly shaken up in the explosion of the car lighting gas tanks and dynamite in the new six-story power station of the New York Central railroad, under course of construction, at Fiftieth and Lexington avenues today.

Nine bodies have been recovered and the bodies of four workmen are believed to be in the wreckage. A trolley car filled with high school students was blown from the tracks on Lexington avenue. Four passengers were killed and others were injured. Fire Chief Crocker says that in his opinion the first explosion was that of lighting gas and the second explosion that of a hundred weight of dynamite which lay within fifty feet of the gas tank.

New York, Dec. 19.—Twelve persons were killed, two of them women, and thirty were injured in a double explosion of gas and dynamite in the new electric power house of the New York Central railroad shortly after 8 o'clock this morning.

The force of the explosion shattered hundreds of windows in the big hotels and apartment houses in the neighboring blocks near the big railroad terminal causing great alarm among the guests.

The dynamite blast picked up a northbound trolley car, lifted it into air and sent it crashing down upon an automobile which was passing along the other side of the street. Four of the passengers were killed and every one in the car was injured.

The railroad service was temporarily interrupted. The new sub-station power house, where the explosion occurred, is at Fiftieth street and Lexington avenue, which is half a dozen blocks north of the Grand Central station.

The shock which could be felt for many blocks partly wrecked a fire engine house nearby and prevented the firemen from getting their apparatus into the street.

The power house, which is built of stone and brick and six stories high caught fire after the explosion and the interior was practically burned out. Just what caused the double explosion probably may never be known.

Officials of the railroad learned that there were many workmen in the building at the time of the explosion and that very few of them had been accounted for. In a Bible Teachers Training school on Lexington avenue directly opposite the power house, 121 men and women who were on their way to breakfast were thrown to the floor by the blast. Many of the men and women were injured and several of them were taken to hospitals. All the windows in the building were blown in and the ceiling fell.

Raise Bond for Dietz.

La Crosse, Wis., Dec. 19.—As the result of personal solicitation of Miss Myra Dietz, daughter of John Dietz, the "outlaw of Cameron Dam," business men of Bangor, Wis. here today pledged themselves in writing to furnish $2,000 for her father's bail, enough to secure his freedom on the three remaining counts against him.

The bonds will be signed as soon as formally drafted. The signers are all village merchants who have enjoyed the hospitality of the Dietz family during the hunting season.

Looks Like Trouble.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 19.—The former United States gunboat Hornet, reported to have been purchased by Honduras revolutionists, cleared from here today at 12:30 this afternoon for Cape Gracias with a crew of twenty men, 200 tons of coal and provisions for thirty days. Included among the crew are several men who are said to have been connected with previous filibustering expeditions directed against the Central American republic.

Grand Forks Man Drops Dead.

New Parliament Unchanged.

London, Dec. 19.—New parliament is complete with exception of three seats which are being contested today. In only one of these constituencies, Wick-burghs, in Scotland, for which the sitting member, R. Munro, is a liberal, is there any possibility of a change, and so the house of commons will be made up of 272 or 273 unionists, 270 or 271 liberals, eighty-four Irish nationalists, and forty-three labor members.

Head Split While He Slept.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 19.—Francis Knifen was found dead in bed early today with his head split, at his home, 375 Lamay avenue. His widow, Nellie Knifen, who was arrested by the police, gave the neighbors their first report of the tragedy.

She said she was occupying a bedroom in another part of the house when she was awakened by her husband's groans and found him in a dying condition. A bloody axe was found in the wood shed. The widow positively denied that she knew anything about the murder.

Found Shot in His Wagon.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—John Donnelly, a driver for a garment factory here, today was shot and his wagon was riddled with bullets in the clothing factory district.

He lay suffering in his wagon while the horses, undirected, wandered around until the police discovered his plight. He is not expected to live.

The garment workers out on strike are suffering, in many instances refused to the police, from cold and hunger, and the employers have advised Mayor Busse that hereafter all negotiations will be made directly with the men —

[illegible] haven't heard the rest of [illegible]," I asked, holding out the [illegible]. It frightfully bad luck for [illegible] but it makes a good story. You [illegible]

[illegible] moment the conductor and [illegible] ended their colloquy. The conductor came directly toward me, tugging [illegible] at his bristling gray [illegible]

"I [illegible] like to talk to you in the [illegible]," he said to me, with a curious [illegible] at the young lady.

"[illegible]," I objected. "We [illegible] to get a cup of coffee and [illegible]. I'm as useful as you [illegible]."

"[illegible] and the breakfast will have [illegible]," he replied. "I won't keep [illegible]." There was a note of an[illegible] in his voice which I resented; [illegible] all the circumstances were [illegible]

"[illegible] have to defer that cup of [illegible]," I said to the girl; "[illegible]; there's breakfast [illegible]"

[illegible] end of the car, she stood [illegible] I felt rather than saw that [illegible]. I was surprised to [illegible] men gathered around [illegible] in which I had wakened, [illegible]. It had not yet been [illegible]

[illegible] along the aisle, I was [illegible] of a new expression on the [illegible] passengers. The tall woman [illegible] was searching my [illegible] narrowed eyes, while the [illegible] of the kindly heart [illegible] my gaze and pretended to [illegible] out of the window.

[illegible] pushed our way through the [illegible] I fancied that it closed around [illegible]. The conductor said [illegible] but led the way without ceremony to the side of the berth.

"What['s] the matter?" I inquired. I [illegible] puzzled but not apprehensive. "Have you [illegible] some of my things? I'd be [illegible] even for my shoes, these are [illegible] tight."

Nobody spoke, and I fell silent, too. [illegible] of the pillows had been turned over, and the under side of the white [illegible] was streaked with brownish [illegible]. I think it was a perceptible [illegible] before I realized that the stains [illegible] blood, and that the faces around [illegible] filled with suspicion and dis[illegible]

"Why, it—that looks like blood," I [illegible]ly. There was an incessant pounding in my ears, and the [illegible] voice came from far off.

"It is blood," he asserted grimly.

I looked around with a dizzy attempt at nonchalance. "Even if it is," I [illegible]strated, "surely you don't suppose for a moment that I know anything about it!"

The amateur detective elbowed his way in. He had a scrap of transparent paper in his hand, and a pencil.

"I would like permission to trace the stains," he began eagerly. "Also"—to me—"if you will kindly jab your finger with a pin—needle—anything—"

"If you don't keep out of this," the conductor said savagely, "I will do some jabbing myself. As for you, sir—" he turned to me. I was absolutely innocent, but I knew that I presented a typical picture of guilt; I was covered with cold sweat, and the pounding in my ears kept up dizzily. "As for you, sir—"

The irrepressible amateur detective made a quick pounce at the pillow and jerked back the cover. Before our incredulous eyes he drew out a narrow [illegible] dirk which had been buried to the small cross that served as a head.

There was a chorus of voices around, a quick surging forward of the crowd. So that was what had scratched my hand! I buried the wound in my coat pocket.

"Well," I said, trying to speak naturally, "doesn't that prove what I have been telling you? The man who committed the murder belonged to this berth, and made an exchange in some way after the crime. How do you know he didn't change the tags so I would come back to this berth?" This was an inspiration; I was pleased with it. "That's what he did, he changed the tags," I reiterated.

There was a murmur of assent [illegible]. The doctor, who was standing [illegible] me, put his hand on my [illegible]. "If this gentleman committed the crime, and I for one feel sure he did not, then who is the fellow who got away? And why did he go?"

"We have only one man's word for that," the conductor snarled. "I've traveled [illegible] in these cars myself, and no one ever changed berths with me."

Somebody on the edge of the group asserted that hereafter he would travel by daylight. I glanced up and caught the eye of the girl in blue.

"They are all mad," she said. Her tone was low, but I heard her distinctly. "Don't take them seriously enough to defend yourself."

"I am glad you think I didn't do it," I observed meekly, over the crowd. "Nothing else is of any importance."

The conductor had pulled out his note book again. "Your name, please," he said gruffly.

"Lawrence Blakeley, Washington."

"Your occupation?"

"Attorney. A member of the firm of Blakeley & McKnight."

"Mr. Blakeley, you say you have occupied the wrong berth and have been robbed. Do you know anything of the man who did it?"

"Only from what he left behind," I answered. "These clothes—"

"They fit you," he said with quick suspicion. "Isn't that rather a coincidence? You are a large man."

"Good heavens," I retorted, stung to fury, "do I look like a man who would wear this kind of a necktie? Do you suppose I carry purple and green barred silk handkerchiefs? Would any man in his senses wear a pair of shoes a full size too small?"

The conductor was inclined to hedge. "You will have to grant that I am in a peculiar position," he said. "I have only your word as to the exchange of berths, and you understand I am merely doing my duty. Are there any clews in the pockets?"

For the second time I emptied them of their contents, which he noted. "Is that all?" he finished. "There was nothing else?"

"Nothing."

"That's not all, sir," broke in the porter, stepping forward. "There was a small black satchel."

"That's so," I exclaimed. "I forgot the bag. I don't even know where it is."

The easily swayed crowd looked suspicious again. I've grown so accustomed to reading the faces of a jury, seeing them swing from doubt to belief, and back again to doubt, that I instinctively watch expressions. I saw that my forgetfulness had done me harm—that suspicion was roused again.

The bag was found a couple of seats away, under somebody's raincoat—another dubious circumstance. Was I hiding it? It was brought to the berth and placed beside the conductor, who opened it at once.

It contained the usual traveling impedimenta—change of linen, collars, handkerchiefs, a bronze-green scarf, and a safety razor. But the attention of the crowd riveted itself on a flat, Russia leather wallet, around which a heavy gum band was wrapped, and which bore in gilt letters the name "Simon Harrington."

"I Don't Want It," I Said.

CHAPTER VII.

A Fine Gold Chain.

The conductor held it out to me, his face sternly accusing.

"Is this another coincidence?" he asked. "Did the man who left you his clothes and the barred silk handkerchief and the tight shoes leave you the spoil of the murder?"

The men standing around had drawn off a little, and I saw the absolute futility of any remonstrance. Have you ever seen a fly, who, in these hygienic days, finding no cobwebs to entangle him, is caught in a sheet of fly paper, finds himself more and more mired, and is finally quiet with the sticky stillness of despair?

Well, I was the fly. I had seen too much of circumstantial evidence to have any belief that the establishing of my identity would weigh much against the other incriminating details. It meant imprisonment and trial, probably, with all the notoriety and loss of practice they would entail. A man thinks quickly at a time like that. All the probable consequences of the finding of that pocketbook flashed through my mind as I extended my hand to take it. Then I drew my arm back.

"I don't want it," I said. "Look inside. Maybe the other man took the money and left the wallet."

The conductor opened it, and again there was a curious surging forward of the crowd. To my intense disappointment the money was still there. I stood blankly miserable while it was counted out—five $100 bills, six twenties and some fives and ones that brought the total to $650.

The little man with the note-book insisted on taking the numbers of the notes, to the conductor's annoyance. It was immaterial to me: Small things had lost their power to irritate. I was seeing myself in the prisoner's box, going through all the nerve-racking routine of a trial for murder—the challenging of the jury, the endless cross-examinations, the alternate hope and fear. I believe I said before that I had no nerves, but for a few minutes that morning I was as near as a man ever comes to hysteria.

I folded my arms and gave myself a mental shake. I seemed to be the center of a hundred eyes, expressing every shade of doubt and distrust, but I tried not to flinch. Then some one created a diversion.

The amateur detective was busy again with the sealskin bag, investigating the make of the safety razor and the manufacturer's name on the bronze-green tie. Now, however, he paused and frowned, as though some pet theory had been upset.

Then from a corner of the bag he drew out and held up for our inspection some three inches of fine gold chain, one end of which was blackened and stained with blood!

The conductor held out his hand for it, but the little man was not ready to give it up. He turned to me.

"No chain at all," I said sulkily. "No jewelry of any kind, except plain gold buttons in the shirt I am wearing."

"Where are your glasses?" he threw at me suddenly; instinctively my hand went to my eyes. My glasses had been gone all morning, and I had not even noticed their absence. The little man smiled cynically and held out the chain.

"I must ask you to examine this," he insisted. "Isn't it a part of the fine gold chain you wear over your ear?"

I didn't want to touch the thing. The stain at the end made me shudder. But with a baker's dozen of suspicious eyes—well, we'll say 14—there were no one-eyed men—I took the fragment in the tips of my fingers and looked at it helplessly.

"Very fine chains are much alike," I managed to say. "For all I know, this may be mine, but I don't know how it got into that sealskin bag. I never saw the bag until this morning after daylight."

"He admits that he had the bag," somebody said behind me. "How did you guess that he wore glasses, anyhow?" to the amateur sleuth.

That gentleman cleared his throat. "There were two reasons," he said, "for suspecting it. When you see a man with the lines of his face drooping, a healthy individual with a pensive eye—suspect astigmatism. Besides, this gentleman has a pronounced line across the bridge of his nose and a mark on his ear from the chain."

After this remarkable exhibition of the theoretical as combined with the practical, he sank into a seat near by, and still holding the chain, sat with closed eyes and pursed lips. It was evident to all the car that the solution of the mystery was a question of moments. Once he bent forward eagerly and putting the chain on the window-sill, proceeded to go over it with a pocket magnifying glass, only to shake his head in disappointment. All the people around shook their heads, too, although they had not the slightest idea what it was about.

The pounding in my ears began again. The group around me seemed to be suddenly motionless in the very act of moving, as if a hypnotist had called "Rigid!" The girl in blue was looking at me, and above the din I thought she said she must speak to me—something vital. The pounding grew louder and merged into a scream. With a grinding and splintering the car rose under my feet. Then it fell away into darkness.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Second Section.

Have you ever been picked up out of your three-meals-a-day life, whirled around in a tornado of events, and landed in a situation so grotesque and yet so horrible that you laugh even while you are groaning, and straining at its hopelessness? McKnight says that is hysteria, and that no man worthy of the name ever admits to it.

Also, as McKnight says, it sounds like a tank drama. Just as the revolving saw is about to cut the hero into stove lengths, the second villain blows up the sawmill. The hero goes up through the roof and alights on the bank of a stream at the feet of his lady love, who is making daisy chains.

Nevertheless, when I was safely home again, with Mrs. Klopton brewing strange drinks that came in paper packets from the pharmacy, and that smelled to heaven, I remember staggering to the door and closing it, and then going back to bed and howling out the absurdity and the madness of the whole thing. And while I laughed my very soul was sick, for the girl was gone by that time, and I knew by all the loyalty that answers between men for honor that I would have to put her out of my mind.

And yet, all the night that followed, filled as it was with the shrieking demons of pain, I saw her as I had seen her last, in the queer hat with green ribbons. I told the doctor this, guardedly, the next morning, and he said it was the morphia, and that I was lucky not to have seen a row of devils with green tails.

I don't know anything about the wreck of September 9 last. You who swallowed the details with your coffee and digested the horrors with your chop, probably know a great deal more than I do. I remember very distinctly that the jumping and throbbing in my arm brought me back to a world that at first was nothing but sky, a heap of clouds that I thought hazily were the meringue on a blue charlotte russe. As the sense of hearing was slowly added to vision, I heard a woman near me sobbing that she had lost her hat pin, and she couldn't keep her hat on.

I think I dropped back into unconsciousness again, for the next thing I remember was of my blue patch of sky clouded with smoke, of a strange, roaring and crackling, of a rain of fiery sparks in my face and of somebody beating at me with feeble hands. I opened my eyes and closed them again: The girl in blue was bending over me. With that imperviousness to big things and keenness to small that is the first effect of shock, I tried to be facetious, when a spark stung my cheek.

"You will have to rouse yourself!" the girl was repeating desperately. "You've been in fire twice already." A piece of striped ticking floated slowly over my head. As the wind caught it its charring edges leaped into flame.

"Looks like a kite, doesn't it?" I remarked cheerfully. And then, as my arm gave an excruciating throb—"Jove, how my arm hurts!"

The girl bent over and spoke slowly, distinctly, as one might speak to a deaf person or a child.

"Listen, Mr. Blakeley," she said earnestly. "You must rouse yourself. There has been a terrible accident. The second section ran into us. The wreck is burning now, and if we don't move, we will catch fire. Do you hear?"

Would Not Live as Slaves

Incident of Sublime Heroism of Which the World Has Had Little Knowledge.

D. W. and A. S. Iddings, who have recently returned from a trip in the interests of Recreation through parts of Mexico little known to the outside world, obtained an interesting audience with the governor of Chiapas. In writing of this interview, in Recreation, they say:

It was from the governor's lips that we heard the story of the awful tragedy that followed the rebellion of the Chiapanecs after the first three years of Spanish rule, almost unmatched in the world's history and yet little known. The defeated Chiapanecs, facing a return to the Spanish bondage, rushed in a body from the City of Chiapa to the edge of a high cliff overhanging the Crijalva river, and, locked in close embrace, fathers, mothers and children cast themselves upon the rocks below or into the swift running stream. They preferred death at their own hands in this frightful manner to dishonor. Vainly the Spaniards strove to prevent the great city's complete depopulation, but of the multitude, variously estimated at from 50,000 to 100,000, scarce 2,000 souls were saved. This was in 1526.

CURIOUS FARM FACTS

Kansas City, Mo.—It sounded like a class in geography, but it wasn't. Four business men awaited the return of a fifth, who had gone to luncheon. On his desk lay a pamphlet entitled "Agricultural Graphics," recently issued by the government. One man picked it up.

"John," he said, as he glanced through the pamphlet, "what state in the union raises the most hay?"

"Kansas," promptly answered John, a K. U. graduate.

"Wrong, by several hundred miles. New York is the hay state. Now can any one in the class tell me which is the real corn state? You keep quiet, John, you're prejudiced."

John, the K. U. man, made another attempt.

"I'll bet I'm right on that," he said. "Kansas has it on them all for wheat. They teach us that when we learn to read and write."

"If it were Irish potatoes I would guess Ireland," the only bald-headed man in the office remarked. "You'll have to pass to the next, though on the sweet-potato question."

"If you guessed Ireland for Irish potatoes, you would be wrong even at that," the man with the book said. "Germany is the country which leads in Irish potatoes. New York raises more of them than any other state in this country. But to return to the original question—North Carolina produces the banner sweet-potato crops.

"The United States grows the most tobacco. Its annual crop is 698,000,000 pounds. British India is second, with 450,000,000 pounds, and the other countries are away down in the list."

"What country raises the most cotton?"

"The United States," was the answer of the whole group in one voice.

"Correct! You may all go to the head of the class."

"Now, what country leads in wheat?"

"The United States."

"The United States."

"Correct again. Really, I am surprised at your ability to answer these questions. What country leads in oats?"

"The United States."

"All correct once more. Now, how about cane sugar?"

The United States answer had become a habit and every one chorused: "The United States."

"Which leads me to say that you are unanimously wrong and don't know so much about these things after all," the leader said. "British India produces the most cane sugar, with an annual yield of 1,999,000 tons. The United States produces only 1,216,000 tons a year."

Real Scrublady is a Star

New York.—If the history of "The Bachelor Belles," the musical comedy at the Globe theater, is ever written its bright particular star will be, not Adeline Genee, Ruth Peebles, Eva Fallan nor Josie Sadler, but Mrs. Logan.

Until the other night Mrs. Logan was unknown to the world of footlight favorites, but she was one of the humble handmaids at its threshold. Her job was to scrub the marble pavements of the lobby and polish the brass railing in front of the box office. That task did not give Mrs. Logan much preferment, but it got her into rehearsals of the play.

The other day Julian Mitchell, the stage manager, was vainly trying to drill a proud chorus girl into the ways of a scrubwoman. But the chorus girl veneer would not come off.

Over and over again he put her through the paces of "The Girls I Used to Know," but the chorus girl could not shake off the accents of the lobster palace. It was then that Mrs. Logan saw her chance. She dropped her scrubbing brush into the pail and waited for Stage Manager Mitchell to draw near.

"If it plaze you," she said, in her best Irish brogue, "O'd loike a chance to play that part."

"What do you know about acting?" asked Mr. Mitchell.

It was Maggie Cline, who was a scrublady until Tony Pastor—rest his soul—gave her a chance, and then she got to be a genius. Hence Mr. Mitchell was impressed by the woman's earnestness and gave her a trial.

He found she had a good soprano voice. Her working clothes were a good enough costume. By the next afternoon she had learned the verse of the song, and that night she made her debut. She received so much applause that she had to sing her verse twice.

A reporter sent a message to Mrs. Logan, asking her full name and address.

"Tell him," she answered, "I'm not looking for publicity. Some day you'll see the name Genevieve St. Ruburn on the billboards and ashcans. That will be me."

Search For Hen's Secret

Electric Thermometer Is Placed in Nest to Ascertain Varying Temperatures in Hatching.

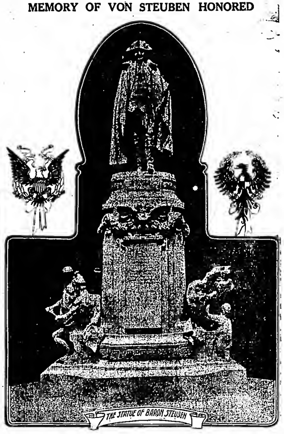
Bozeman, Mont.—Why hens are able to hatch out on the average a larger proportion of the eggs intrusted to them than the best patent incubators is something that no one knows at present, but Edmund Burke, chemist of the Montana experiment station, has been trying for some time to find out. It is known that the eggs under the sitting hen are not kept at a uniform temperature, but the exact amount and time of the variations are not known.

To help him in finding out these facts Professor Burke has just acquired a delicate and costly instrument which will work automatically, and in the form of written diagrams will answer such questions as to the variations in temperature in the hen's nest between day and night, between the beginning and end of the incubation period, in the absence of the hen from her nest, between the center and edge of the hen's nest, under hens of different breeds. This instrument is an electrically recording thermometer which can make a continuous written record, minute by minute, of the temperature during the whole incubation period of 21 days.

A platinum thermometer is placed in an artificial egg which is put with a setting of real eggs under a real hen. This thermometer is connected by a wire to the recording apparatus, where by the use of an electric current connected with clock work, written record of the variations in temperature is kept on a blank wrapped about a revolving cylinder. So minute and exact a record of these changes never before has been attempted.

The value of the experiment is in the light it may throw upon methods of handling artificial incubators, which in so many ways have the advantage over the hens.

MEMORY OF VON STEUBEN HONORED



WASHINGTON.—On Wednesday, December 7, more than one hundred years after his death, the United States honored the memory of Major-General Baron von Steuben, the drillmaster of Washington's army, by the unveiling of a granite statue in Lafayette Park, just across Pennsylvania avenue from the White House. President Taft delivered the principal address and Secretary of War Dickinson presided. More than 6,000 Germans and 4,000 men of the regular army and the District of Columbia National Guard participated in the parade. The statue of Von Steuben was designed and executed by Albert Jaegers of New York. It is so highly regarded as a work of art that congress has provided for the presentation of a bronze replica to the emperor of Germany, in partial recognition of his gift to the United States of a statue of Frederick the Great, which latter statue now stands in front of the Army War College in Washington.

PARADISE FOR BRUIN

Abundance of Food Has Made Bears Very Tame.

Grizzlies, Young and Old, Form Peace Pact With Surveying Party and Become Exceedingly Friendly—No Sport to Kill Them.

Nome, Alaska.—A grizzlies' paradise par excellence has been located in a great berry patch along the international boundary line between the Dominion and Alaska, about thirty miles inland from Taku Arm. The bears are of the species known as the Alaska brown. They range in size from cubs of two feet from muzzle to tail to aged monsters ten feet long. To shoot them would be wanton slaughter. Abundance of food has robbed them of their fierce instincts. So tame have they become that they establish a peace pact with a Dominion government survey party which spent the summer in that vicinity engaged in the work of delimitating the boundary line. The grizzlies, young and old, paid frequent visits to the camp when seeking change of diet, and became so friendly that they would stand up on their hind legs to grab choice tidbits thrown at them from the cookhouse.

This was the remarkable story related in all seriousness by H. S. Mussell of Ottawa, who recently arrived here. He has been engaged in boundary survey work since 1904. His experience last summer was unique. Mr. Mussell, his assistant, N. J. Ogilvie, and eight men arrived on the Princess Beatrice from Juneau.

"That is the greatest bear country in existence. I never saw anything to equal it, even on the Stikine river, where I put in several seasons," said Mr. Mussell in relating various incidents of the season's work. "We soon realized that the animals, thanks to an abundant food supply, were disposed to be friendly. They never attempted to molest us from the very start, and they soon inaugurated a series of daily visits to the camp. They were a little shy at first, but the smell of frying bacon proved irresistible. At last they would approach within twenty yards, sometimes half a dozen at a time, and stand on their hind legs to grab at the feed we threw them.

"The animals finally undertook to visit the camp at night to forage for themselves. This we did not like, as we feared they might stray into our sleeping tents. However, I must say, they respected our privacy, and the meat supplies were cached out of sight. It was not uncommon to meet them on the trail up to a glacier where we were engaged in triangulation work. We usually gave them the right of way. Once Jack Sheppard of Nanaimo, one of my assistants, met four big brown bears three miles from camp. Jack must have been in bad humor that day or else he feared an attack, for he leveled his rifle and blazed away. He killed three, and the other monster, mortally wounded, managed to escape. After that the bears did not visit our camp so often."

Mr. Mussell described the country as the roughest region he had ever visited. It is a vast series of high peaks, covered with glaciers or eternal snows. It was impossible to plant boundary pillars, and the triangulation work and photographs will form the record of the location of the boundary in that locality. In all, about four hundred square miles of the territory was covered.

HARVARD WINS FIRST PLACE

Leads in the Number of Its Scientists, With Columbia Second and Chicago Third.

Boston.—Harvard has more leading men of science than any other American university, according to the Harvard alumni bulletin. Of the 1,000 foremost scientists of the country, 79 are members of the Harvard faculty; 48 are at Columbia, 47 at Chicago and 38 at Yale. This ranking was made by Prof. J. McKeen Catell of Columbia, and was based on the expressed opinion of 120 leading American scientists. Professor Catell's technical scheme of rating gives Harvard 374 Points, Columbia 203, Chicago 188 and Yale 141.

$1.50 Per Year In Advance

Some of those fellows up the line who are so cock sure that Pennington county is more than a name ought to pick up those snaps in Pennington county warrants.

The sanity of any man who wants to get to the north pole might well be questioned, so it may not be so strange that Dr. Cook is now in doubt about his own mental condition.

Mr. Pepper who is red headed and who has been elected to Congress from Iowa ought to be able to supply some of the flavor to congressional proceedings that has been lacking since the retirement of Jadam Bede.

Such a crazy business! They now want congress to honor Peary for having reached the north pole. Congress should keep right on reading President Taft's message until Peary's claims have been passed upon by the Copenhagen wise men.

It has been demonstrated that a crazy man can fool most of the people part of the time, a smaller number of the people a longer time, and it may be admitted that most of the people are a little "[illegible]" on some subject, but that does not indicate that all of the people are crazy all of the time.

Here's a sure enough tip for some good investments. Pennington county warrants can be purchased for a song. And you don't have to be a very good singer and they will be worth one hundred cents on the dollar just as soon as it has been judicially determined that Pennington county didn't die a-borning.

Though the federal authorities may have power under the Indian treaties to close the saloons in a large part of Minnesota, the reason for exercising that authority in much of that territory does not exist. The authority of the department to prevent the sale of liquor to Indians is absolute and where its application is limited to those localities where there are Indians with whom traffic in liquor may be carried on the closing of the saloons cannot be said to be an unwarranted interference with the state's exercise of its police power. But the closing of the saloon in localities uninhabited by Indians is without reason for there no longer exists the reason for the exercise of the federal authority. The screwing down of the "lid" in much of the northern Minnesota territory that is not inhabited by Indians, though made possible by the terms of the treaty becomes by the logic of the situation an unreasonable interference with the state's exercise of the police power. The announced purpose of President Taft to issue an order limiting the operation of the Ballinger order to the closing of the saloons in territory actually inhabited by Indians and territory immediately surrounding ought to meet with universal approval.

The sheriff of Pennington county is a patriot, a soldier and a gentleman. Several Pennington county citizens have become insane since election because of the mental strain they have undergone in trying to figure out why they voted for county division and the sheriff, good soul, has provided for them official escort to the hospital and entertainment en route. The sheriff is no tight wad and he has paid the bills with real money, the kind that is in circulation in Red Lake county. That the sheriff is a here and dead game is proven by the fact that he is satisfied with reimbursement in Pennington county warrants. That isn't getting very much, of course, but Mr. Sheriff is probably consoled by the "thot" that others who have given aid or comfort, services or goods to the cause of the secessionists are getting the same kind of confederate money.

During the session of the legislature this winter the Gazette will publish a weekly St. Paul letter. The letter will be especially interesting to Gazette readers because of the interest of northern Minnesota people in the reapportionment program and other porposed legislation. Mr. Lawson, who will supply the letter, is a writer of interesting stuff and though his letter will be "non-partisan" it will contain much information that will not be found in the news reports of the proceedings of the legislature.

ONE WAY TO REAPPORTION.

We notice that the Minneapolis Journal tries to place the News in a column with other papers in Southern Minnesota that are opposed to reapportionment. Once and for all it is not a true statement. The News knows that Le Sueur county is not fairly entitled to two Representatives and two Senators, some other sections of the state considered, but it is opposed to any scheme of reapportionment that will place the people more at the mercy of the Steel Trust, the brewery combine and the lumber and railroad interests than is now exercised. If the great section of Minnesota now undeveloped can not be made the home of millions in the future without fastening the iron grip of the combines more thoroughly on the throats of the people now living there, and in all Minnesota, let us never reapportion. But if the people interested, the real residents of the State, North and South, outside of the combines, can be given a square deal by the latter, the News favors reapportionment at once.—Le Sueur News.

The News was placed in a class of opponents of reapportionment on the strength of a previous editorial utterance, and the foregoing merely serves to verify the diagnosis. Only one kind of reapportionment is possible under the constitution and that is based on population. To oppose that kind of a deal is too oppose reapportionment. The talk about giving more power to the "interests" will be used as an excuse by opponents of reapportionment this winter but the state is not doling out representatives to the breweries, the steel trust or any other corporation. A real apportionment bill will make it possible for 40,000 citizens in the north or in the cities to have as much voice in the government as 40,000 citizens n the southern section. The people in each district have the right to choose legislators to represent them, not to represent somebody else or please those in some other part of the state.

Minnesota people are very much alike after all, and the membership of the legislature from one section of the state will compare very fairly with that from any other part of the state. If it is necessary in order to protect the people from the "interests" to deny them a square deal and tax the people of Northern Minnesota without fair representation, then the square deal theory is in a bad way.—Minneapolis Journal.

engineers could be secured at an annual expense to the state of $125,000. The men being paid by the state and being assured of their positions would not be subject to local influences, and their tenure of office depending on the character of their services would result in their giving their best thought and attention to it. They would not have to be subservient to the demands of local politicians, nor would it be necessary for them in the discharge of their duties to think how it would affect them at the spring elections. It is Mr. Dunn's opinion that both county commissioners and township boards would welcome the opportunity to consult with competent and unprejudiced authority in the construction of roads within the territory for which they are responsible.

Representative Dunn, not "Bob," but the candidate for speaker, who has every reason to believe that his election is assured, has opened headquarters at the Merchants hotel and is in daily consultation with such members of the house as can find it convenient to come to the city with regard to its organization. Nothing definite has transpired with regard to his intentions. The contest for the minor offices is in a fair way of settlement. It is regarded as certain that Archie Vernon of Little Falls and Oscar Arnesen of Herman will be the clerks of the house, though which one of them will be the chief clerk is not definitely known. It seems probable that a similar situation exists with regard to the position of sergeant-at-arms. B. F. Seiz of Red Wing and George H. Deans of Foreston are the candidates. It is pretty certain that one of them will be the sergeant and the other his assistant. Ex-Sheriff Ege of Minneapolis will be sergeant-at-arms of the senate.

Lieutenant Governor Gordon will not have altogether a happy family to preside over until things get settled down and the conflicting claims of those over whom he will preside are giving him a good deal of trouble. Senator Putnam of Blue Earth wants to be the chairman of the judiciary committee this year, but Judge Wilson of Minneapolis, who occupied this office two years ago, would like to have it again. There are several aspirants to the chairmanship of the finance committee, but indications seem to favor the appointment of Senator Elwell of Minneapolis. Senator Clague is booked for something good and will probably come into prominence as the floor leader and the lieutenant governor's confidential adviser.

Among those associated with the organization of the last senate who are not entirely satisfied that Mr. Gordon should have everything to say about the senate organization are Senator Sullivan of Washington and Senator Dunn of Ramsey. The first sign of disagreement was their protest against the recognition of John Saugstad of [illegible] county as a Republican, because he had defeated Senator Stephens, the regular Republican nominee, by the use of stickers. This was taken to indicate an inclination on their part to favor the seating of Senator Stephens, who has contested Senator Saugstad's election. In these contests, however, the senators are inclined to be fair and there is little doubt that if Senator Saugstad proves to have been fairly elected he will be confirmed in his seat.

Another contest that will come before the senate is that of Senator Farrington against Senator Froshaug of Big Stone county. Froshaug, who is a prohibitionist, was declared elected by the returns. JOHN LAWSON.

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S.S.S. to any who are likewise afflicted.
MRS. LUCY GOODING
Pollock, La.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Shorthand Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All Fargo banks and 685 others employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers, stenographers or cashiers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement.

Our $50.00 Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk or bookkeeper. The new $85.00 course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court, Third Judicial District and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

The D. B. C. has built a magnificent new building (30,000 square feet) is seated with roll-top desks, has 60 typewriters, adding machines, billers, money changers, etc. Pupils deal with each other and with magnificently equipped offices, using aluminum money. The work is fascinating and practical. The Northwest has "no other school like the D. B. C." For catalogue and full information about any department, address

"Sunkist" Oranges—Choicest Fruit

"Sunkist" Oranges are California's choicest fruit—the select inspected crop of 5,000 orange groves. No other orange is so sweet, rich and juicy. They are thin-skinned, seedless, fibreless, tree-ripened, firm and solid. All are hand-picked. No fallen, bruised or over-ripe oranges. Each "Sunkist" is a perfect specimen, as delicious as if plucked fresh from the tree.

Buy "Sunkist" Lemons which are of the same high quality as "Sunkist" Oranges—solid and sound. "Sunkist" Lemons are so juicy that two of them go farther than three of any other kind, in the preparation of desserts, sauces and temperance drinks. Tell your dealer you want "Sunkist" Oranges and Lemons.

MANY ACCIDENTS

REVEAL STARTLING FACTS

Mines Responsible for Largest Number.—Cause and Effect Set Forth —Families Unprovided For.

St. Paul.—Eight thousand five hundred eighty-three accidents, 252 of which were fatal, occurred in Minnesota during the year ending July 31, [illegible] according to a report completed by Don D. Lescohier, special agent of the state labor department under the direction of W. E. McEwen.

In addition to this number there are 60 fatalities and 1,400 accidents, which occurred on railroads bringing the total number up to 312 fatalities and [illegible] accidents. The largest number of fatal accidents occurred in mines, where [illegible] fatalities were reported. Railroad [illegible] come next with 61 fatalities, and the [illegible] with 35, general contracting [illegible] with 7, public utilities with [illegible] with 12.

Of the 8,583 accidents outside of the railroads 19 caused total disability, [illegible] many cases worse than death. [illegible] per cent of the accidents resulted in the loss of some portion of the body. In 469 cases bones were broken or fractured. Nearly 2,000 [illegible] were reported as "crushed, [illegible]" or "maimed." The [illegible] of these were of a serious [illegible]. Besides these there were 251 burns and scalds, 793 injuries to the eyes and 60 internal injuries reported.

Causes Assigned.

The principal causes of the accidents were inexperience, carelessness to danger, fatigue, youth, and the speeding up of the machinery. Thirty-one per cent of the persons injured had worked less than one month and 12 per cent less than one week. Many reports revealed that the workmen were injured either because they did not know how to perform their work properly or were not aware of the danger which surrounded them.

Nearly 13 per cent of the men injured had been at their work more than five years. Two explanations are given for these accidents. The dangers due to an industry such as moving trains on railroads and falling rock in mines are dangerous alike to the experienced and inexperienced workmen. Moreover men who have been accustomed to a danger become careless.

More than 17 per cent of the injured were under 21 years of age. The report says that boys between 17 and 21 are characteristic for their curiosity, thoughtlessness and rashness, which is mainly responsible for their injuries.

Comparisons Are Made.

A comparison of fatal accidents for each 1,000 men employed in the Minnesota mines with those in other countries shows that there are four fatalities in Minnesota to one in France or Belgium, three to one in Holland or the United Kingdom and two to one in Germany. The fatal accident in Minnesota, however, has been decreasing during the past few years, falling from 7.25 per 1,000 men in 1906 to 4.05 in 1910.

In the study of mine accidents in Minnesota the report makes analysis of the methods and processes of mining used in Minnesota, describing the open pit, the underground and milling system in considerable detail.

One of the important chapters in the report is the result of the investigation on the "employers' liability." The investigation covered 54 fatalities, 6 complete and permanent disablements, 69 partially permanent disablements, 60 serious but temporary disablements and 125 minor accidents.

Homes Affected.

The 54 fatal accidents investigated occurred in 28 industries. Thirty-nine of the men killed were married and had 118 persons dependent upon them. No child was considered a dependent who earned $5 a week.

In 13 cases the heirs received absolutely no compensation or aid from the industry, not even funeral expenses. In five cases three received some compensation, but less than the funeral expenses. In nine cases the funeral expenses and doctor's bill were paid. In 27 cases the family of the deceased was not compensated for the loss of their wage earner. The income was taken away and no substitute offered. In eight cases where compensation exceeded funeral expenses it did not exceed $500. In three cases the compensation was from $501 to $750, and in two cases from $750 to $1,000. Five families were paid from $100 to $1,500, three families from $1,500 to $2,000, two were paid $2,500 and four from $4,000 to $6,352.

Fifty per cent received no compensation at all for the loss of the breadwinner, 24.20 per cent received $1,000 or less, 14.08 per cent received from $1,000 to $2,000, and 11 per cent from $2,000 to $6,352. In other words, half of the families were left by the industries with nothing to depend on. Taking the 54 cases the average price paid for human life was $536 and funeral expenses.

The report says that fortunately the families of the deceased workmen were not entirely dependent for future support upon the industries in which there bread-winners were killed. Twenty-five of the families received some form of insurance and four received aid from charity. In seven cases the insurance did not exceed $500.

Six cases of total disability were studied by the field agents. Three of the workmen were paralyzed, two were crippled and one was a physical and mental wreck. Two of the six received respectively $160 and $175 from their employers, one $4,500 and the others nothing. The one who received $175 paid his attorney $75. Four of the other men are now living wholly or partially dependent upon charity.

SITE FOR CATHOLIC COLLEGE.

Winona Board of Trade Gets an Option on Land for Bishop.

Winona. — The committee of the Winona Board of Trade has secured an option on the 105-acre piece of property at the foot of Gilmore valley, owned by Mrs. C. C. Beck, upon which Bishop Heffron has looked favorably with the idea of locating his $300,000 Catholic boy's college.

The committee, which declares it will have no trouble raising by subscription the money for the purchase of the land, holds the privilege of buying the site for $25,000 should it be accepted by the bishop and it will be given him outright. On the land, which figures in the option, is an old and romantic residence, which could easily be utilized as one of the minor college buildings.

Three acres of the land is given over to an orchard, 90 acres to a farm, a greater portion of which is on table land, although some of it is on the slopes. Ten and a half acres is woodland. The remainder of it is given over to residence property.

SEINING OF LAKE PROTESTED.

Otter Tail County Farmers Appeal to State Authorities.

Fergus Falls.—Residents of the vicinity of Pelican Lake, a short distance from Ashby, have decided to appeal to the state game and fish commission to prevent the seining of the lake for buffalo fish. They set fire to the netting of the men who had arranged for the seining of the lake, but other nets have been brought in and fish are being taken out by the carload.

GET MONEY AND JEWELRY.

General Store at Grand Rapids Entered and Loot Easily Taken.

Grand Rapids.—The general store of M. Ponti was entered Thursday night and the safe blown, $75 in cash and some jewelry being taken.

The authorities have been unable to find any trace of the robbers and the work is supposed to be that of burglars, who have been active all over the northeast part of the state lately.

TAKE PRISONERS TO NEW JAIL.

Koochiching County Now Has Modern Bastile.

Bemidji.—The prisoners of Koochiching county have been removed from the Beltrami county jail, the official place of incarceration for Koochiching county, and taken to International Falls to be committed to the new county jail at that point.

But three prisoners remained in the Beltrami county jail to be transferred at this time.

Find Logs on River Bottom.

Fergus Falls.—The Great Northern is constructing a new concrete bridge across the river in this city, and in excavating for the foundations it finds that the bottom of the river is literally filled with logs. When the city was established in 1870 its first industry was a sawmill and logs were floated down in large numbers to be sawed into lumber here. Many of these logs appear to have become watersoaked, gradually burying themselves in the bed of the stream.

Washington, D. C. — President Taft submitted, among other nominations, the name of William D. Hale for reappointment as postmaster of Minneapolis. Postmaster Hale was first appointed to the office in 1890 under the Harrison administration. In 1894 he was succeeded by Franklin D. Holbrook, who was appointed by President Cleveland, and who was succeeded in 1898 by Stephen G. Lovejoy. In 1902 Mr. Hale was again appointed postmaster by President McKinley.

ROMANCE ENDS WELL.

Uncle Sam Halts Progress of True Love, Cannot Stop Consummation.

Albert Lea.—A romance which had its beginning in Denmark, and in which Uncle Sam had a part, culminated in this city when Carl Madson and Miss Valborg Johnson were married by the Danish Lutheran pastor.

The young people were engaged while in Denmark, and the young man then came to this country, locating in Albert Lea, where he secured employment as a carpenter. When he had been here several months he sent for his sweetheart, who immediately embarked to join her lover. When she reached Ellis island in New York her progress was barred by the stern mandates of Uncle Sam and the immigrant officials, as the young lady had only $3 with her, and the required amount that a person must have before entering this country is $25. She told the officials that she had come to marry a young man in Albert Lea, but they would not be satisfied until they received the written assurance of the young man, signed before a minister of the gospel, that he would marry the young woman as soon as she reached Albert Lea and accompanied by $22, the balance necessary to comply with the letter of the law.

The young woman came to this city a few days ago, and the marriage took place as soon as possible.

OWNERS OF STEAMER J. S. SUED.

Claims for Damages Aggregating Over $14,000 Are Filed at Winona.

Winona.—In connection with a suit and monition proceedings begun by the Acme Packet company in the United States court here, claims for damages aggregating over $14,000 were filed here with Court Commissioner H. M. Lamberton.

The proceedings, which will likely be threshed out at the coming May term of the court in this city, is a direct aftermath of the recent spectacular burning of the palatial excursion steamer J. S. at Bad Axe, below La Crosse.

The packet company sought to have their liability of the burning of the steamer limited to the value of the hull and contents, exempting the Acme Packet company as a corporation from any claims for damages. The corporation invoked a law passed in 1854, applicable originally only to the high seas, but later amended to reach inland streams. The claimants in this litigation, it is said, will maintain that inasmuch as John Streckfus, president and manager of the company, was on the steamer at the time of the burning of the boat and had personal direction the company should not be exempted.

MORE PROTECTION FOR GAME.

Uniform Hunting License Is Recommended.

St. Paul.—New laws providing for a uniform hunting license and requiring non-residents to procure a license to fish with rod and line are recommended by the game and fish commission in its biennial report submitted to Governor Eberhart. The purpose of these laws is to increase the fund for the better protection of game. The report deplores the violation of the game law in this state and predicts that unless some action is taken, the state soon will be without game.

The commission recommends that a plan should be devised requiring the licensed hunter to report all game killed by him during the hunting season. This would enable the commission to determine just how many animals are killed each year. The commission favors a federal law prohibiting the spring shooting of migratory birds. This law is enforced in Minnesota and has resulted in a marked increase in the number of game.

The report says the propagation of Chinese pheasants has not been successful in this state. Partridges, prairie chickens and quail are thriving.

FAMOUS MILL CITY LOT SOLD.

Home of Late "Elder" Stewart Brings $500,000.

Minneapolis. — The famous "Elder" Stewart corner, an entire half block at Fourth street and Hennepin avenue, and considered one of the best business sites in the city, will be sold to John and Samuel Friedman for $500,000.

The property which has been maintained in its primeval state since the late "Elder" Stewart built his little cottage on the ground will give place to one of the finest office buildings in the city. It is probable that a hotel may be included in the plan. The exact nature and designs of the improvement will be announced later.

The later "Elder" Stewart received many offers during his life for the property, but each time refused with the explanation that his "wife" would not let him sell."

BABY SETS BROTHER AFIRE.

Fatal Results From Children Playing With Matches.

Brainerd.—Two little sons of Thed Cooley, a farmer residing twelve miles east of Brainerd at Boy Lake, were playing with matches. One set fire to the other, aged 2 years, and the little one succumbed to the terrible burns received. Doctors were summoned from Brainerd, but the child died before they could arrive.

CHARGED WITH BOY'S DEATH.

Stanchfield.—Walter Hegstrom, 11 years old, was arrested on a charge of manslaughter in the second degree, charged with the death of Raymond Larson, aged 6 years, about a month ago. Hegstrom had been out hunting and passing Larson's place, stopped. The gun was discharged, instantly killing the lad. Hegstrom is being held to the grand jury and is out on $1,000 bail.

English Woman Smokes Pipes.

The latest fancy of the woman-smoker is a pipe—not the tiny affair that suffices for the Japanese, but a good-sized brier or a neat meerschaum. The pipe is boldly carried along with a gold cord case and chain-purse. For some time now the cigarette has given place to a cigar, small in size and mild in quality. Women said they were tired of the cigarettes, and wanted a bigger smoke.—London Mail.

Cripple Rides Bicycle.

George Anstey, aged 12, a cripple, of Leicester, England, is one of the most remarkable cyclists in the country. Both his legs are withered and useless, but the Leicester Cripples' Guild has provided him with a two-wheeled pedalless machine, with a padded tube covering the axle bar. Across this he lies face foremost, and with wooden clogs strapped to his hands he propels himself along the streets and roads in a marvelously rapid manner. He has complete control of the machine, his hands acting as pedals, steering gear, and brake combined.

Too Ardent a Lover.

Georgette Fontano, an embroiderer who lives in the Rue Sevres in Paris, has found herself condemned to a month's imprisonment for what seems to her a harmless act.

She was going home from a concert a few evenings ago when she decided she would like to see her fiance. As he happens to be a fireman whose station is in her own neighborhood it occurred to her it would be very easy to summon him to her side by breaking the glass of the fire alarm and sounding a call.

She did so and in a few moments fire engines came from several directions, all laden with firemen, of course, but alas! her fiance was not among them, and more than that all the firemen were angry, and before she knew what had happened she was taken to a magistrate, who proceeded to make the course of true love run unsmoothly by sending her to prison for a month in spite of her tears and protests that she thought it would be a simple way of bringing her fiance to her side.

NEW SAWS BADLY NEEDED

The Old-Fashioned Ones Somehow Don't Seem to Fit Into Modern Situations.

"You know all the copybook, McGuffey's reader line of talk about taking the advice of one's elders?" began the sad-eyed, undersized little man on the car. "Sure you do. Now let me tell you something. See that big apartment house over there on the right? And that little business block right next to it?

"Well, there weren't any apartment houses or business blocks on it when I first clapped eyes on it. It was a howling wilderness, in fact, and you could almost chase rabbits up bere. That was about eighteen years ago. I had a hunch then—and I was only eighteen years old at that time—that this land would some day jump in value by leaps and bounds. When I was twenty years old I came into a bunch of $15,000. I went to my guardian, an old man, pretty prominent in estate management and wisdom at that time, and I told him I wanted to soak the whole $15,000 in this block of ground I pointed out to you. The block was then on the market for exactly $15,000. The old gentleman pooh-poohed me.

"'Go away, boy,' he said to me, with a patronizing smile. 'You don't know what you want. It's my duty to save you from such wild notions as this one you've got into your head. They'll be shooting rabbits and squirrels out there on that plot 50 years from now. G'way.'

"I argued it with him, and he sat down on me. Then he went and invested my $15,000 at three per cent.

"Three years ago the man who bought that same block of ground for $18,000 sold it for about $200,000 cash, and he's now cruising over in the Mediterranean or some place or other, while I'm taking my wife out for nickel car rides and wondering where my $15,000 went.

"There's got to be a new set of wise saws invented for twentieth century consumption. The McGuffey's reader kind are moth eaten."

Lightning Change.

The Actor—Can I? Say, you know the scene in "Love and Lobsters," where the hero and the villain are fighting, and a friend rushes in and separates 'em? Well, I played all three parts one night when the other two fellows were ill.

Holidays in the States.

Washington's birthday is a holiday in all states. Decoration day in all states but Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas. Labor day is observed everywhere. Virtually every state has legal holidays having to do with its own special affairs—battle of New Orleans in Louisiana, Texan Independence and battle of San Jacinto in Texas, Admission day in California, and so on. Mississippi is like the federal government in lack of statutory holidays, but by common consent Independence day, Thanksgiving and Christmas are observed. A new one is Columbus day in a few of the states.

Planting Wedding Oaks.

Princess August Wilhelm, wife of the kaiser's fourth son, has set herself the task of reviving one of Germany's oldest customs, that according to which newly wedded couples immediately after the marriage ceremony plant a couple of oak saplings side by side in a park or by the roadside of their native town.

The town of Mulchausen, in Thuringia, is the first to respond to the princess' appeal. A municipal official appears at the church door after every wedding and invites the bride and bridegroom to drive with him in a carriage to a new road near the town and there plant oak saplings.

The tree planting idea was started by a former elector of Brandenburg with the object of repairing the ravages caused by the 30 years' war. The elector forbade young persons to marry until they had planted a number of fruit trees.

Two Very Old Ladies.

We have heard a great deal lately about long-lived people, but it is probable that the oldest two people in the world today are Frau Dutkievitz and another old lady named Babeveslika.

The former lives at Posen, in Prussian Poland, and was born on February 21, 1785. She is therefore one hundred and twenty-five years old. The latter, however, is nine months her senior, having been born in May, 1784.

She is still a fairly hale old woman, and for nearly one hundred years worked in the fields. Her descendants number close on 100, and these now make her a joint allowance. She lives at the village of Bavelsko, whose neighborhood she has never quitted during the whole of her long life. She remembers events which happened at the beginning of last century much more clearly than those of the last 40 years.—Dundee Advertiser.

An Alaskan Luncheon.

Runners of woven Indian basketry, with white drawnwork doilies at each of the 12 covers, were used on an oval mahogany table. The doilies were made at Sitka. In the middle of the table a mirror held a tall central vase of frosted glass, surrounded by four smaller vases, all filled with white spring blossoms. The edge of the mirror was banked with the same flowers. Four totem poles were placed on doilies in the angles made by the runners.

Place cards were water colors of Alaskan scenery. Abalone shells held salted nuts, and tiny Indian baskets held bonbons. The soup spoons were of horn, several of the dishes used were made by Alaskan Indians, and the cakes were served on baskets.

The menu was as follows: Poisson a la Bering Sea (halibut chowder), Yukon climbers (broiled salmon, potatoes Julienne), snowbirds avec aurorahorealis (roast duck with jelly), Shungnak river turnips, Tanana beets, Skagway beeh (salad), Fairbanks nuggets (ripe strawberries arranged on individual dishes around a central mound of powdered sugar), arctic slices (brick ice cream), Circle City delights (small cakes), Klondike nuggets (yellow cheese in round balls on crackers), Nome firewater (coffee). —Woman's Home Companion.

Largest of Whales.

The largest whale of its type of which there is scientific record was captured recently off Port Arthur, Tex. He measured sixty-three feet in length, and was estimated to be about three hundred years old. Captain Cob Plummer, mate of a United States pilot boat, sighted the monster in the shoals off the jetties, and the crew of his vessel captured the mammal. The huge body was towed ashore, exhibited and much photographed before being cut up.

Bankers and Bank Notes.

Four men, three of whom were connected with brokerage concerns in the Wall street district, were discussing United States paper currency and the disappearance of counterfeits. "We are so sure nowadays," said one of the party, "as to the genuineness of bills that little attention is paid to them in handling, except as to denomination." To prove his assertion he took a $10 yellowback from his pocket, and, holding it up, asked who could tell whose portrait it bore. No one knew, and by way of coaching the broker said it was the first treasurer of the United States. Again no one knew the name. "Why, it's Michael Hillegas," said the man proudly. "But in confidence, I'll tell you, I didn't know it five minutes ago."—New York Tribune.

An Unnecessary Confession.

A hearty laugh was occasioned at the Birmingham police court by a prisoner who gave himself away in a very delightful manner. The man was the first on the list, and the charge against him was merely one of being drunk and disorderly. He stepped into the dock, however, just at the moment when the dock officer was reading out a few of the cases which were to come before the court that morning, and a guilty conscience apparently led him to mistake these items for a list of his previous convictions.

He stood passive enough while the officer read out about a dozen drunk and disorderlies, but when he came to one "shopbreaking" the prisoner exclaimed excitedly, "That was eight years ago, your honor." Everyone began to laugh, and the prisoner, realizing the blunder he had made, at first looked very black indeed, but finally saw the humorous side of the matter, and a broad smile spread over his face. His blunder did not cost anything.—Birmingham Mail.

DIFFERENCE IN THE RACES

All the Mexican correspondents who have written on the subject of why Americans are not better liked by Mexicans agree that it is largely a question of a lack of politeness on the part of the foreigner here, and in some cases an ill-concealed contempt. The latter is inexcusable, and certainly must emanate only from inconsiderate or poorly educated persons, from which no nation is free. Politeness, however, is largely a matter of form and training. It is undeniable that the Anglo-Saxon salutations, methods of expressing thanks and appreciation, etc., are simpler and shorter than the Latin forms. To many who have all their lives been accustomed to the briefer Saxon ways, an attempt of the more elaborate Latin politeness seems, for them, nothing short of affectation, and they simply cannot do it. There are exceptions among Americans and Englishmen who readily adopt the courteous phrases of the Mexicans and use them naturally, but they are the exceptions. And it is difficult to see how this can readily be changed. Our Mexican friends should understand, on the other hand, that if Anglo-Saxons do not, as a rule, go through as many social formalities as the usages of the land prescribe, they mean no offense thereby. They are accustomed to taking a good many things for granted that their Latin cousins give verbal assurance of. Naturally, it is the duty of the outlander to conform as nearly as he can to the ways of his adopted country, but human nature and settled habits are pretty hard to make over, particularly unless you catch them while they're young.—Mexican Herald.

Takes Himself Seriously.

Nicola Tesla, dining by himself in a hotel's great dining room, takes a table where he can be seen. Throughout his meal he wears a deeply studious, a completely absorbed, attitude. He may bring to the table a portfolio filled with papers. These he may scan with prolonged solemnity. In any event, he sits an eloquent tableau of profundity.—New York Press.

Rat Bounty Excites Merriment.

Seattle, fearing the introduction of bubonic plague by rats, has offered a bounty of ten cents a rat. This moves Tacoma, safe from infection from the sea, to raucous laughter, and the Ledger says that the bounty, "though not intended for rodents of Tacoma, Everett, Bellingham and other populous and busy centers, has been finding its way into the pockets of nonresidents of Seattle for non-resident rats. But the joke would be on us if it were found that our rat population had found its way into the Seattle census."

Pretty Good Definition.

We hear some funny things in Fleet street sometimes, and the following definition of the height of aggravation, by a gentleman in rather shaky boots, whom we encountered in a well-known hostelry the other day, struck us as being particularly choice.

"The 'eight of haggravation, gentlemen," said this pothouse humorist, setting his pewter on the counter and looking round proudly, with the air of one about to let off a good thing, "the 'eight of haggravation—why, trying to ketch a flea out o' yer ear with a pair of boxin' gloves."—London Tit-Bits.

Before Days of Free Press.

Many of the restrictions that hampered the influence of the press remained in force until the close of the eighteenth century in England. It was not till that period that newspapers obtained the right to criticise the policy of ministers and of the king. Mr. Walter, the first editor of the London Times, was prosecuted for censuring the duke of York. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $250, stand in the pillory for an hour, be imprisoned for a year and give security for his good behavior for seven years. The order with regard to the pillory was canceled, but he had to serve his term in jail.

French Official Etiquet.

The wives of the new French ministers share in the honors conferred on their husbands, the degree of deference due to them being minutely established by the "protocole." When the wife of a minister enters a room, if any deputies' or senators' wives are present, they are supposed to rise and remain standing until she is seated. Other ministers' wives may rest in their chairs, but should the prime minister's wife arise they also must stand to attention. And even Mme. Briand (if there were such a person), would have to show similar deference to the wife of the president of the chamber. With her, according to the protocole, "c'est la representation nationale qui entre, le suffrage universel le France."—London Chronicle.

Vivid at Least.

Dr. Hiram C. Cortlandt, the well known theologian of Des Moines, said in a recent address:

"Thomas A. Edison tells us that he thinks the soul is not immortal; but, after all, what does this great wizard know about souls? His forte is electricity and machinery, and when he talks of souls he reminds me irresistibly of the young lady who visited the Baldwin locomotive works and then told how a locomotive is made.

"'You pour,' she said, 'a lot of sand into a lot of boxes, and you throw old stove lids and things into a furnace, and then you empty the molten stream into a hole in the sand, and everybody yells and swears. Then you pour it out and let it cool and pound it, and then you put it in a thing that bores holes in it. Then you screw it together, and paint it, and put steam in it, and it goes splendidly; and they take it to a drafting room and make a blueprint of it. But one thing I forgot—they have to make a boiler. One man gets inside and one gets outside, and they pound frightfully; and then they tie it to the other thing, and you ought to see it go!'"

That Suit for Libel

Against the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Gave a Splendid Chance to Bring Out Facts

A disagreement about advertising arose with a "weekly" Journal.

Following it, an attack on us appeared in their editorial columns; sneering at the claims we made particularly regarding Appendicitis.

We replied through the regular papers and the "weekly" thought we hit back rather too hard and thereupon sued for libel.

The advertisement the "weekly" attacked us about claimed that in many cases of appendicitis an operation could be avoided by discontinuing indigestible food, washing out the bowels and taking a predigested food Grape-Nuts.

Observe we said MANY cases not all.

Wouldn't that knowledge be a comfort to those who fear a surgeon's knife as they fear death?

The "weekly" writer said that was a lie.

We replied that he was ignorant of the facts.

He was put on the stand and compelled to admit he was not a Dr. and had no medical knowledge of appendicitis and never investigated to find out if the testimonial letters to our Co. were genuine.

A famous surgeon testified that when an operation was required Grape-Nuts would not obviate it. True.

We never claimed that when an operation was required Grape-Nuts would prevent it.

The surgeon testified bacteria [germs] helped to bring on an attack and bacteria was grown by undigested food frequently.

We claimed and proved by other famous experts that undigested food was largely responsible for appendicitis.

We showed by expert testimony that many cases are healed without a knife, but by stopping the use of food which did not digest, and when food was required again it was helpful to use a predigested food which did not overtax the weakened organs of digestion.

Plain common sense shows the better way is to stop food that evidently has not been digested.

Then, when food is required, use an easily digested food. Grape-Nuts or any other if you know it to be predigested (partly digested before taking).

We brought to Court analytical chemists from New York, Chicago and Mishawaka, Ind., who swore to the analysis of Grape-Nuts and that part of the starchy part of the wheat and barley had been transformed into sugar, the kind of sugar produced in the human body by digesting starch (the large part of food).

Some of the State chemists brought on by the "weekly" said Grape-Nuts could not be called a "predigested" food because not all of it was digested outside the body.

The other chemists said any food which had been partly or half digested outside the body was commonly known as "predigested."

Splitting hairs about the meaning of a word.

It is sufficient that if only one-half of the food is "predigested," it is easier on weakened stomach and bowels than food in which no part is predigested.

To show the facts we introduce Dr. Thos. Darlington, former chief of the N. Y. Board of Health, Dr. Ralph W. Webster, chief of the Chicago Laboratories, and Dr. B. Sachs, N. Y.

If we were a little severe in our denunciation of a writer, self-confessed ignorant about appendicitis and its cause, it is possible the public will excuse us, in view of the fact that our head, Mr. C. W. Post, has made a lifetime study of food, food digestion and effects, and the conclusions are indorsed by many of the best medical authorities of the day.

Is it possible that we are at fault for suggesting, as a Father and Mother might, to one of the family who announced a pain in the side: "Stop using the food, greasy meats, gravies, mince pie, cheese, too much starchy food, etc., etc., which has not been digested, then when again ready for food use Grape-Nuts because it is easy of digestion?"

Or should the child be at once carted off to a hospital and cut?

We have known of many cases wherein the approaching signs of appendicitis have disappeared by the suggestion being followed.

No one better appreciates the value of a skilful physician when a person is in the awful throes of acute appendicitis, but "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

It is not always necessary to operate.

It is best to stop all food.

It is palatable and strong in Nourishment.

It will pay fine returns in health to quit the heavy breakfasts and lunches and use less food but select food certainly known to contain the elements nature requires to sustain the body. May we be permitted to suggest a breakfast of fruit, Grape-Nuts and cream, two soft boiled eggs, and some hot toast and cocoa, milk or Postum?

The question of whether Grape-Nuts does or does not contain the elements which nature requires for the nourishment of the brain, also of its purity, will be treated in later newspaper articles.

Good food is important and its affect on the body is also important.

Stepmother of Mint Julep.

Romance and poetry have delighted [illegible] with which to celebrate and perpetuate the glory of the [illegible] old Kentucky, famed for its fast horses, beautiful women and [illegible].

Kentucky has been designated as the home of the mint julep, and its [illegible] have become famous all over the world for the easy and graceful [illegible] which they drink whisky with a [illegible] dash of sugar and a sprig or [illegible] in order, chiefly to overcome the necessity for a large amount of water in the beverage. The true Kentuckian doesn't want his whisky diluted.

It transpires, however, that the real home of the mint and the mint julep is right here in Missouri, whose crop of mint last year amounted to 7,653 [illegible], or enough to make 1,224,320 juleps. This amount includes the market figures only, no account having been taken of the countless thousands of juleps which were compounded during the year with a base of the undistilled moonshine whisky that never paid a cent of tax.—St. Louis Star.

"What have you done?" exclaimed Mrs. [illegible], as she flourished a letter at him.

He Knew.

A certain jurist was an enthusiastic golfer. Once he had occasion to interrogate in a criminal suit, a boy witness from Bala.

"Now, my lad," he said, "are you acquainted with the nature and significance of an oath?"

The boy, raising his brows in surprise, answered:

"Of course I am, sir. Don't I caddy for you at the Country club?"—Success.

Found the Answer Was "Coffee."

Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life.

"During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it.

"After awhile I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. I didn't like the taste of it at first, but when it was made right—boiled until dark and rich—I soon became fond of it.

"In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My sick headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

"My health continued to improve and today I am well and strong, weigh 148 pounds. I attribute my present health to the life giving qualities of Postum."

MEXICANS FIGHT

FACES REAL REVOLUTION

Troop Train With Three Field Pieces and 550 Men Meets Defeat—Insurrection Exceeds Hope of Ardent Sympathizers.

Chihuahua, Dec. 21.—The defeat of the troop train with its three field pieces and 550 men intensifies the tension here. On top of the drawn battle of Cerro Prieto ten days ago it is taken as a confirmation of declarations that President Diaz confronts a real revolution. The most ardent sympathizers with the revolt and they include most of the unofficial population, scarcely hoped the insurgents would be able to make more than one stand against the disciplined soldiers of the government. The government states the revolt consisted of but little save a nucleus of bandits augmented by misguided peons who could not handle a rifle and whom it would be but police work to subdue. The official report now doubles the estimate of the number of insurrectors in the field. Cerro Prieto was a drawn fight. Mal Paso was a victory for the rebels.

Chihuahua, Mex., Dec. 21.—Via El Paso, Tex.—Amplified advices change but little today's telegraphic report of the cutting up of the government troop train at Mal Paso last Sunday. The official report of twenty-one federal killed, ten missing and forty-two wounded, stands with the addition that thirty slightly wounded, bringing the total injured to seventy-two, also came on the train. The injuries of these thirty are not serious and it is not customary to carry them in the hospital lists. Most of them are on their feet. Rumors have been abroad today that the federals lost 100, but this seems to be without foundation and probably referred to the total number of killed, wounded and injured, which makes about 100.

The hospital train brought in eighty mauser rifles or about the number which their killed and wounded would have dropped.

ENGLISH MINE HORROR.

Explosion Entombs 290 Men Without Hope of Rescue.

Bolton, Eng., Dec. 21.—An explosion followed by fire and causing many fatalities occurred in the little Hulton colliery of the Hulton Colliery Co., here this morning soon after 290 miners had gone below the surface to begin the day's work. The cause and extent of the disaster was in doubt for several hours. The first rescuing party to reach the scene succeeded in bringing seven men and boys to safety. Later they recovered the bodies of five more victims.

At the moment of the explosion flames spread through the affected passage and smoke and poisonous gas filled the mine.

The plight of the miners was rendered more dangerous by a mishap to the machinery of the shafts where the cages refused to move for a time preventing a quick escape and interfering with the ventilation. The rising gases were checked by obstructions and driven back upon the entombed men. Meantime the fire raged fiercely and it is supposed that many who were not killed by the noxious fumes were burned to death.

Situation Up to Taft.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The anti-whisky interests will confer with President Taft at 3 o'clock today, over the Minnesota situation. They concede to the state police power to control the international affairs of the state, but will resist any attempt to make nugatory the existing prohibition of the liquor traffic as provided for by the Indian treaty.

Both sides, however, express a willingness to enter into a compromise agreement whereby the dry zone is restricted to a mile limit around the Indian reservations. This would afford relief to a great many towns throughout the state.

Two Meet Death by Fire.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 21.—Fire which started in the factory district here at 2 o'clock this morning resulted in the death of two persons, the injuring of several firemen and a property loss estimated at $2,000,000. One of the dead is Fireman Robert D. Grear, who was crushed beneath falling wall. The other is Walter Morris, 18 years of age, who was fatally hurt by a falling trolley pole. Buildings comprising an entire block were consumed.

New Illinois Central Head.

New York, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Charles H. Markham, recently identified with the oil interests in Pittsburg, was today elected president of the Illinois Central railroad by the board of directors to succeed President James T. Harahan. Markham was formerly vice president and general traffic manager of the Union Pacific railroad.

New Members Confirmed.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The senate today confirmed C. C. McChord of Kentucky and B. H. Meyer of Wisconsin to be members of the interstate commerce commission.

Rate Case for Jan. 9.

Washington, Dec. 21.—In its twenty-fourth annual report, submitted to congress today, the interstate commerce commission gives particular prominence to the consideration of eastern and western freight rate cases which are now pending before the commission. The cases have been assigned for argument on Jan. 9, 1911, and succeeding days, and the commission will announce its decision at the earliest possible date thereafter.

Special reference is made in the report to the work of the commission looking to the establishment of uniform classification of freight.

Loses Trace of Liners.

Las Palmas, Canary Island, Dec. 21.—Anxiety is felt for the safety of the Woermann steamship line steamers Ingbert and Irma Woermann. The latter vessel started out from here yesterday in a terrible gale to succor her sister ship, which had been sighted twelve miles off the coast displaying signals of distress and indicating that her engines had broken down. Since then no word has come from either of the liners and they have not been sighted by incoming vessels. It is thought that they may have been driven northward by the fierce storm which still raged today.

MAY POSTPONE ACTION

OPPOSITION IS RAISED TO CONFIRMING LORIMER REPORT.

Committee on Privileges May Not Be Sustained by the Senate—Lively Debate.

Washington, Dec. 20.—What may prove formidable opposition to the adoption of any report by the senate for the exoneration of Senator Lorimer as the result of the investigation of charges of bribery in connection with his election by the Illinois legislature to succeed Senator Hopkins, is said to have developed on the senate floor today.

Several senators are declared to have agreed that they would compel a postponement of the whole subject until after the holiday recess in order that all members might have an opportunity to digest the testimony as well as the report of the committee on privileges and elections.

Chairman Burrows called the committee on privileges and elections together today and after adjournment it was reported that he had been authorized to report the Lorimer matter to the senate in accordance with the findings of the sub-committee. Great dissatisfaction is said to have been expressed by the committee to have printed the findings of the sub-committee.

Caused by Runaway Cars.

New York, Dec. 20.—Investigation of the causes of the explosion in the New York Central power house yesterday, which resulted in ten deaths, the injury of more than 100 persons and a loss estimated at upwards of $2,000,000 was continued with zeal today by the city and the company.

Although the exact source of the disaster has not been determined, it is generally conceded that the first cause of the upheaval was a runaway train of electric cars in the central cut near Fiftieth street and Lexington avenue that crashed over the bumper against the house, broke a feed pipe and caused a large quantity of gas to accumulate in the power house basement.

This was detonated possibly by an electric spark from a short circuit. The motorman of the train, Albert Seagroatt, was unable to stop the cars in time to avoid their disastrous crash into the bumper. The whole trouble may be decided to have been due to slippery rails or to some other apparently trivial cause.

Killed by Falling Tree.

Glen Ullin, N. D., Dec. 20.—A fatal accident occurred at the Breckenridge crossing on the Heart river when the life of Carl Serr was crushed out by a falling tree. Mr. Serr and his son drove down to the river after a load of wood and while the young man was chopping down a tree the father was busy picking up floodwood along the river bank and happened to be in line with the tree when it fell. Mr. Serr was caught beneath the trunk of the falling tree and was almost instantly killed.

Mr. Serr was about 55 years of age. He leaves a wife and several children besides a large number of friends to mourn.

Minnesota Values Increased.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The farm land of Minnesota, with buildings included, increased from $26 to $46 per acre in value from 1900 to 1910, as shown by the census returns. There are 155,759 farms in the state. The average size is 177 acres, the total farm area being 27,623,000 acres. The aggregate value of this vast acreage was $1,259,510,000, including $242,621,000 worth of buildings.

Benefit Fire Sufferers.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—A bill relieving from annual assessment work all prospectors who were injured by the forest fires of last summer and fall was passed yesterday by the senate. The bill was hurried to the house in the hope of procuring action there before the Christmas recess.

Two Sentenced to Penitentiary.

Grand Forks, N. D., Dec. 20.—Fred Bichert and Fred Strebel, both convicted during the present session of district court on a charge of stealing grain, were today sentenced to spend one year each at hard labor in the state penitentiary.

Temple Company Out of Business.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 20.—Following its decision that the Temple Iron Co. controlled by the Reading, and other anthracite railroads, is an illegal combination in restraint of trade, the United States circuit court here today issued a decree permanently enjoining the corporation from doing business.

Congress Has Adjourned.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Congress has adjourned for the holiday recess until Jan. 5. Little business was done in either house today, owing to the difficulty of keeping members in their seats to insure a quorum.

Warship to Cost $5,840,000.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The contract for building a 27,000 ton battleship Texas was today awarded to the Newport News ship buildings company, the lowest bidder, at $5,840,000.

Three Injured in St. Paul Fire.

St. Paul, Dec. 20.—Two firemen and one policeman were hurt today while fighting a fire which destroyed the three story building occupied by the Hardwood Door Co., on Eagle street near the seven corners in the center of the city. The financial loss is estimated at $50,000.

Fireman William Cole fell three stories through a skylight and was seriously injured. Patrolman Wagner in attempting to rescue Cole suffered a broken wrist and Fireman Thomas Maloney fell from a ladder and received minor injuries. All will recover. Two other firemen were injured.

Found Shot in His Wagon.

He lay suffering in his wagon while the horses, undirected, wandered around until the police discovered his plight. He is not expected to live.

The garment workers out on strike are suffering, in many instances reported to the police, from cold and hunger, and the employers have advised Mayor Busse that hereafter all negotiations will be made directly with the men

THE CENSUS OF CANADA

ITS GROWTH IN TEN YEARS PAST.

A census of the Dominion of Canada will be made during 1911. It will show that during the past decade a remarkable development has taken place, and, when compared with the population, a greater percentage of increase in industries of all kinds than has ever been shown by any country. Commerce, mining, agriculture and railways have made a steady march onward. The population will be considerably over 8,000,000. Thousands of miles of railway lines have been construction since the last census was taken ten years ago. This construction was made necessary by the opening up of the new agricultural districts in Western Canada, in which there have been pouring year after year an increasing number of settlers, until the present year will witness settlement of over 300,000, or a trifle less than one-third of the immigration to the United States during the same period with its 92,000,000 of population. Even with these hundreds of thousands of newcomers, the great majority of whom go upon the land, there is still available room for hundreds of thousands additional. The census figures will therefore show a great—a vast—increase in the number of farms under occupation, as well as in the output of the farms. When the figures of the splendid immigration are added to the natural increase, the total will surprise even the most optimistic. To the excellent growth that the western portion of Canada will show may largely be attributed the commercial and industrial growth of the eastern portion of Canada. All Canada is being upbuilded, and in this transformation there is taking part the people from many countries, but only from those countries that produce the strong and vigorous. As some evidence of the growth of the western portion of Canada, in agricultural industry, it is instructive to point out that over 100,000 homesteads of 160 acres each have been transferred to actual settlers in the past two years. This means 25,000 square miles of territory, and then, when is added the 40,000 160-acre pre-emption blocks, there is an additional 10,000 square miles, or a total of 35,000 square miles—a territory as large as the State of Indiana, and settled within two years. Reduced to the producing capacity imperative on the cultivation restriction of 50 acres of cultivation on each 160-acre homestead within three years, there will be within a year and a half from now upwards of 5,000,000 additional acres from this one source added to the entire producing area of the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

In 1901, at the time of the last census of Canada, successful agriculture in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta was an experiment to many. There were skeptics who could not believe that it was possible to grow thirty, forty and even fifty bushels of wheat to the acre, or that as high as one hundred and thirty bushels of oats to the acre could be grown. The skeptics are not to be found today. The evidence of the hundreds of thousands of farmers is too overwhelming. Not only have the lands of western Canada proven their worth in the matter of raising all the smaller field grains, but for mixed farming, and for cattle raising there is no better country anywhere. The climate is perfectly adapted to all these pursuits as well as admirable for health. The Dominion government literature, descriptive of the country, is what all that are interested should read. Send for a copy to the nearest Canadian government representative.

When It Was Rougher.

"Football in the '90s was a terrible game," said Mr. Withington. "Bourget, you know, devoted a whole chapter of 'Outre Mer' to its horrors. Some of the stories of the football of '90 or '91 are, in fact, almost incredible.

The Way of Life.

It is being said of an elderly man in business in Atchison: "He can't stand punishment as he formerly could." And there is punishment to be endured in making a living; don't forget it. Look over your own experience, and you will detect punishment every hour of the day. If it isn't at home, it is on the street car or on the road. How many ways there are to punish a man who tries his best to get along and behave himself. And after a man gets old it is more evident every year that the poor fellow can't stand punishment as he could when he was younger.—Atchison Globe.

Kept Umbrella Thirty Years.

A faithful old umbrella which has shielded the family of Dr. James A. Mullican of Greenwood avenue from the storms of 30 years, was stolen on Sunday. During the rain on that day the physician lent the umbrella to E. A. Seck, and while the latter was in a store some one stole it.

"The umbrella belonged to my father and has been in the family for more than thirty years," said Doctor Mullican the other night. "It has been covered several times.

"To persons who are unable to keep the same umbrella for more than thirty days this may seem incredible, but it is true," concluded Doctor Mullican with a smile.—Chicago Tribune.

Fresh Air in Winter

In winter, it is hard to get fresh air in certain rooms. Some rooms in a house are usually colder than others, and if you open the windows it is hard again to heat the room properly.

If you keep the windows closed you don't get fresh air; if you keep them open you cannot quickly reheat the room. The solves the difficulty. You can leave the windows in a room open all day in winter, and when you close them apply a match to a Perfection Oil Heater and heat the room to any temperature you desire in a few minutes.

The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in japan or nickel. It burns for nine hours. It has a cool handle and a damper top. It has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be quickly cleaned. An indicator always shows amount of oil in the font.

The filler-cap does not need to be screwed down. It is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection Oil Heater is strong, durable, well made, built for service, yet light and ornamental.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Shorthand Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 850 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and offices this year—over 400 will do so next year. All Fargo banks and 685 others employ D.B.C. pupils as cashiers, tellers or bookkeepers. No other school offers such endorsement.

Our $50 course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk or bookkeeper. Our new $85 course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by Bankers' Association) supplies cashiers and tellers for the Northwestern banks, and bookkeepers and credit men for the larger concerns. The shorthand course (under an expert reporter) trains court reporters and high grade stenographers. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court, 3d Judicial District and the Cass Co. Court are D.B.C. pupils. Can other schools offer this proof of superior training?

The D. B. C. has built a magnificent new building (35,000 square feet of space) is seated with roll top desks, has 60 typewriters, adding machines, billers, money changers, etc. Our pupils deal with each other and with magnificently equipped offices, using aluminum money. Our courses are fascinating and practical. The Northwest has "No other school like the D. B. C." The winter term begins Jan. 3. For further information write

Miss Lorena Zaiser entertained a number of girl friends at her home last Saturday evening. Just before lunch was served it was announced that the affair was given in honor of Miss Rose Boire, a bride of the week. All save the guest of honor knew of the purpose of the party and they came prepared to shower the bride-to-be with gifts. Miss Boire was the recipient of many pretty and useful gifts.

Gazette subscribers who are a year or more in arrears should not neglect to square up their subscription accounts before the close of the voting contest on Jan. 16. The postal authorities require that all old accounts be cleaned up, so why not square the account now and give the votes to one of the candidates for the piano? To induce the payment on of old accounts was one of the reasons why the Gazette decided to put on the contest. Immediately following the contest the mailing list will be revised and to comply with the postal regulations, statements will be sent to all in arrears. Better settle the account before that time, give one of the contestants a bunch of votes and help us get square with Uncle Sam.
